All-Out Aid To Britain Will Begin This Week

Mosquito Boat Transfer Likely To Start Vast Lend-Lease Plan

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

Large scale war aid for Britain, held up during weeks of debate on the lend-lease bill, was expected last night to start pouring forth this week. The Administration was awaiting only perfunctory completion of Congressional action on the authorizing measure before releasing orders that will initiate the gigantic supply undertaking.

Some of the 112 swift new "mosquito boats" and submarine chasers which this country now has on hand or on order were pictured as likely to lead the parade of American weapons across the Atlantic, a token of the vast stream of material aid, billions of dollars worth of it, that soon will be flowing to the war-harassed British Isles.

House concurrence tomorrow in "minor" Senate changes in the lend-lease legislation was forecast last night by House leaders of both parties, permitting the bill to be sent to the White House for President Roosevelt's signature, probably Wednesday.

That the President is ready to effectuate its provisions immediately has been made clear. In a series of conferences over the past two weeks he is said to have perfected arrangements for administration of the precedent-shattering law, and to have prepared to meet some of Britain's most pressing needs from available stocks of the American Army and Navy.

Huge Program Reported Ready

In addition, he is reported to have prepared a vast program that may reach $10,000,000,000 to carry out the determination that the national effort shall not fall short of complete effectiveness.

Only potential obstacle in the plan to complete Capitol Hill action on the bill tomorrow lay in the undisclosed attitude of the President to the Byrd amendment adopted by the Senate before passing the bill Saturday night. The amendment would permit the President to transfer to other countries armament produced with future appropriations, only with specific Congressional approval.

While expressing some concern over the amendment, Chairman Bloom, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said last night that he had concluded that the best course for the House was to concur in all the amendments and let the program get into action as quickly as possible, rather than send the bill to conference in an effort to eliminate the change.

Inventories Ready

He was joined by Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, the Republican floor leader, who contended that the amendments made the bill "much preferable" to the version passed earlier by the House, and predicted the House would concur in them.

As early as February 17 President Roosevelt, after Harry L. Hopkins returned from his visit to England, began a series of conferences designed to perfect arrangements for prompt administration of the bill upon its passage. The White House said that as a result of the talks "many of the administrative requirements will be set and ready to be put into operation" when enactment was achieved.

The President likewise is said to have complete lists of weapons and

Mystery Deepens

Medical Tests Absolve Janitor, 3 Employes At Apartment House

Interrogated and subjected to medical tests, the apartment house janitor and three other colored men were absolved of blame yesterday in the criminal assault and slaying of Mrs. Rose Simons Abramowitz, whose body was found Saturday in her apartment at 1901 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Detectives said these tests, compared with findings of an autopsy, proved that the comely 29-year-old bride of one month had not been attacked by the janitor, James E. Williams, 26, or any of three temporary employes at the building.

Williams, however, was held at First Precinct Station "until certain aspects of the case have been cleared up," detectives said.

Released after being questioned and tested were Arthur Theodore Gilmore, 23, of 515 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, a carpenter who had been working in the building's basement; William J. Ely, 35, who was janitor there until two months ago, and Walter Packe, 44, who helped Williams clean snow away from the building's entrance Saturday.

A police theory that Mrs. Abramowitz was strangled by a former suitor was weakened yesterday by word from relatives in Kansas City.

Mike Altman, an uncle, said the red-haired bride was "a serious girl who did not go out with boys" and "had no enemies" as far as he knew.

Her mother, Mrs. Esther Simons, who returned to Kansas City from a visit to Chicago yesterday to learn of the tragedy, said she knew of no one who would want to kill her

3 Quit Socialist Party in Split Over Aid Bill

Committeemen Favor Help to Britain; 'Gag' Is Charged

By Louis Stark

Three of the 13 members of the national executive committee of the Socialist Party have resigned in protest against the party's continued policy of isolationist opposition to large-scale material aid to Great Britain, as presented to the public by Norman Thomas, national chairman, and the official publications and statements of the party.

Those who resigned are Paul Porter, of Wisconsin, editor of Kenosha Labor and an active figure in the party for 15 years; Arthur G. McDowell, of Chicago, chairman of the Illinois section of the party and until recently the party's national labor and administrative secretary, and Leonard Woodcock, of Michigan, formerly Michigan head of the party.

In a signed statement to the members and friends of the party, the resigning members said that there had been a growing opposition to the official policy of the party since the Hitler invasion of Scandinavia and the Low Countries had wiped out the free labor and democratic socialist movement of all Europe

Hoover Plan Turned Down By Britain

Feeding Belgians Would Prolong War, Statement Asserts

Great Britain last night announced its rejection of Herbert Hoover's new plan to establish soup kitchens in Belgium in a trial effort to feed destitute peoples in Europe without aiding the German war effort.

In a statement issued by the British Embassy here, the London government reiterated its stand that the result of any such action "would be to prolong the war and to add in the long run to the sum of human misery," and it cited the suffering being undergone by the British civilian population "in the common cause."

The British, the statement said, "are confident that their Allies in the enslaved countries will scorn to shirk their share of the distresses which must be borne by each and every one if the common victory is to be assured."

Replying, after he had been provided in advance with a copy of the embassy statement, Mr. Hoover said:

"The stark fact is that millions of children, and the weak, are threatened with stunted bodies and death in the occupied lands unless relief is brought to them . . . It is no false humanity which saves the lives of countless children."

He declared the British rejection was prepared "before they were fully informed upon the undertakings we have now secured."

His plan, which contemplated the feeding of 1,000,000 destitute adults and 2,000,000 children at soup kitchens, "called for 1,000,000 bushels of breadgrains per month from German sources," to augment supplies from the United States.

Mr. Hoover reported that the Germans "have already shipped 800,000 bushels of breadgrains into Belgium," and added that "they are now initiating a shipment of 3,200,000 bushels."

"They also agree," the former President said, "that there shall be no interference with imports, no

Warmer weather, reaching a high of about 50 degrees in the early afternoon, and cloudy skies are predicted for today by the Weather Bureau.

No more snow is expected in the near future, the experts said, while hundreds of snowmen may expect an early death. There is some likelihood of rain tonight or tomorrow.

N.Y. Busmen to Strike; Decline LaGuardia's Mediation Offer

By the Associated Press

New York, March 9.—Snubbing a mediation offer by Mayor LaGuardia, the Transport Workers Union (C. I. O.) said today that 3,500 drivers manning 95 per cent of the buses in Manhattan and Queens would be called out on strike between midnight and 6 a. m. tomorrow.

The buses carry 875,000 fares daily.

The strike authorization was voted Saturday by bus drivers of the Fifth Avenue Coach Co. and the New York City Omnibus Corporation after rejection of union demands for a 25 per cent wage increase, a uniform 8-hour day and improved working conditions.

Union leaders passed up invitations to a hurried mediation conference in Mayor LaGuardia's office and Mathias Kearns, T. W. U. general organizer, told a membership meeting to "strike first and negotiate afterward."

"We're greater than any tin-pot mayor or anybody else," he said. "If Mr. LaGuardia thinks he's going to pull a blitzkrieg we'll handle him, too."

T. W. U. officials have been feuding with the mayor for a year, charging him with bad faith and promise-breaking in dealings with union members

Accusing the union of assuming a "threatening and defiant attitude," LaGuardia issued a statement declaring that "the insistence upon striking is a defiant refusal to mediate or arbitrate.

Greeks Winning Great Battle; Duce Visits Besieged Tepeleni; Russians Mass Near Turkey

Ankara Reported Split on Policy; Press Divided On War Issue

By the Associated Press

Belgrade, March 9.—Russia was said tonight to be concentrating troops in the Caucasus, near the Turkish frontier, as a precaution against German forces which appeared ready to smash into Greece and perhaps Turkey.

These reports said Soviet action, closely following strengthening of Red army forces on the Prut River frontier with German-occupied Rumania, is explained by a desire of the Moscow government to make sure of its defenses if Germany goes through Turkey.

Some diplomats expressed belief that the reported Caucasus concentrations might mean a Russian attempt to bluff Germany out of trying a move toward the Dardanelles by suggesting that the Red Army would move in to help Turkey in case of such a Nazi drive.

Some of the Turkish press, which usually reflects government opinion, stressed the nation's will for peace at all costs while other newspapers, equally subject to editorial direction by the government, continued a violent anti-German campaign.

Diplomatic sources interpreted this as meaning that Turkey has not yet made up her mind what to do in the face of Nazi armies massing in Bulgaria.

There have been persistent reports from Ankara that the Turkish government is divided, with some members holding out for appeasement and acceptance of Adolf Hitler's assurances.

Others have been reported fighting for assistance to Greece against any German attack.

Yugoslavia, another problematical factor in the Balkans, was expected to send her foreign minister, Aleksander Cincar-Markovic to Berlin or Berchtesgaden Tuesday to sign a treaty of friendship with Germany.

Italian Raider With Union Jack Is Sunk by British Cruiser

Five Salvoes From H.M.S. Leander Send Ramb I to Bottom of Indian Ocean

By the Associated Press

London, March 9.—A fast, powerfully armed Italian sea raider masquerading in the Indian Ocean as a British merchantman has been caught and sunk in a battle with a British cruiser, the admiralty announced today.

It identified the raider as the Ramb I, mounting four 4.7-inch guns and capable of 18½ knots.

When H. M. S. Leander, a 7,270-ton British cruiser of the New Zealand squadron, challenged the raider, the admiralty said, she hauled down her red ensign—the flag of British merchantmen—hoisted her true Italian colors and opened fire.

But the Leander fired five salvoes from her batteries of eight 6-inch guns and the Ramb I struck her flag.

Naval communiques previously had mentioned only German raiders in that vital area along Britain's empire lifeline between the British Isles and the Orient and capture of a Fascist surface raider caused general surprise in British naval circles.

In its story of the encounter, the admiralty said:

"Eleven officers and 89 men were picked up by H. M. S. Leander and are prisoners of war.

The Indian Ocean has been a stalking ground for naval prowlers since the beginning of the war and both sides have accused the other of sailing under false colors in those waters.

One objective of the British land offensive in East Africa, apparently, has been to seize Indian Ocean harbors which might serve Axis raiders as bases.

Several ships recently have disappeared on voyages taking them into the Indian Ocean and maritime circles count them as victims of Axis raiders.

Turkey Alert As Nazi Planes Land at Rhodes

War Time Measures Adopted; Civilian Evacuation Planned

By the United Press

Istanbul, March 9.—Appearance of German Stuka dive-bombers on the Island of Rhodes within sight of Turkey's southern coast and arrival of more Nazi troops at the Thracian frontier tonight hastened war-time measures bringing Turkey close to a state of emergency.

Air-raid tests were ordered for all civilian centers and preparations were understood to have been made to evacuate, in event of war, the entire 740,000 civilians of Istanbul, Turkey's metropolis on the Dardanelles barely 150 miles east of where Adolf Hitler's troops are massing.

Two Fierce Night Attacks Shake London

Spring Offensive Believed Under Way As Raid Fury Grows

By the Associated Press

London (Monday), March 10.—The German Luftwaffe smashed twice at London last night and early today and sent its bombers roaring over Britain in a spurt of widespread raiding such as Britons have not seen for weeks.

High explosive bombs thundered down in London in a four-hour raid before midnight. The all-clear after that heavy assault was brief, however. The Germans returned to the capital shortly after midnight.

The crash of antiaircraft guns meeting the Luftwaffe's challenger sounded even before the night's second alarm.

The second all clear of the night came about an hour after the alarm. Only the sound of the antiaircraft fire was heard during that brief alert.

A third alert for the night sounded about 3 a. m., but the all clear followed it quickly. No planes nor antiaircraft fire were heard here.

Apparently swinging into the long expected spring air blitz, the Germans flew over several coastal towns from Northeast Scotland to South Wales.

The southeast coast reported particularly heavy flights—following the usual aerial roadways from airdromes on the continent.

The raiders flew low over the capital despite stiff antiaircraft fire. They followed the pattern of Saturday night's raid in which Londoners were killed or wounded while they danced or dined.

Unheralded Visit

By Daniel DeLuce,
Associated Press Staff Writer

With Greek Forces on the Central Albanian Front, March 9.—Premier Mussolini made an unheralded inspection tour of Fascist defenses around the besieged City of Tepelini early last week, captured Fascist officers disclosed today.

These officers also declared two members of Mussolini's cabinet who left their posts in Rome to go to the front lines had been killed or wounded since the Greek drive began last Friday.

The cabinet members were identified by the captured men as Minister of Education Guiseppe Bottai and Undersecretary of Corporations Tullio Cianetti.

Both were said to have been in the ninth Julia division, known to have been decimated yesterday on the shell-scarred heights of a mountain.

The officers told of Mussolini's visit as follows:

Il Duce arrived at the Albanian front in an armored car and looked over the Italian positions shortly before the Greeks began their current offensive which smashed the Julia and another elite division, the Ferrara.

Mussolini passed through areas heavily bombed by the Greek air force.

He remained for some time in the village of Dragoti, near Tepelini,

Athens, March 9.—What appears to be developing into the bloodiest battle of the Albanian War is now raging on the central sector of the front, and despite contentions that Italy is employing the largest masses of troops used in any operation until now, the Greek armies are retaining the initiative.

Judging from Italian communiques admitting Greek attacks against the Eleventh Army Corps and from Royal Air Force communiques emphasizing persistent bombings of enemy positions in the Tepeleni area, it may be assumed that the operations now unfolding aim at the ultimate capture of the strongly fortified line based on the little Albanian town of Tepeleni. This is situated on a mountain top, flanked by cliffs that dominate the valley road to Valona and Berat.

In the northeast portion of this sector the Greeks are desperately forcing their way ahead and have captured a series of peaks, including a vitally important mountain.

The offensive is moving slowly forward behind a three-pronged attack in the center, according to the official spokesman, who emphasizes the importance of Italian defense works occupied and the value of military material already captured. The expert of the newspaper Proia says that the Italian casualties are without precedent in this war.

New Positions Gained

Tonight's communique would indicate that a very stiff resistance is meeting the Greek attacks, but that they continued with the successful capture of new mountain positions. The communique refers to determined enemy counterattacks, all of which were repelled with huge losses to the Italians. The operations were supported by the Greek air force.

The communique says that only 150 prisoners were captured today, which brings the total for the past 72 hours to about 2,300. Abandoned munitions supplies were taken by the Greek shock troops.

As the new push for Tepeleni develops, the British are maintaining powerful air support of Greek

Two Army Officers Bail Out as Plane Exhausts Fuel

Portland, Oreg., March 9 (U.P.).—An Army major, leader of a flight squadron, and a lieutenant parachuted from their fuel-less attack plane tonight hundreds of miles off their course from Salt Lake City to Hamilton Field, Calif., Army authorities reported.

Second Kansas City Girl Says Intruder Kissed Her in Sleep

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, March 9.—Her throat slashed and her skull crushed, Miss Lelia Adele Welsh, 24, attractive former school teacher and once runner-up in a college beauty contest, was found slain today in her bedroom.

Police said the killer had mutilated the body and carried away a portion which was found in a neighbor's yard five doors away in one of the city's best residential districts.

Chief clews were a stone mason's hammer and a butcher's boning knife, both bloodstained, left in the bedroom. A window of the first-floor room was open.

About 2 a. m., police reported, a 17-year-old girl who lives about 3 miles from the Welsh home was awakened by a man bending over her bed and kissing her. She screamed and the man fled.

Mrs. George W. Welsh, the slain woman's mother, discovered the body about 9:30 a. m. when she went to the bedroom to call her for breakfast. The body was covered and at first Mrs. Welsh thought her daughter was asleep.

Mrs. Welsh said the young woman returned home about 1:30 a. m. after attending a police circus. Some time in the night, she said she heard a noise like a thud, but she thought it came from the furnace and did not investigate.

Miss Welsh's escort, an oil company employe, said they stopped at a cocktail lounge after attending the circus. The couple had been dating for several years.

White Flags Ahead

British Occupy Gabre-Darra, 145 Miles Inside Ethiopia

By the Associated Press

Cairo, March 9.—Advancing at the rate of nearly 50 miles a day, British forces which invaded Ethiopia from conquered Italian Somaliland have occupied the town of Gabre-Darra on the vast arid Ogaden Plateau, the British Middle East command announced today.

At Gabre-Darra the British had struck 145 miles within Ethiopia from the Somaliland frontier and were about 240 miles from Harar.

These forces, military spokesmen said, apparently intend to cut the railway line which runs from the port of Djibuti on the Gulf of Aden to Addis Ababa.

The advance began March 5 shortly after the capture of Fer-Fer, an Italian Somaliland town just outside the Ethiopian frontier.

The troops followed the main road which runs from Mogadiscio, Somaliland capital, to Harar in central Ethiopia.

From Harar it is only a few miles to Diredawa on the railway. There the countr yis more hilly, but dispatches yesterday said the Italians were in full flight and that reconnaissance patrol pilots saw white flags dotting the rugged countryside 100 miles in advance of the British.

The swift British advance was accompanied, a communique said, by fresh successes of the native Ethiopian forces fighting the Italians in the Goljam district northwest of Addis Ababa.

These "patriots," the British said, were vigorously pursuing the

RAF Forging New Weapons For Luftwaffe

By the Associated Press

London, March 9.—Reliable British observers said tonight the R. A. F. is rushing work on a number of new tactical and technical tricks to hold off the German sky armadas expected to appear more frequently in the English skies as the spring opens up.

Although specific information is not permitted on new defense plans, they are generally described as matching ideas and initiative against the weight of greater German numbers until United States factories can send the thousands of planes Britain hopes to get under the lease-lend measure.

Major problems of the R. A. F. command are:

1. Beating the Germans to development of a method for handling great numbers of bombers and fighters, both day and night, in single formations while under fire.

2. Forcing the Germans to vacate their Channel air bases for fields deeper in occupied territory and Germany, thus reducing their striking power.

3. Springing one or two new air weapons on the Germans at the strategic moment.

4. Distributing available planes in the right proportions to match German air strength from Iceland to Greece and Africa.

Mass Attack Problem

One of the most urgent problems of air strategists is to devise methods of using great numbers of planes together without the formations becoming unwieldy.

The British say in air battles over Britain they have attacked German bombers without their high-flying fighter escorts knowing it.

Thus far in the war major air clashes have broken up into a series of dogfights, with the formations unable to work as such.

What the experts are hoping for is progress in organization to the point where the formations can be kept and act with the precision of shock cavalry of the old-time ground armies.

Both day and night attacks are being used by the British to make German airfields near the Channel coast untenable. At night twin-motored Blenheim fighter bombers hover over the German fields waiting to pounce upon German bombers as they return from raids. Many pilots have reported shooting down these unwary raiders as they were about to land.

By day, the British squadrons make patrol sweeps of the French coast, with fighting planes protecting the bombers.

The British declare they have been encouraged by the refusal of German interceptors to give battle on these sweeps.

Secret Weapons Secret

There is strict silence among authorities on any new air weapons in store, but one respected expert, Maj. Oliver Stewart, declared:

"We have only begun to develop the means of achieving technical surprise," whereas German secret weapons "have mostly been exploited and exploded."

The British are said to have put new heavy bombers—four-motored short Stirlings and two-motored Avro Manchesters—into service before the Germans reinforced their Dornier 215's, Heinkel 111's and Junkers 88's with newer craft.

In disposition of their available air force, the British have their biggest problem in the Balkans.

The Germans are reported to have about 1,000 planes there (reports from Sofia, Bulgaria, have mentioned 1,700 in Bulgaria alone), including Messerschmitt fighters, twin-engined bombers and Junkers dive bombers.

Two Night Raids Shake London

Many incendiary bombs fell in residential districts and volunteer fire watchers snuffed them out. Nurses aided the volunteers when some of the missiles fell in the garden of a maternity hospital.

Raiders also were reported near several coastal towns from northeast Scotland to South Wales.

Over the southeast coast they flew for hours over several points, alternating their flights from high to low altitudes to offset antiaircraft fire.

It was the heaviest activity reported in the southeast area for some time.

Many flares were dropped in one Thames estuary area.

Bombs also were dropped on two south coast areas.

The sirens sounded in London around 8:30 p. m. Hardly had the sound died away when the heavier drone of planes and the roar of antiaircraft guns in various sections of London were heard in full cry.

Other Areas Attacked

The London raid followed widely scattered daylight attacks on other parts of Britain.

The air ond home security ministries said bombs were dropped on a few points in southeast England, with no serious casualties and "very little danger," but that a esmall number of people was killed when a single German aircraft bombed an eastern England section.

The raiders, apparently coming over in a continuous stream, dropped high-explosive bombs in one London district.

A fire started in one area of the capital but was soon extinguished.

At least six waves, one of 30 planes flying in diamond formation, crossed the coast at Dover between dawn and noon, and brought intense antiaircraft fire and other defense activity. At least one raider was reported downed.

A hospital was destroyed at a town near the Thames Estuary, and London had a brief morning alarm.

In early evening one raider flew over a coast town and machine-gunned the roofs of houses and dropped bombs which partially demolished a house. The raider made to sea under the intense fire of trawlers.

Apparently fearing intense raiding was in store for the city soon, London's civil defense commissioners ordered all the capital's authorities to report on their preparedness to deal with fire, and warned fire-watching squads that they "must be more completely organized."

Nazi Invasion Will Fail, Says British Chief

Copyright by New York Times

North Britain Headquarters, March 9.—Invasion of England is Adolf Hitler's only chance of winning the war, yet any such attempt is bound to fail, Lieut.-Gen. Sir Ronald Adam, commander in chief of Britain's northern command and as such responsible for guarding Britain's northern coast, said today.

"Any attempt will be four times more difficult than it would have been last autumn," asserted Gen. Adam. "Invasion is an appalling task and if everybody keeps their heads—as I feel sure they will—he cannot win."

Hitler will try invasion if he tries at all, before next winter, Gen. Adam said, adding many people have the wrong idea of what any invasion attempt would mean. They feel that such an event would affect the whole country directly, with regular soldiers and the home guard firing at Germans everywhere and all normal activity ceasing for several days, after which it would be all over.

This is most unlikely in Gen. Adam's opinion. He thinks that the Nazi forces probably would make feints at various points, followed by an all-out attack somewhere else. The remainder of the country outside this area would be comparatively normal except for bombing.

Gen. Adam believes that the Germans might seek to create confusion by giving the impression that they were using parachute troops clad in British army or home guard uniforms, but that the use of such units would be kept to a minimum, if used at all, because of the great difficulties involved.

The manner in which the Home Guard has progressed with its British civilian members and keeping up their work during winter months, was a source of great satisfaction and surprise, Gen. Adam said. Their efficiency is at a high peak, while the necessary equipment has been furnished, he said.

While the Home Guard will have a difficult and important role to play in protecting towns or villages from invaders, the real job of routing out and crushing the enemy will fall to tanks and armored vehicles, Gen. Adam feels. Tanks and more tanks are the best answer to any invasion, he said, adding that these are now being produced by Britain in large numbers.

26,538 Losses Admitted by Rome

Rome, March 9 (AP).—At least 26,538 soldiers were killed, wounded or reported missing in fighting during February in Albania and Africa, the Italian high command reported tonight.

The dead included 2,386 Italians and 14 Albanians on the Greek front; 127 Italians in East Africa, 68 in North Africa, 35 in the Navy and 37 in the air corps. The wounded on the Greek front was put at 4,841 and the missing at 5,590 Italians and 42 Albanians. Those missing in North Africa totaled 12,280, the communique said.

Arms Speedup Plan Effected In Britain

By the United Press

London, March 9.—Great Britain, cheering passage of the American lend-lease bill as a major blow to Adolf Hitler's hopes of victory, tonight revealed a huge program to speed up production of ships and munitions.

The ministry of labor announced a new order enabling quick mass transfers of skilled labor from one spot to another and at the same time turned over to the admiralty control over all labor in British shipyards.

The new program is designed to keep Britain's war production apace with the flow of arms and materials from the "arsenal of democracy" provided for in the U. S. lend-lease bill and to make Britain secure against Hitler's threatened "big attack" this spring.

Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin, speaking at Newcastle, said the passage in Congress of the lend-lease bill means that the United States is "going in" with Britain to turn out ships, planes and guns.

These arms will show their worth, he said, in the "Battle of the Atlantic" which he, like First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander, says is now at hand.

As part of the production speed-up, Bevin said in his Newcastle speech, the government wants 100,000 women volunteers for shell filling in the arms plants before industrial registration comes into effect.

The new order means that men can be taken off work projects at a moment's notice and put on a rush job without any red tape. It also enables the shipyards to lend men to each other for a few days.

Serb-Soviet Amity Due With Nazi Pact

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, March 9.—Yugoslavia and Russia are expected to issue a joint declaration of friendship simultaneously this week with the signature of a Yugoslav-German nonaggression pact and statement of amity with Germany, it was learned tonight.

Premier Cvetkovitch and Dr. Cincar-Markovitch, the Yugoslav foreign minister, will go to Berlin Tuesday to sign the pact of nonaggression and the declaration of Yugoslav-German friendship, according to high diplomatic quarters.

Announcement of the Berlin-Belgrade pact probably will be made Wednesday through the German official DNB and the Yugoslav official Avala news agencies, it was understood tonight.

The Belgrade-Moscow declaration, according to diplomatic sources here, has been scheduled for some time, but has been held in abeyance for the proper moment. "This," said a neutral diplomat tonight, "is it."

The popular Agrarian Party leader, Milan Gavrilovitch, is said to be primarily responsible for the expected Belgrade-Moscow declarations for, as Minister to Moscow, he has consistently improved Yugoslav relations with the Soviets.

One American businessman who has spent nearly a decade in the Balkans, like the rest of the American colony here, snorted disbelief of widespread reports in the Axis press that President Roosevelt is seeking to intervene in Yugoslav affairs.

The American Minister to Yugoslavia, Arthur Bliss Lane, flatly denied today that he had made any representations whatsoever to Prince Paul or any other Yugoslav government personality during the past few days.

The steady mobilization has plucked young men and old men from every walk of life in the capital.

Today was Yugoslavia's own "M-day," although war has not yet come to this country. All men from 22 to 50 were called to central locations in Belgrade and the provincial capitals and assigned to specific duties in case of war.

Nevertheless, the people in the streets and Belgrade's 1,100 cafes and restaurants were talking peace tonight rather than war. Rumors of the forthcoming compromise have reached all ears. The press talks of nothing but peace and "understanding" between Belgrade and Berlin.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 9.—Eight boys in his district were given a chance to enter the U. S. Naval Academy when Representative Randolph appointed the following to take entrance examinations:

Richard Hawvermale, of Berkeley Springs, principal; Charles B. Snapp, of Martinsburg, first alternate; Carl Mans, of Elkins, second alternate; Richard P. Russell, of Charles Town, third alternate.

Herman Nash, of Parsons, principal; Alexander Carey, of Martinsburg, first alternate; Norman Kephart, of Keyser, second alternate, and Henry Peyton, of Charles Town, third alternate.

Mrs. Walker Files New Divorce Plea

Key West, Fla., March 9 (INS).—Unsuccessful in her first attempt to obtain a divorce, the former Betty Compton tonight planned to bring more serious charges against New York's former mayor James J. Walker in a second appeal to the court.

Mrs. Walker filed a new divorce petition yesterday, describing her husband as a "tormentor" and a "bickerer," and stating that he had an ungovernable temper. During outbursts of anger, he used profane language both at home and in public, she charged.

Thrill a Minute Recorded In Log of British Balloon Boat

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer.

London, March 9.—Towing a balloon at the end of a cable attached to a boat sounds like one of the dullest jobs in the world. It isn't—in the English Channel where the balloon is supposed to keep German bombers from diving on convoys.

Here is an extract from the log of a balloon barrage officer in charge of such a "balloon boat."

"9:50 a. m. Mine sighted, port bow, necessitating change of course. This followed by sighting others, we eventually zigzagging through 23. Obviously they had broken loose during storm.

"11:15 a. m. A ME-109 (German fighter) made two machine gun attacks. Bad shooting, no hits. Attacked by four dive-bombers. Bombs hit beside ship.

18:56 (6:56 p. m.). Vivid flashes, French coast.

"21:43 (9:43 p. m.). Enormous flashes, French coast, followed 80 seconds later by heavy explosions.

"22:24 (10:24 p. m.). Antiaircrafe fire from French coast.

"02:20 (a. m., next day): This has been written subsequently as things moved too fast to record. The place became like a fireworks display. Everybody in the world who had anything to set off seemed to be setting it off. Tracers, scarlet in the night, were followed by bullets which looked green. The trouble was a quarter of a mile astern and we kept dead quiet.

"A motor torpedo boat brigade put up flares all over the place. Presently we heard a sound like 'phew!' almost next door. It didn't find the mark. Finally the fireworks died down.

"I heaved a sigh of relief. Then on the starboard two flares came down, lighting us like day. Followed a sickening thud. Then cries of 'there she is and machine-gunning!'

"This looks bad. About 30 junkers 87s with an escort of ME 109s arrived. The procedure is simple. The fighters try to down the balloons in flames. And the dive bombers follow in platoons. Whether they hit I don't know, but they suddenly left. Our fighters got a couple of junkers and possibly a third.

ground operations. For the past 48 hours bomber formations protected by fighters have roared across the heights shielding this key position and Fascist troop concentrations of motor transports in the entire Tepeleni area. Yesterday's R. A. F. attack also damaged communications along the Glava-Buzi Road.

The Greek spokesman stated tonight that the Italians had called up plentiful reinforcements after the first wave of Greek attacks had decimated the defensive units and that enemy counterattacks had been launched. All have been repelled and the Italians are withdrawing to the west.

Julia Division Shattered

No estimates are available as to the extent of enemy casualties, but it is said that the Julia division of Alpini, which has come into prominence several times since October, has been severely damaged. The spokesman claimed that one of its battalions—the Suzza—"has been annihilated and ceases to exist."

According to the spokesman, this battalion entered the battle yesterday and all its members were killed or wounded except for 378 soldiers and 13 officers taken prisoner. The latter include a Maj. Carnera who, as far as can be ascertained tonight, is in no way connected with the famous pugilist.

The spokesman had previously asserted that the eighth and ninth regiments of the Julia divisions have been destroyed. He said that at one point the Italians tried four counterattacks yesterday against a 1,700-meter height occupied by the Greeks, but were beaten back with "innumerable" casualties.

The Proia says seven counter-attacks were initiated by the enemy at another point and that all were repelled, leaving the ravines and mountainsides covered with corpses and resounding with the calls of the wounded.

The Hestia speaks of the occupation of a mountainous massif which is the "bastion of the Italian defense in the central sector, and which may be considered as a most important success."

Shell Fire Heavy

A Southeast Enland Coast Town, March 9 (AP). — Heavy and rapid gunfire shook this town tonight and echoed across the hazy Dover Strait, leading observers to believe British warships were shelling the German-held French ports.

Only two gun flashes midway between the coasts were observed from this side.

An R. A. F. communique said British bombers attacked the harbor of Tripoli in western Libya Friday night and hit railway lines there, as well as airdromes in Tripolitania.

(An Italian communique said Italian planes bombed the Cirenaican capital of Bengasi now in British hands, and a nearby British air base.)

(The German high command said German planes bombed British armored units east of Alen El Gad in Cirenaica.)

R. A. F. bombers, the communique said, also "inflicted considerable damage" on the road which connects the Eritrean railway town of Cheren, under siege for several weeks, with Asmara, Eritrean capital, and that South African fighting planes machine-gunned and burned out two oil dumps south of Asmara.

(The Italian communique said a detachment of Italians had "attacked and broken up" a British force ouside Cheren.)

Navy Discloses East Coast 'Frontier' Plan

Copyright by New York Times

New York, March 9.—Establishment of a North Atlantic coastal frontier, a far-reaching emergency naval organization designed to coordinate all the Navy's shore and harbor defense activities from Cape Hatteras to Newfoundland, was disclosed today by Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, new commandant of the Third Naval Distrcit and of the coastal frontier.

Admiral Andrews, who recently came to New York from duty with the Pacific fleet, was guarded in his explanation of the new organization. It was learned that in event of national emergency or in wartime the new command would not only coordinate naval activities in the area but also would supervise commercial shipping and the operation of convoys.

Outlining briefly the Navy Department's plans for the incorporation into one command of all the defense activities of the four naval districts in the area, Admiral Andrews said it would also be one of the duties of his new command to cooperate with Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding general of the First Army, with headquarters at Governors Island. The two commanders will work together in organizing the land, sea and air zones into a joint military-naval area of coordinated defenses.

Similar to World War Plan

Many of the details of the new organization have still to be developed both by the Army and the Navy, officers said. It was learned, however, that in basic principle the form of the coordinated command would be similar in many respects to the organization established during the World War for protection of convoy and other military and naval movements.

Each naval district now has its own local defense force of planes and ships, including converted yachts, patrol vessels, minesweepers, destroyers and other large warships. These will now be grouped under the command of Admiral Andrews. In addition to these separate district forces, the new commandant will also have his own force of ships and planes to transfer between the various districts and ports as the occasion of emergency might require, it was explained. The number of planes and ships involved in the set-up was not divulged.

New York was chosen as the headquarters of the organization.

Takes Command Today

Since the Navy's shore activities and fleet movements are under separate commands, Admiral Andrews will work in cooperation with the commander of the Atlantic fleet when the activities of ships at sea on neutrality patrol cover the zone included in the coordinated defense plan.

In cooperating with the Army on the same defenses, the Navy will restrict its use of authority to those zones normally falling under naval jurisdiction, but will keep in constant touch with military officials to insure maximum joint protection of the entire area. The first Army, under Gen. Drum, is the principal authority in Newfoundland, as it is in Bermuda, but where the respective spheres of Army and Navy defense activities "overlap" the problems involved will be solved by cooperative action.

Admiral Andrews announced that he would assume command of the third naval district tomorrow at 10 a. m. at ceremonies to be held aboard the old battleship, Prairie State, on the Hudson River at 136th Street.

any British expenditionary force attempting to land in Turkey or British warships trying to move through the Dardanelles into the Black Sea, injected fresh tension into the Turkish situation.

The number of bombers based on Rhodes, 75 miles west of the Italian air base of Castelrosso which British forces seized recently and held for a few days, was not disclosed.

Test air raid alarms were sounded Saturday in Alexandretta. Similar tests will be carried out this week in other cities.

The ministry of defense extended working hours to speed up production in arms plants. The big Karabuk Steel Works, an important armament production unit, announced that 1,000 more workers had been called in.

The ministry of health began to accumulate medicines and other pharmaceutical supplies.

The authoritative newspaper Tan said that a law regulating use of public transport facilities in connection with the possibility of landing British forces on Turkish territory was to have been introduced in the national assembly this week but was shelved in conformity with the government's desire to maintain a strictly "correct" attitude toward Germany.

In this connection, the pro-British newspaper Yeni Sabah was closed down for one day for expressing contempt for the German Army.

A steady stream of refugees from Greece and from Nazi-occupied Balkan territories poured into Istanbul Sunday.

Premier Dr. Refik Saydam was expected to make a speech before the National Assembly next Wednesday but it was believed that he will deal only in passing with foreign policy and that most of the assembly's session, opening Monday, will deal with budget matters.

A more important clew to Turkey's international policy may come when Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu makes a secret speech Tuesday before the People's Party leaders, it was said.

Lease Bill Makes Roosevelt Absolute Dictator, Nazis Say

By International News Service

Berlin, March 9.—Nazi circles contended tonight that enactment of the lease-lend bill signals the rise of President Roosevelt to a role of "absolute dictator" waging an undeclared war on Europe in order to sustain the British empire.

Predicting the "twilight of democracy" in America, these commentators said the "all out aid to Britain" policy will not alter Germany's determination to destroy the world power of the British.

They recalled Chancellor Hitler's speech of January 30 in which the Fuehrer warned that American ships or convoys entering the war zone will be attacked just as British and other "enemy" vessels have been torpedoed and bombed.

Official Word Later

German government quarters decided to withhold official comment on the Senate's passage of the lease-lend measure, until Roosevelt signs it.

But unofficial though well-informed Nazi sources hinted that an answer to the American action will come shortly in the form of the expansion and strengthening of the Italo-German-Japanese alliance with the addition of "new members."

The Nazi attitude toward the question of whether Germany and the United States are to come into more direct conflict was expressed in the words: "It is up to America to choose her own course."

"Too Late" to Save England

The argument was reiterated that it is "too late" to save England, no matter how much American aid is forthcoming."

Henceforth, the relations between the Reich and the United States are expected to assume an aspect of strict formality, with a pronounced reserve on the part of the Germans toward America and Americans in Europe, placing the latter in the category of unwelcome guests to be "tolerated" in the Axis countries so long as they remain "within bounds."

By the Associated Press

The Rome radio, commenting on Senate passage of the aid to Britain bill, last night took the view that American aid would be slow in forthcoming, and that passage of the bill was a foregone conclusion.

"And for this reason the Axis powers already have taken appropriate measures," the commentator said in a broadcast heard by C. B. S.

During the day the Rome radio reported passage of the bill and described its provisions at some length, but without comment.

The Greeks and Chinese, fighting wars against the Italian and Japanese members of the tripartite pact, hailed the measure.

In Chungking, official Chinese circles said the end of the Senate legislative battle freed American armed forces to establish closer relations with the "allies," and to lend concrete support to any part of the globe.

Chinese Claim 2 Cities Retaken In Kwantung Area

Hongkong (Monday), March 10 (AP).—Chinese troops in vigorous counterattacks recaptured the Kwangtung Province cities of Tinpak and Shuitung from Japanese soldiers, Chinese sources reported today, in direct opposition to Japanese reports that the area had been evacuated quietly by their men yesterday.

The Chinese version was that the Japanese fled to their warships, suffered some 200 casualties and lost a large quantity of war material.

The Chinese also said Japanese troops in the Pakhoi area on the South China coast were routed.

The Japanese, on the other hand, reported last night that they had withdrawn from the several points on the coast where so-called important landings were made only last week.

Fire Destroys Arsenal Building

Philadelphia, March 9 (AP).—Fire destroyed a storage building at the Frankford arsenal early today—one month to the day since a companion building went up in flames.

The blaze raged for two hours in the one-story brick building which an Army spokesman said contained magnesium and other chemicals used in making powder. Cause of the fire was unknown. An investigation has been ordered.

Guards at the arsenal gates refused to permit uniformed police and a police ambulance to enter the reservation during the fire and halted city firemen until each had been identified by Battalion Chief James Eckert.

Vast British Aid to Begin This Week

materials urgently required by the British, and inventories of such articles available here for transfer. Long range bombers, ships, field guns, machine guns and ammunition are said to be among the British needs.

His prepassage conferences have been with Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Knox, Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff; Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations; Budget Director Harold D. Smith and Sir Hugh Dowling.

Authorization to transfer up to $1,300,000,000 worth of existing war materials is contained in the legislation, and Administration officials are said to be prepared to release about $500,000,000 worth of such help soon.

Eventual transfer of more American destroyers was considered likely, though apparent disagreement within the Administration on whether any could now be spared, in addition to the 50 already traded for American base sites on British possessions in this hemisphere, apparently is blocking any immediate transfer of such craft.

Antiwar Drive Begins

The experimental program of construction of a "mosquito boat" fleet, begun last year, was reported to have progressed rapidly. The craft being produced include two general classes, one from 70 to 80 feet in length, the other from 110 to 165 long. A few with a length of only 54 feet also are under experiment.

While work thus went forward on actually meeting some of the British needs, Senate isolationists who opposed the lend-lease bill, continued fighting, with an announcement that some of them would stump the country against administrative acts that might involve the country in war.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, said the group would meet in his office today and map their program to keep the President "from plunging the country into war."

"We are going to carry on a crusade from one end of the country to the other," Wheeler said, "to counteract the propaganda that is going to be unloaded right away for 'all-out' aid to Britain that would take us into war."

2 Soldiers Killed, 14 Hurt at Fire When Wall Falls

Atlanta, March 9 (AP).—Two soldiers were killed and 14 injured at Fort McPherson early today when a wall collapsed while they were fighting fire in an abandoned stable building.

The dead were Tommy Moffett, of Homestead, Fla., and Ottice R. Simpson, of Atlanta. Of the injured, only one, Second Lieut. James E. Cox, of Atlanta, was hurt seriously.

Cause of the fire was not determined. The only occupant of the building—a dog recuperating from an operation—was rescued.

Roosevelt Now Can Run War, Says Sen. Taft

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, one of the lend-lease bill's major opponents, yesterday said the President has put himself in a position to run the war.

"But," he added, "I do not think that he can make a success of that job if he undertakes it."

"I would far rather leave it to the British to run their own war," he told approximately 200 men and women at a "College Men For Defense First" meeting in the Washington Hotel.

The audience was said to represent graduates and undergraduates of more than 50 leading American colleges and universities. They applauded and cheered Taft at length.

Calls for Defenses

Richard A. Moore, New York lawyer, Yale graduate and chairman of the meeting, fixed the keynote. He said American democracy can be saved "only if we build impregnable defenses at home and stay out of war abroad."

George Baldwin, head of the group's chapter at Princeton University and president of the Whig-Clio Debating Society there, observed that from a policy of aid to Britain short of war the Nation has progressed to aid of Britain at risk of war.

Public opinion, Baldwin stated, is now the only check on the President's actions. Taft, a moment earlier, had commended the organization, urging it and all citizens, to watch foreign policy closely as a safeguard against "rash steps."

'Can' Make Any Treaty"

He expressed belief that a majority of citizens are interested in building America's defenses "and not in maintaining a balance of power on the European continent."

Taft said that under the enacted bill the President can make any kind of treaty he chooses and can send the American fleet where it might become involved in action.

He said he believed that many who voted for the bill as a peace measure will "find they have been badly mistaken."

Joseph P. Kennedy, jr., son of the former Ambassador to Great Britain, had expected to attend the meeting, but wired that his work at Harvard University prevented, it was stated.

Hoover's Reply to British Rejection of Plan to Feed Belgians

The text, in part, of former President Hoover's statement on the plan to feed destitute Belgians, follows:

. . . We wish no misunderstanding of our sympathy with the British cause, or that we have any doubt that the original plight of the people in the small democracies is due to the German invasion.

We believe that the British statement was prepared before they were fully informed upon the undertakings we have now secured. And, in this light, our full proposals in no way impair the British war effort. At the same time they uphold the ideals of democracy to the world and these little nations. They would save the lives of multitudes of children and others.

Our recent surveys show that the food situation in the occupied democracies is far worse than the British statement would seem to indicate. The Belgian ration is already down to 960 calories—or less than half necessary to maintain life. Supplies to maintain even that will be exhausted this month. Reports show many children already so weak that they cannot attend school.

We do not agree that there are enough supplies on the continent to care for these people, or that the supplies will ever be evenly distributed. Devastation by the German army and the blockade combined have caused considerable shortage of bread supplies everywhere, but more acutely a shortage of fats. No people—American, Belgian or British—can survive without fats, meaning meat, dairy products, vegetable oils, etc. British reports state that the fat supply of the continent as a whole has been reduced 40 per cent. Our reports show over 50 per cent. And, as the Germans are not likely to reduce their fat supplies below fighting levels, the shortage falls even more violently upon the occupied democracies. And the Belgians are the first to be exhausted.

While the occupied democracies formerly secured a large part of their fat supplies directly by imports from overseas, or indirectly through import of feed, we make no contention that blockade is not a part of war measures. However, the stark fact is that millions of children, and the weak, are threatened with stunted bodies and death in the occupied lands—unless relief is brought to them.

. . . We proposed a new and limited experiment in Belgium, by which 1,000,000 destitute adults and 2,000,000 children should be fed by soup kitchens. This called for 1,000,000 bushel of breadgrains per month from German sources, 20,000 tons of fats and soup materials, and special food for children through the blockade. If this experiment were successful then it could be extended to other democracies when their inevitable food crises approached.

In January we submitted our plan to the Belgian government in London, and on January 30 they urged it strongly upon the British government. At the same time we began negotiations with the Germans, who responded on February 26, and their undertaking was transmitted to the Belgian government.

On their part the Germans have already shipped 800,000 bushels of bread grains into Belgium. They are now initiating a shipment of 3,200,000 bushels. They also agree that there shall be no interference with imports, no requisition or absorption of native food; that ships will be free of attack; that a neutral commission shall supervise relief on the ground and see that agreements are complied with. We do not believe that the effect of this undertaking has yet been fully considered by the British government.

A further part of the plan is that only ships not available to the British shall be used, and that the cost of imports from overseas is to be paid by the exiled Belgian government. Thus no burdens are imposed upon either America or Britain.

These arrangements answer British objections:

1. No food goes directly or indirectly to the Germans. If the Germans furnish their part of the supplies, it will amount to more food values sent into Belgium than they could possibly have taken from Belgium, or fed to their own army. The effect is to reduce, not increase, German supplies.

2. It would, in fact, increase their transportation burdens by the amount of imports.

3. If the guarantees and contribution of food from the Germans are not carried out, then the whole operation would be at once withdrawn. If the guarantees are violated, then the time by which the war could possibly be extended can be measured. The maximum benefit Germany could obtain would be seizure of the imported stocks—and those on hand at any one time in Belgium would not feed Germany for one whole day.

4. It would not be furnishing food to persons working for the Germans, since it is limited to the destitute (and thus necessarily the unemployed) and to children.

5. It would not be using ships otherwise available for the British.

6. The plan could result in no military loss to the British, or military gain to the Germans. Gen. John J. Pershing said on February 16: "From my own war experience and some knowledge of problems involved, I have every confidence that the salvation of these people can be worked out along the lines proposed by Mr. Hoover, without military loss or benefit to either side."

Admiral William V. Pratt, who dealt with the blockade in the last war and long commanded thhe United States fleet, also said, "I have no hesitation in saying that this aid can be given under Mr. Hoover's proposals without any damage to Great Britain. Taking the long view of the future of constructive forces in the world, and America's relation to it, it is of vital importance to America that Mr. Hoover's plans be carried through. Only America will be able to meet this emergency. . . ."

"The purpose of this committee is to raise a voice for those millions of helpless among the little nations who have been our life-long national friends. . . . It is no false humanity which saves the lives of countless children, and the committee has every evidence that millions of Americans wish it to continue its efforts toward finding a solution by which the lives of these helpless people may be saved."

Text of British Embassy Position on Food Plan

The text of the British Embassy statement on the Hoover plan to feed Belgians follows, in part:

. . . Although convinced that the vast majority of the American people are determined to do nothing which would impair the war effort of the British people and their Allies, His Majesty's government nevertheless recognize that this great body of opinion feels itself unable entirely to dismiss the possibility of giving relief unless it can be satisfied that such action is, in fact, incompatible with its desire for a speedy British victory and the release of Europe from enemy domination.

For these reasons, His Majesty's government have considered afresh the whole problem of relief, including the proposal for the institution of soup kitchens in Belgium . . .

The blockade is not a food blockade nor an oil blockade, but a blockade directed against the whole economic war machine of the enemy. It is intended to deprive him of imported goods, to drive him into using in uneconomic ways goods which he possesses or produces, to aggravate his transport difficulties and to render as costly and burdensome as possible distribution of supplies within the areas which he controls and utilizes for his military operations and war potential. Every import of foodstuffs into an occupied territory conflicts directly with one or other of these objectives.

Just as the blockade extends over the whole range of supplies and transport, so it must extend over the whole range of countries overrun by the enemy. The Germans are attempting to organize these territories to form an integral part of their war machine. . . . Their surplus products are taken by the enemy and this helps to create the disparity which exists today between rations in Germany and those allowed to the civilian populations in the occupied territories. All these territories are used by the enemy as bases for his attacks on Britain by sea and air. Railways and roads which should be used to carry food from one part of the occupied area to another are devoted instead to the transport of troops and of fuel and bombs for the campaign against Britain. . . .

"As a result, surplus products of one district are prevented from moving freely to others where they are urgently required . . . Every arrival of foodstuffs into any one part of the occupied area thus constitutes a direct encouragement to the German technique of exploitation. Unfortunately, therefore, there can be no doubt that the admission of relief supplies would benefit the enemy. It is not simply a question of ensuring that any supplies admitted are consumed only by the subject peoples for whom they are intended, but a question of whether the German economy is thereby relieved in another direction.

"The British government has already promised full support for the relief of distress in these territories the moment they are freed of German occupation.

It may be urged that even although it is not possible to devise acceptable conditions, the duty of feeding the hungry overrules all other considerations. This is an argument which the British government must respect, although they cannot accept it. It presupposes firstly that there is and will be hunger on a serious scale; and secondly, that hunger is a greater evil and one more urgent to be remedied than the prolongation of the war, the continued subjection of many nations to German oppression and tyranny, and the wounding and killing by the most barbarous means of countless thousands of people. But there need be no scarcity amounting to famine and starvation if the enemy would distribute his supplies equitably, and devote to the welfare of his conquered peoples a tithe of the ingenuity which he devotes to his attack on the civilian population of Britain or of the solicitude shown to his own armies of occupation. . . .

The British government do not deny that the oppressed peoples are likely to suffer some degree of hardship and privation and they are deeply moved by the sufferings of their Allies. The civilian population of Great Britain itself is suffering and has suffered many thousands of casualties from the brutal attacks which the German Air Force has directed against it.

The British people are, moreover, now deliberately subjecting themselves to privations; they are lowering their own standard of living to a minimum so that more and more shipping space can be allotted to the implements of war. They are doing all this in the common cause and they are confident that their Allies in the enslaved countries will scorn to shirk their share of the distress which must be borne by each and every one if the common victory is to be assured.

Even if it were admitted that immediate shortages of food were likely, the British government would regard it as false humanitarianism to agree to the admission of foodstuffs to the areas concerned, knowing as they do that the result of this action would be to prolong the war and to add in the long run to the sum of human misery.

. . . They (the British government) regard it as their primary duty to rid Europe of Nazi tyranny and to restore the conquered peoples to physical and spiritual freedom. They cannot allow themselves to be deflected from this goal and, in full realization of their responsibility, they therefore feel obliged to reaffirm their determination not to permit the blockade to be weakened or undermined by the admission of supplies from overseas into any territory under enemy control.

Christian Way Must Be Saved, Rally Is Told

"Civilization is a race between Christian education and catastrophe," Dr. Harlie L. Smith, of Indianapolis, executive secretary of higher education for the Disciples of Christ, told a rally of the Christian churches of the Washington area yesterday.

"In America Christianity has been pushed to the periphery of our society, and if we are to save democracy we must save the Christianity that it gave to us."

Declaring that education alone has failed to be the answer to world problems, Dr. Smith said, "If we are to have a continuation of America, we must retain the independent church colleges scattered throughout the country."

Dr. R. B. Montgomery, president of Lynchburg College, and Lieut. Col. Walter B. Zimmerman, an adviser to the college's Washington committee, spoke briefly on the work of the institution.

Dr. R. H. Miller, pastor of the National City Christian Church, where the rally of the 18 churches was held, presided. Music was by the vesper choir of the Ninth Street Christian Church under the direction of Joseph Harrison.

With two days remaining before the close of the drive, only $76,628 has been reported in the $100,000 campaign.

Farm . . . eeting FCA Loans . . . ead of Date

Gov. A. G. Black of the Farm Credit Administration announced yesterday that more loans were repaid in advance by farmers during 1940 than in any other year since creation of the FCA.

Bringing to more than 141,000 the number of loans paid back ahead of schedule, since 1933, farmers and ranchers in 1940 paid 30,300 Federal Land Bank and Commissioner loans in advance of their due date, Black said.

U.S. Emergency Shipping Plan To Aid Defense

By Leland C. Speers
Copyright by New York Times

The program to coordinate seagoing shipping to make the most efficient use of American tonnage will soon be a main cog in the shipping problem facing the United States Maritime Commission.

The division of emergency shipping was created last week to handle emergency shipping problems with respect to ocean transportation.

When Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the maritime commission, was named coordinator of American ocean shipping, he lost no time in preparing for prompt and efficient action. Acting under direct supervision of the President, Admiral Land organized the new division which, among other things, is charged with the maintenance of liaison with the Navy, War and State Departments, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Office of Production Management, and all other departments and agencies of the Government. It will supervise sale, charter, transfer, reallocation, reassignment or requisition of all tonnage in connection with transporting cargoes essential to national defense.

A survery now is under way by the division involving various groups of ocean lines to determine what adjustment can be made to provide space for materials such as manganese and chrome ores, Australian wool, copper, tin and nitrates.

At the present time 44 steamship companies in foreign trade are registered under the American flag. The lines go to China, Japan, Philippines, South Africa, East and West Africa, South and Central America, Australia, New Zealand, Lisbon, West Indies and other trades outside the prohibited war zones.

Under existing conditions a large number of ships have been operating as "one way" cargo carriers.

For example, ships in the Chilean nitrate trade have been carrying full cargoes from Chile but returning in ballast.

The plan is for these ships to carry cargoes both ways. This will be brought about by using the ships to carry supplies and defense materials to the Panama Canal, Puerto Rico, and other insular possessions as well as to foreign ports.

Part of the plan calls for routing Army transports and other ships operating to the Philippines to take on rubber, tin and other cargoes on their return voyages to the United States. Heretofore as a rule they have carried no cargoes homeward. Other schedules would provide more cargo space for defense materials from African and other foreign ports.

Mussolini Visits Albanian Front and his presence was made known to virtually all officers at the front.

The two cabinet men were commanding troops, it was said. Bottai was chief of a battalion of the Ninth Julia division and Cianetti was captain of an artillery battery of the third regiment of the division. Cianetti was in a zone swept by Greek fire.

The Fascist officers said Gen. Ugo Cavallero, Italian chief of staff sent to Albania to attempt to regain lost ground, has returned to Italy after failing to revive the army's offensive power.

The Albanian command was taken, they said, by Gen. Carlos Geloso, Eleventh Army commander, who would be saddled with responsibility for the prospective loss of Tepeleni.

(These reports gave strength to reports in foreign sources in Athens Friday that the Italian command had been shaken up for the fourth time since the war began last October 28, with Gen. Geloso replacing Gen. Cavallero.)

I heard several captured officers declare: "Our troops were unable to resist the Greek attack."

The captives asked whether a report was true that an international brigade of Spaniards, Poles, Russians and other nationalities were fighting against the Italians in Albania.

They were told that only Greeks were in the front line.

The prisoners said the Greek infantry assaults and artillery barrages were the "most difficult we have experienced in three wars—Ethiopian, Spanish and French border last June."

requisition or absorption of native food; that ships will be free of attack; that a neutral commission shall supervise relief on the ground and see that agreements are complied with."

The British government declared, on the other hand:

"No form of relief can be devised which would not directly or indirectly assist the enemy's war effort. Every import of foodstuffs into occupied territory conflicts directly with" the objectives of depriving Germany of imported goods, forcing it into "uneconomic" use of goods possessed or produced and aggravating the enemy's transport difficulties. The surplus products of the occupied countries are taken by Germany and this helps to create the disparity which exists today between rations in Germany and those allowed to the civilian populations" of occupied territories.

Brussels Gets Russian Wheat

Brussels, March 9 (via Berlin) (AP).—Several carloads of Russian wheat arrived here today to aid in relieving an acute food shortage.

It was the first shipment arranged under a Belgian-Russian trade deal, with Germany acting to speed up deliveries.

Another brighter aspect of the food situation was an increase in fish supplies because of German-Belgian action in seizing 500 tons which it was said was being cornered by enterprising merchants operating an illegal market in which fish sold for as high as $1.25 per pound. The price was reduced two-thirds under the confiscation.

In one court case recently it was found that a knife battle between two cousins was precipitated when one discovered that a skinned carcass he bought from the other as a rabbit turned out to be a cat.

Police in Anderlecht discovered that swans had vanished from park pools and were sold as geese on an illegal food market.

Daily the authorities halt all wagons and automobiles in roadside searches for illegally slaughtered animals. Meat not bearing a registered slaughterhouse stamp is confiscated, since private slaughter is prohibited.

Red Army Massed At Turkish Border

It may abdicate to make way for a peace government.

If the Greeks reject the final Nazi demand the 200,000 or more mechanized troops of Adolf Hitler's Balkan "security army" now on the Bulgarian-Greek frontier are ready to attack "within a few days or perhaps even hours," neutral diplomats heard.

The German minister to Greece, Prince Viktor Zu Erbach-Schonberg, was understood to have visited Premier Alexander Korizis Friday and submitted a message from Hitler giving the Greeks a last chance to conclude a peace with Italy.

(Athens officials denied the Sofia reports.)

Reports circulated—without confirmation—that King George of Greece was ready to abdicate in favor of his younger brother, Prince Paul, who is married to a granddaughter of former Kaiser Wilhelm, Princess Frederika.

If King George should abdicate, these rumors said, the former Mayor of Athens, A. Hagios, would become premier and immediately negotiate for an armistice.

Army Spends Millions on Rail Facilities

The Army's vast expansion rapidly is taking it into the railroad business.

A quartermaster corps announcement said yesterday that $2,800,000 was being spent on track facilities at Army posts, and that by September it expected to receive delivery of the last of 60 locomotives which have been ordered.

Two 100-ton locomotives already have been put in operation. In addition, the Army has ordered three 60-ton units, ten 45-ton engines, and 45 20-ton gasoline mechanical engines. They are to be used to facilitate movement of freight into and out of Army camps and stations.

As an example of the freight problem it must meet, the Quartermaster Corps said 5,000 freight cars would be handled monthly at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Army's Mail Up 125 Per Cent

Also reflecting the Army's expansion was a report that 2,744,011 pieces of mail were handled by the War Department postoffice in February, an increase of 125.25 per cent over February, 1940.

At New York, the Navy Recruiting Bureau announced details of a program to enroll 25,000 young men as reserve aviators to man the expanding aerial forces of a two-ocean Navy.

"The course to be taught will be the most complete and advanced aviation study projected anywhere in the world," said Commander F. K. O'Brien, officer-in-charge of the recruiting bureau.

The age requirements are from 20 to 27, and the basic academic requirements two or more years of college credits, or the equivalent.

Training centers will be at Pensacola and Jacksonville, Fla., and Corpus Christi, Tex.

Blitz Can Production Begins

Granite City, Ill., March 9 (AP).—Manufacture of a "blitzkrieg can," similar to a type reportedly used by the Germans to land gasoline supplies undetected in their invasion of Norway, was begun last week by the National Enameling & Stamping Co., under Government contract.

Frank G. Fisher, general manager of the plant, said new machinery had been installed and by next week the five-gallon cans would be turned out at the rate of 2,500 a day.

The War Department ordered 186,000 of the cans at a cost of approximately $300,000. They will be deliverd to mechanized units.

Principal feature of the can is that it will float when filled, with only a fraction of an inch above the surface. A special galvanizing process prevents them from reflecting the sun's rays.

Fisher said the cans are 6 by 14 inches, with a 2-inch projection on one side that contains air. Five gallons of liquid fills all except the air space. They float at a 45-degree angle and have three handles for portage by one or two men.

Government engineers said when the Nazis launched their Norwegian invasion, thousands of the cans, filled with gasoline, were dumped into the sea near unapproachable shores and washed ashore unseen by British patrols. Beach-combing troops then took them to airplane and panzer unit bases.

Princess Faces Death if Deported, Attorney Pleads

San Francisco, March 9 (AP).—Princess Stephanie Hohenlohe would be beheaded as an enemy of the state if she were deported to Nazi-dominated Hungary, her attorney said tonight.

Joseph Bullock, her counsel, said he would seek a writ of habeas corpus tomorrow for the release of the Hungarian woman arrested by immigration officials at her Palo Alto home yesterday "on telegraphic orders from Washington."

Princess Hohenlohe has denied, Bullock said, that she was sympathetic to the Nazi cause.

The princess was denied all visitors except her son, Franz, 26, at the immigration station here where she is held in custody.

It was explained informally she probably would be held, or kept under close surveillance, until she could be deported.

Charles G. Wood, Former U. S. Conciliator, Urges Supreme Board With Power to Handle Defense Strikes

Charles G. Wood, former Federal commissioner of conciliation, proposed yesterday to the House Judiciary Committee, studying strikes and defense, that Congress concentrate in one agency all authority to deal with industrial labor problems.

"There are too many boards and defense agencies dabbling now with attempts to settle strikes," Wood said in a letter. He added the opinion that "expedients" of some temporary agencies tended to "promote more and better strikes."

The House committee is considering a variety of legislative proposals to outlaw or restrict strikes in defense industries. It asked for suggestions from Wood, who was with the conciliation service from 1923 to 1936.

Wood said "complete powers to deal with labor disputes" should be concentrated in the Labor Department's conciliation service.

He said these powers should include "processes of voluntary arbitration and compulsory investigation," and suggested that when either side refused arbitration a public hearing be held to find who was "most responsible or blameworthy" for continuance of a strike.

"Neither employers nor representatives of unions can raise any valid objection against a law that would enable them to publicly present and describe the merit of their claims to an authorized agency of the Government," he added. "The right to strike is protected by statute. Those who strike should be required to tell why under oath whenever the public interest requires them to do so."

Detroit, March 9 (AP).—Officials of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) today announced completion of plans for a strike of 1,700 workers at the Midland Steel Products Co., starting at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

A State labor board conciliator reported company and union were deadlocked in a controversy over piecework. It was indicated a last-minute effort to avert the strike might be attempted with the aid of James F. Dewey, Federal conciliator, who is expected to return here early tomorrow from Washington. The Midland plant produces automobile frames, some contracted for by General Motors for use in Army trucks.

Fort Wayne, Ind., March 9 (AP).—James T. Dunne, of Washington, D. C., National Labor Board field examiner, announced today settlement of a three-day strike of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee (C. I. O.) at the Bass Foundry & Machine Co., which has been making bombshells and machine tools.

He said the company agreed to satisfy "certain grievances" and the union to return to work tomorrow.

New York, March 9 (AP).—Headed by President John L. Lewis, officers and district representatives of the United Mine Workers Union (C. I. O.), will meet here tomorrow to formulate demands to be incorporated in a new contract with bituminous mine operators.

Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., will take part in the conference. The present contract establishes a 7-hour day and a 35-hour week with a $6 a day basic wage in the North and $5.60 in the South.

South Plainfield, N. J., March 9 (AP).—A strike at the Cornell-Dubilier Corporation plant here loomed on a three-sided New Jersey labor front today as two other management-employe disputes quieted at least temporarily in this busiest of defense production States.

Octave Blake, who estimated defense subcontracts held by his firm at $1,500,000, said 70 strikers picketed the plant early today. Production workers, numbering about 2,500, do not work Sundays.

Frank A. Diana, president of local B-1041, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (A. F. L.) had announced yesterday the local's unanimous indorsement of a midnight strike for wage increases and holiday and overtime rates. He said the walkout would take effect when the day shift was scheduled to report Monday morning.

Meanwhile the West Orange local of the C. I. O. United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, temporarily postponed a scheduled one-day walkout pending a vote tomorrow night on a program submitted by the Thomas A. Edison, Inc., management.

At the Edgewater plant of the Aluminum Co. of America, Vincent McKenna, president of the C. I. O. Aluminum Workers of America local said a strike sanctioned by the union would not be called "until our demands are flatly refused." McKenna said he would confer with company officials in Pittsburgh Monday.

Detroit, March 9 (AP).—R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.), tonight branded as "ostrich like" a statement made by Henry Ford, in an interview yesterday at his Georgia winter home, that labor unions are "losing ground."

Thomas' union has filed notice of intent to strike at three Ford Motor Co. plants here.

Regarding a Ford statement that "a union is like a spider web in which the workmen can't move," Thomas commented that "everyone who knows our organization knows it is the most democratic in the country."

Ford's declaration that his company did "not intend to submit to any union" drew from Thomas the rejoinder that "other manufacturers who said the same thing some years ago are now having good relationships with us."

Cincinnati, March 9 (AP).—It's back to school tomorrow for nearly 50,000 public school children here. A strike of firemen and engineers which gave pupils Thursday and Friday holidays was settled late today.

Ford Plans Flivver Planes At Price of a Light Auto

By James H. Cobb, Jr.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Ways, Ga., March 9.—A "flivver" plane that will take off from a small plot and sell for the price of a light car is the goal of the Ford Motor Co., Henry Ford announced today.

"We've been experimenting with a two-seater that we expect to put on the market ultimately," Ford said.

"It will probably combine features of the ordinary airplane and the 'gyro' type ship, permitting it to land or take off in a small area.

"The ship will be powered with a motor of 300 horsepower built horizontally into the wing.

"The body will be made of plastics."

Ford said, in response to a question, that the plane was intended for private use and would be scaled for mass production. He did not estimate the probable production date. The Ford Motor Co. at one time made all-metal trimotor planes.

Ford believes there is a great future in aviation and that defense plans will give impetus to the industry. The pioneer automobile manufacturer, a leader in development of the present-day assembly line, believes the same technique can be applied to airplane production.

Associates of Ford ventured the assertion that he would not put a plane on the market for the American public until it was as safe to fly as it is possible to make it.

The manufacturer has always taken a keen interest in aviation. The Ford Airport at Dearborn, Mich., has one of the few dirigible mooring towers in the nation. He is personally acquainted with many leaders in aviation.

"Now we can look forward to a light airplane that will take off from or land on a small area and that will be as easy to manipulate as the family car," he said.

Ford added that he did not believe a combination of automobile and airplane was practical, "at least for the present."

"The weight of the automobile," he declared, "is the biggest drawback to such a combination, but we are just beginning to go places in aviation."

U.S. Navy Held Safeguard Of Australia

The Foreign Policy Association said yesterday that "for the moment, the presence of the American battle fleet at Hawaii safeguards, to some extent at least, Australia and other British Empire countries."

In a survey of Australia's position in world affairs, the association, a privately funded group, said that the defeat or crippling of Great Britain would in the long run force the Commonwealth "to rely on the assistance from the United States."

Discussing the possibility of British-American cooperative action in the Pacific, the association said "it may be assumed that the United States would enter such an agreement with the British Empire countries only if it determined to halt Japan's southward expansion at all cost."

"Any defense arrangement would obviously involve far-reaching implications for both countries—an extension of the Monroe Doctrine far beyond its present confines and a reorientation of Australia's external relations," the association said.

"To be effective, any defense arrangements would have to allow American naval vessels to use Singapore, Port Darwin and many other harbors and air bases."

4 Killed in Syria As Mob Protests Vichy's Food Rules

Damascus, Syria, March 8 (AP).—Four persons were killed and scores injured today as police and troops broke up street demonstrations against the French government's new food distribution regulations.

High Commissioner General Henri Dentz came here personally to direct suppression of the outbreaks here and at Aleppo.

At Beirut strong detachments of troops patrolled the streets and preserved quiet.

Syria is cut off from France and French Africa by the war in the Mediterranean. Authorities in Syria remain loyal to the Vichy government, but dispatches have told repeatedly of efforts by De Gaulle sympathizers to swing Syria and the French troops there over to the "Free French" side as allies of Britain.

HE WAS LOST—"Jimmie" tugs on a boot as he waits at the Ninth Precinct Station

An intrepid aviator, aged 4½, yesterday spent a sad afternoon in the company of Washington police because he became lost and didn't understand the District's row houses.

Shortly after 1 p. m. yesterday George C. Furbershaw, of 640 Fifth Street Northeast, found a child who thought his name was "Jimmie" in the 500 block of Fifth Street Northeast.

Repeated questioning failed to bring out any more than "Jimmie" so Furbershaw took the child to the Ninth Precinct station, where policemen tried without success to make his visit enjoyable.

Dressed in an aviator's type hat, grey coat and blue pants, the child seemed only happy when playing with a toy airplane. Finally, in despair, the officers sent him to the receiving home.

All ended happily, however, for the lost "Jimmie" turned out to be a found "Billy" by his anxious mother, Mrs. James Thibodeau, of 616 Fifth Street Northeast, who claimed the boy at the receiving home.

Mrs. Thibodeau, who said her family had moved into the neighborhood only recently, had searched the surrounding blocks several hours in search of her roving child. Billy, she explained, had been out in front of his home playing and apparently became confused when he tried to find his own house among the long row.

Irish Urge De Valera to Open Ports

New York, March 9 (AP).—A group of Irish Americans disclosed today they had cabled President Eamon de Valera asking him to open the western ports of Eire to Great Britain because "the lifeline between Great Britain and America has become the lifeline of civilization.

"This lifeline is threatened," asserted the 129 signers of the cable. "It is the declared policy of the United States to keep it intact and Ireland has it in her power to take the greatest step toward making this policy effective.

"We ask you to do this for the sake of that Irish freedom which our ancestors fought to win. We ask it also as Americans because the freedom of America is threatened, and what we ask of you, America is preparing to do herself by opening her ports to the British fleet."

Signers of the cable included James Byrne, former chancellor of the University of New York; Frank P. Fenton, director of organization of the American Federation of Labor; Marc Connelly, playwright, former Congressman Joseph A. Conry, Boston, and John F. O'Ryan, commander of the Twenty-seventh Division A. E. F. and former New York police commissioner.

Chiang Frowns On Demands Of Communists

Chungking, March 9 (U.P.).—The Chinese Communist Party has presented two sets of demands to the People's Political Council which Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has described as "just like the demands served on the government and the Kuomintang (Nationalist Party) by the Japanese" prior to the opening of the Chinese-Japanese conflict in July, 1937, it was revealed tonight.

Publication of the demands and an official version of the generalissimo's address to the council last week showed almost irreconcilable differences between the dominant Kuomintang and the Communists, second strongest party in the United Front regime formed at the outset of the war with Japan.

The official Central News Agency released a complete list of both sets of Communist demands tonight. The first series of 12 "requests" were handed to associates of the generalissimo on February 15 and included:

The government to rescind its order disbanding the Communist Fourth Army (which was defeated by government forces during January after its commander, Yeh Ting, had been captured.

Gen. Yeh's Release Asked

The Fourth Army to be reinstated with full rights.

All "anti-Communist" leaders to be punished and Gen. Yeh Ting (who reportedly is a prisoner in Chungking) to be released.

Pensions to be paid families of all Fourth Army soldiers killed during the fighting with Kuomintang troops.

The government's "Central China Communist Suppression" army to be withdrawn (presumably from those areas formerly administered by the Fourth Army).

All "patriotic" political prisoners to be released.

The "one-party dictatorship of the Kuomingtang to be abolished."

On March 2 a second set of 12 demands was presented reiterating and amplifying the previous requests with these additions:

Government recognition of the "anti-Japanese democratic regimes' formed (by the Communists) behind the "enemy lines."

Joint Committee Proposed

Creation of a new Communist-controlled group army, similar to the present Eighteenth army, and other military organizations which the Communists are ready to organize.

Creation of a joint government committee to supervise national policy, to consist of one representative of each of the political parties (there now are about six parties in Generalissimo Chiang's so-called united front) with the Kuomintang representative as chairman and the Communist representative as vice chairman.

Relaxation of all political and military pressure against members of the Communist Party.

The official version of the generalissimo's speech showed his strong opposition to nearly all the Communist demands despite his agreement that the People's Political Council attempt mediation.

Chiang accused the Communists of fomenting disunion and seeking to further their own ends under the guise of resistance to Japan.

A cessation of government warfare against the Communists, he implied, can come only if the Communists will submit to his will.

African Captures First Armored Car He Ever Saw

London, March 9 (AP).—A dispatch from an officer in Nairobi, Kenya Colony, today told a story of a fellow who takes things in stride.

He is an African with the British forces in Italian Somaliland who never had seen a train or an automobile in his life. While stationed in the bush with an anti-tank gun one dawn he was startled to see an Italian armored car crashing toward him.

He held his fire, however, until the car was 30 yards away, and then picked off the driver. The driverless machine kept coming and the African tumbled hastily out of the way as the car ran over his gun and crashed into a tree. The other Italians got out and surrendered, grinning.

Americans Give Little to Hungry War Sufferers

New York, March 9 (AP).—"One-fourteenth of one slice of bread per meal."

That is the contribution which the Golden Rule Foundation says the average American made last year to the homeless victims of war in China, Europe and Great Britain.

The foundation, in a report, said that America's war relief contributions in 1940 totaled slightly less than $50,000,000, but that the Nation had meanwhile enjoyed a $4,400,000,000 rise in income, due in large measure to war profits.

For every dollar the average American gave for the war relief, he spent $328 for luxuries and $53 to prepare for war, the foundation said.

Train Hits Auto, Kills Family of 3

Salisbury, Md., March 9 (AP).—A passenger train struck a light delivery truck today at a crossing three miles south of Princess Anne, killing an entire family of three.

The dead are Roy V. Perdue, 30, operator of a cleaning and dyeing establishment here, his wife, Drucilla Perdue, 28, and their 7-year-old daughter, Charlotte.

Corporal J. C. Gates, of the State police, said a northbound Pennsylvania train struck the car and dragged it about 2,000 feet. The truck was a twisted mass and trains were delayed an hour while the wreckage was being cleared.

Her studio lent Patricia to Autry's studio, the Republic, for the part and everyone was on the set ready to start shooting, but no Patricia. Republic switched the role to another player and Paramount switched Miss Morrison to the ranks of the unemployed—for 10 days of discipline

Netherlands Chiefs Flying To East Indies

Two of the highest ranking diplomatic chiefs of the Netherlands government are en route by clipper plane from London, via the United States, to the Netherlands East Indies, the Dutch Embassy announced last night.

They are Dr. Eelco Nicolaas Van Kleffahs, Netherlands minister of foreign affairs, and Charles Joseph Welter, minister of the colonies.

The Netherlands government has been making its headquarters in London since Queen Wilhelmina and her government fled from Holland as the German blitzkrieg struck last September.

The two officials are headed for Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, seat of the Dutch colonial government there.

They are expected to make a "courtesy call" on Secretary Hull on their arrival in this country the latter part of this week, a legation spokesman said, but their stop here will be brief. They are routed to fly to the Pacific coast, then take a Pan-American Pacific clipper to the Far East.

Dutch legation officials here were silent on the portent of the long air journey of the two officials. But diplomatic circles viewed it as a move by the motherland government to bolster the morale of the colonial government, in view of Japanese moves to extend her sway over the Dutch East Indies, British Malaya and the Antipodes.

In Batavia, it was said, the ministers will meet with Gov. Gen. Tjarda Van Stachenhauer on internal problems of the Netherlands East Indies before conferring with former Japanese Foreign Minister Kenkichi Yoshizawa, head of the Japanese economic mission which is attempting to negotiate increased economic interchanges between Nippon and the N. E. I., offering Japanese manufactured goods in return for increased supplies of rubber and other tropical products, mining and fishing concessions, and the right of residence for an increased number of Japanese traders.

Planes Destroyed, Malta Hangars Fired, Nazis Say

Berlin, March 9 (AP).—D. N. B., official German news agency, said tonight that German bombers, concentrating on an undesignated Malta airport, destroyed three British warplanes and set fires to hangars.

Submarines, the high command said without elaborating, "report sinking 18,000 tons of enemy shipping space."

Germany's aerial sea raiders also were credited in the daily communique with sinking a 10,000-ton merchantman with a direct bomb hit in St. George Channel, between the Irish Sea and the Atlantic.

British Aide Found Dead; Gun Nearby

New York, March 9 (AP).—George H. Hodges, 65, engineer employed by the British Purchasing Commission, was found dead today of gunshot wounds in the bedroom of his apartment. Police said a shotgun lay beside the body.

Police said Hodges had died of a wound in the mouth and that one shell in the double-barreled shotgun was exploded. Police said they were told Hodges had been ill and was under the care of a physician.

Former Host to Windsor Killed by Nazi Bomb

London, March 9 (AP).—Martin Poulsen, 51, owner of the Cafe de Paris, where the Duke of Windsor used to romp as Prince of Wales, was among those killed by Nazi bombs crashing in London's fashionable West End during the weekend.

One bomb scored a direct hit on a crowded dance floor killing Ken Johnson, 27, leader of the Cafe de Paris dance band and some of his orchestra members, recruited form the British West Indies. Johnson was a native of Georgetown, British Guiana.

Indo-China, Thai War May End Today

By the United Press

Tokyo (Monday), March 10.—A peace agreement ending the border conflict between French Indo-China and Thailand probably will be initialed here today, clearing the way for Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka's departure for Berlin, Rome and Moscow, reliable informants said today.

Last details of the Thai-Indo-Chinese agreement, it was said, were worked out last night after French Ambassador Charles Arsene-Henry had new and full instructions from Vichy.

The Ambassador was to see Matsuoka again this morning, it was said.

Thailand was said to have given its full assent to the agreement as worked out by Japan, in her capacity as mediator.

Bangkok, March 9 (U.P.).—A high command communique tonight said the government has notified Japan that French troops violated the armistice agreement at three points on the Indo-China frontier Friday and Saturday.

French activities resulted in clashes after which two Thai corporals and a policeman were missing, the communique said, adding that on Friday afternoon a French patrol fired 100 shots across the Mekong River near Sri Chiangmai, opposite Vienchandra. There were no Thai casualties. Saturday morning, the communique claimed, French troops advanced to Banraka near Chantaburi but withdrew after a brief battle with Thai forces. At noon Saturday a French patrol armed with light machine guns attacked Thai police at Sammaktapan, 4 miles northeast of Bankurien, but fled when Thai reinforcements were summoned.

Biddle, Harriman To Leave for Posts In London Today

New York, March 9.—Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., American Ambassador to the governments-in-exile in London of Poland, Norway, Belgium and the Netherlands, and W. Averell Harriman, administrator of the London end of defense work under the aid-to-Britain bill, will leave for their new posts at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow from the marine terminal at LaGuardia Field aboard the Pan American Airways Atlantic Clipper.

Harriman said today that his new position included not only "materiel for war, but food."

He indicated that the problem of feeding the British was one of the major fences over which the United States might be called to hurdle to keep the British line intact.

Biddle was guest of honor today at a luncheon given by the Manhattan Society, a group of Polish-American business and professional men.

Premier Tells Danes to Yield To 'New Order'

Copyright by New York Times

Copenhagen, March 9.—Premier Thorvald Stauning last night made a speech of rather decisive character in the Students Union outlining the whole European situation and stressing the necessity for Denmark to adjust herself to present and future conditions in the new German-governed Europe.

After a review of the abnormal development of politics and trade since the outbreak of the war the premier said that the government's chief task was the adjustment of trade to Germany and the creation of work for the unemployed.

All Danish sea trade has been eliminated and Germany quickly consumed all the agricultural surplus, he said. In return she has made efforts to supply raw materials and fuel, but not in such quantities normally used in Denmark.

The premier mentioned the effects of the war in connection with Iceland, the Faeroe Islands and Greenland, giving a full statement of the America attitude with regard to Greenland and the cooperation of the Danish-American committee. He said that the resumption of old ties must await the return of normal conditions.

Cites Inflation Peril

Premier Stauning turned to the danger of inflation that had been threatening the nation.

"From the very first," he said, "we made an effort to halt price rises. We canceled automatic wage increases and until now real inflation has not existed."

After a review of the situation in other countries the premier emphasized how Denmark's position was more difficult because of the lack of all raw materials while Sweden, he said, with her iron industry, big forests and water power was better off. In Denmark, due to the lack of foodstuffs, he said it was necessary to destroy large quantities of cattle.

"When contemplating events in other states, however, it must be admitted that Denmark has suffered less from direct warfare," he declared.

Must Consider Reality

"We must consider the fact that Germany maintains her position as the central power in Europe. Germany is now governing the essential parts of Europe and we are unable to see how far this development will go. I am rather dubious of retrogradation. While I naturally believe in independent states, we are for the time being a sort of protectorate. But whatever the near future brings, I believe we will be able to meet the new European conditions.

"It is my impression that Germany has certain plans aiming not only at an immediate new order but a lasting European rearrangement, demanding cooperation for a planned economy, surely involving advantages when compared with the previous system."

Ice on Road Causes Collision

4 Suspects Cleared In Bride's Murder

Neither fingerprint nor fingernail tests offered police any workable clews.

Washingtn police confined their investigation for the present to residents, employes and frequenters of the apartment house.

Many residents already have been questioned and detectives hoped to have talked with each one by today.

Thorough Checkup

They sought to determine the habits and reputations of the residents, learn the identity of frequenters of the building and find out whether any unusual visitors or suspicious characters had been seen at the address.

It was learned that police had kept an all-night vigil in the Abramowitz apartment, and that a uniformed policeman was on duty when detectives were absent.

Detective Sergt. John Wise, of the homicide squad, said it had been "pretty well established" that the killer had entered and left by the apartment door. Detectives had obtained duplicate keys of all the apartment house doors to learn if any would open the door of the Abramowitz apartment. None of the keys, it was learned, would turn the lock.

First reports that there were only two keys to the Abramowitz apartment were amended when it was learned the janitor alone was in possession of two. A third was found in the pocket of Mrs. Abramowitz's dress.

The janitor, police explained, had obtained a key from the slain woman's husband, Barney N. Abramowitz, a Social Security Board attorney, without knowing he already had one on the apartment house keyring. He was to paint the Abramowitz apartment.

Body to Kansas City

Abramowitz, who is staying with friends in Takoma Park, Md., is expected to accompany his wife's body to Kansas City today for burial. The body was released last night to the Danzansky's funeral home here to be prepared for shipment and will be returned to the District Morgue at 11:30 a. m. today for a coroner's jury to be sworn in over it.

There probably will be no inquest, authorities said.

Mysterious noises in the halls of the apartment house early yesterday morning were reported by Miss Jemima D. Blackburn, a Government clerk whose apartment windows face those of the Abramowitz apartment across an air shaft.

She was awakened about 6 a. m., she said, by a shriek, followed by the sound of three or four people running downstairs from the floor above. A door slammed and somebody sobbed, "I didn't do it," she reported, adding there were more footsteps and then a voice, "All right now, George."

A few minutes later there was a knock on her door, but she did not investigate and the commotion ended, Miss Blackburn said. Police said what she heard was the overflow from a noisy party in the basement.

Another Heard Scream

It was Miss Blackburn's roommate, Miss Madge Davis, who reported the previous day that she heard a scream at the time Mrs. Abramowitz is believed to have been slain.

Miss Davis was corroborated by Hugh Stephens, a high school student living below the Abramowitz apartment, and their testimony was strengthened yesterday by that of another resident.

Miss Mitzi Jones, 24-year-old waitress at Ceres Restaurant, disclosed that about 11 a. m. Saturday she heard what sounded like the screams of a child. It was followed, she said, by what she thought was a high chair falling to the floor. The sounds came from the apartment directly below her, which was occupied by Mrs. Abramowitz.

Martinsburg to Ban 'Benefit' Carnivals

Special Dispatch to The Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 9.—No traveling carnivals will be permitted to appear in this city under "benefit" guise after September 1; local fire companies and other groups after the same date will not be permitted to bring in outside attractions of a carnival nature for their block or street carnivals, and block carnivals will not be sanctioned by city council unless of a purely local character. The decisions were made by city council yesterday by a 4-3 vote.

The present official policy of the party was adopted at its 1940 national convention, April 8, the day before the Nazi invasion and occupation of Denmark and Norway.

According to the three resigning members, opposition to the official policy grew to such an extent that Thomas found himself in something approaching a minority at an unadvertised meeting of the national committee in Detroit last month.

Be Gagged or Resign

Agreement was reached at this meeting, they stated, to allow views in dissent to party official policy to appear in publications under party control and to remove discipline from members desiring publicly to express disagreement. However, they added, when the editor of the party's official weekly in New York refused to honor the agreement, he was supported by Thomas. Consequently, they declared, dissenters had no alternative except to be gagged or resign.

McDowell, spokesman for the group, said that the resignations were decided upon most reluctantly and became inevitable "only when the spokesmen for the official point of view repudiated their agreement" to permit disagreement and began official proceedings to force resignation of one of the three. These proceedings were started, McDowell added, because the man had written an unsigned editorial in a nonparty newspaper endorsing the modified lend-lease bill.

The statement of resignation said:

"We share with our colleagues of the executive committee a conviction that the survivial of democracy in America will require the socialization of our major industries now in the monopoly stage. But we differ with them in that we believe, as they do not, that the advancement of any social democracy also requires the military defeat of Hitlerism in this war.

"We had hoped that in spite of this basic disagreement a way might be found to permit us, as well as the Socialists who share the viewopint of Norman Thomas to work in close collaboration for our other aims. This has proven impossible. The national executive committee for weeks has been effectively deadlocked and those with whom we have differed have been unwilling to permit us to speak our convictions publicly while retaining office in the party.

Esteem for Thomas

"We are thus withdrawing from leadership in order to give Norman Thomas and those who now agree with him a strong majority of the national executive committee. For those who remain on the committee, and for Norman Thomas particularly, we retain highest esteem and a warm personal affection.

"Of the mapor spokesmen against aid to Britain, Norman Thomas is one of the few whose motives are above suspicion. For that very reason, he is now applauded by some of the most intransigeant enemies of both socialism and democracy who fear the growing power of British labor more than they fear Hitler.

"These gentry are quick to observe that Norman Thomas, because of his reputation for sincere selflessness, can more effectively champion the isolationist cause, at this moment, than can they themselves.

"We trust that the time will come again when we can work side by side with Norman Thomas and his supporters. Even now we are in agreement with the mon the urgent necessity of expanding our industrial production to maximum capacity so as to meet our consumer needs, and thus give a sounder basis for continuing the democratic structure of our society. We agreed on the need of extending the practices of democracy into every area of American life, which means above all else that labor must be given an equal voice with management in the control of industry.

"But is is our conviction, as it is of many other Socialists—especially those who are also trade unionists—that these aims can be neither attained nor secured unless America is made invincible from attack and unless Britain is given the assistance that will enable her to withstand Nazi assault until such time as the people of continental Europe are able to rise successfully against their oppressors, to drive out tyranny and to build a democratic socialist United States of Europe."

Ralph Pollio

Officials and professional men in many walks of life will be pallbearers today for Ralph L. Pollio, who died here Saturday. So broad was the acquaintanceship of this local hotel manager that he will be mourned as a friend by an Ambassador, a Supreme Court justice, a United States Senator, justices of the District Court, two District Commissioners, members of the bar and a host of other Washingtonians and Americans. Such popularity was not attained without constant readiness to serve the needs of pleasant human relations. It was said that Mr. Pollio opened personally every piece of mail that came to his desk. He lent his time and talents to charities as well as to his business. As a child he came here from Italy, but it is as an old Washingtonian that he will be remembered, and remembered with esteem.

Literary Heavyweights

With the project announced by Neil Swanson, of Baltimore, literature has reached a quantitative flowering foreshadowed in 1933 by the appearance of "Anthony Adverse." The early thirties will be remembered by the public as the period in which reading a book ceased to be a single evening's entertainment and became the undertaking of an entire vacation; by authors, as the time when publishers began to reject any story less than a thousand pages long, and when nothing was worth saying unless it could be said in a trilogy. Mr. Swanson has put all these things behind him. His best-seller, "The Silent Drum," is the first in a series of 30 connected historical novels he has contracted to write.

Of course, there are Tom Swift and the Rover Boys, but in the serious field about the only modern rival Mr. Swanson has is Jules Romains. M. Romains has just published the ninth volume in his "Men of Good Will" series. Presumably this rambling narrative will end when it catches up with history, and the indications are it will close short of 30 books—leaving the field clear for Mr. Swanson. Clear for Mr. Swanson, that is, unless publishers should now urge other writers to emulate him. With due respect to the Swanson "triakontalogy," the outlook for the well-read man would be pretty dismal if this sort of thing showed signs of becoming general. It has been estimated that, exclusive of mere newspapermen and other inartistic plodders, there are 40,000 creative writers in the United States. If each of these should write 30 books of 300 pages apiece, an ordinary reader would have to work 12 hours a day for 1,600 years to go through them all.

Gillette Reports

The special Senate Committee on Campaign Expenditures has done a good job of exposing the excessive use of money in the 1940 campaign. It brings out the ironic fact that, despite the fact that the limitations of the Hatch Act were in effect for the first time, the expenditures of the two major parties reached a new peak in the Willkie-Roosevelt contest. Lest anyone conclude that this act to eliminate "pernicious political activities" is a failure, however, it should be noted that the committee received no complaints as to the use of relief funds for political purposes. Considering the orgy of 1938, that fact alone justifies Senator Hatch in regarding his crusade against political corruption as a success.

Senator Gillette's special committee performed only the services of watchdog for the 1940 campaign. It leaves to other groups the task of making the statute's restrictions upon campaign outlays effective. Its reference to an "all-inclusive" limitation upon spending in behalf of Presidential candidates is merely a suggestion that the problem be studied by Congress, and no plan to make such a limitation enforceable is outlined. The question as to whether it is possible to curb the use of money to influence votes in Presidential elections, accordingly, is left precisely where it was before.

Much has been said in favor of Maurice M. Milligan's plan to lump all political committees supporting one candidate into a single organization for the purpose of calculating expenditures. Baffling problems, however, would still arise even if this plan were adopted. Congress can regulate spending for only those candidates seeking Federal office; it cannot control the finances of local committees supporting State, county and city tickets. Yet in practice these local groups may be the backbone of the Presidential campaign. How would it be possible to limit their spending on behalf of their tickets, including electors pledged to Presidential candidates? If they should be prevented from working for Presidential candidates directly, they would doubtless do so indirectly. Obviously the problem needs a much more searching inquiry than it has been given by the Gillette committee or by Congress in putting the existing ineffective limitations in the Hatch Act.

Bill For The President

It is said that the Senate and House versions of the lend-lease bill are not in such grave conflict as to justify a conference between the two chambers. A statement issued by Administration leaders in the House after the Senate action Saturday night implied that the Senate bill would be offered in the House as it stands. In that event a concurring vote should be forthcoming without trouble, and the historic measure should be on the President's desk by Wednesday, when the aid program, doubtless, will go into execution simultaneously.

Yet there is more than a little perturbation among the Administration leaders in the House (as there must be in the White House) about the "clarifications" which the Senate inserted in the House measure. It concerns the way that the Senate fortified the Congressional power of the purse in respect of the appropriations which the President will now request for carrying out his lend-lease authority.

There is no difference between the House and Senate bills over the disposition of existing "defense articles." By this term is meant our existing military establishment—part of which Mr. Roosevelt will transfer as the American effort to meet the "spring crisis" which is already brewing over Europe and Asia. The House attached two limitations to such transfers, and the Senate accepted them without any effective change. One was a limitation on the value of transfers. No material out of our military establishment may be transferred in excess of $1,300,000,000 in value. The other limitation, was that the transfers could not be made without consulting the chief of staff or the chief of naval operations. Neither amendment makes much difference, since there can have been no intention on the part of the White House either to ignore our principal naval and military officers or to go beyond the $1,300,000,000 boundary.

The conflict between Senate and House over the President's disposition of the "defense articles" to be manufactured is, however, substantial. President Roosevelt's object was to dovetail aid to Britain with our own defense. That is, after getting the appropriations for building the arsenal, the President intended to assign the production either to home or others' defense as he saw fit. The House acquiesced in this strategy. But the Senate, in Senator Byrd's amendment, decided that the President must separate his appropriation requests, so that in this respect the President's original "all-in" aim has been defeated.

However, the Byrd amendment was accepted, wisely or not, by the Administration leaders of the Senate. And at this late day it would be foolish to go back on that decision. Any other course at this time might lead to a renewal of a debate which, with the Axis powers on the move again as the spring draws near, would delay aid further, and, moreover, would take away some of the psychological benefit which the smashing vote on Saturday imparted to the anti-Hitler movement.

Price Of Safety

Washington's deficiencies in the handling and control of traffic are well known to local officials, civic leaders and many citizens. For the most part Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml has reiterated the appeals of local groups for more traffic policemen, more highway engineers, and better enforcement of traffic laws in the courts. His address to a select group at the Willard Hotel on Friday night was nonetheless important as a reflection of the views of a disinterested expert whose only interest is to promote safety and facilitate traffic on the streets.

Lieut. Kreml has no faith in panaceas and he does not expect any miracle to prevent the frequent recurrence of "sudden death" on Washington streets. From long experience he knows that fatal accidents can be prevented only through sound engineering, conscientious enforcement of the law, and education of the public in safety habits. Systematic efforts in these fields almost invariably bring notable improvements in safety records. Within certain limitations traffic safety, like public health, can be purchased. Indeed, Washington proved last year that many lives can be saved and numerous injuries as well as much property damage avoided by relentless application of the techniques which Lieut. Kreml has done so much to work out.

Now, however, the city is confronted by a staggering new problem. It is experiencing boom-town growth. Its means of handling a great increase in traffic are seriously inadequate. Our slow-motion system of local government is always behind schedule in meeting problems of this sort. By the time Congress is induced to provide funds to overcome one deficiency other greater needs for public service have arisen. The danger of a greatly accelerated rate of accidents will have to be faced unless Congress makes it possible for Washington to plan for and effectively to cope with this emergency. There can be little doubt, as Lieut. Kreml made clear, that any failure to adjust our traffic controls to this greater burden would be paid for in terms of human life.

Insurance Controls

Reports that the SEC "had it in" for the life insurance companies and was preparing to ask for drastic Federal regulation of their activities have proved to be unfounded. The recommendations of SEC Commissioner Sumner T. Pike and Gerhard A. Gesell of the SEC's legal staff, recently transmitted to the Temporary Economic Committee, are aimed chiefly at strengthening the existing State regulatory machinery.

No responsible insurance official could possibly object to proposals designed to increase the prestige of State insurance commissioners by raising their salaries. Nor could he take exception to appointments strictly on merit without regard to political affiliations. Other suggestions equally acceptable are intended to improve administrative procedures and agency practices within the States. The Federal Government would function largely in a supervisory capacity "to plug the gaps where State regulation cannot do an effective job." The report suggests, for example, that a Federal agency might be required to make a detailed examination of any interstate insurance company if requested to do so by the insurance commissioners of two or more States. It is gratifying to note that emphasis has been placed upon Federal cooperation with the State regulatory agencies rather than independent action by the Federal authorities. Indeed, Messrs. Pike and Gesell offer their recommendations as a means of forestalling public demands for all-inclusive Federal regulation.

Surprisingly a number of controversial issues which were expected to figure conspicuously in the final report have been played down. For example, no definite position is taken on the question of limiting the size of life insurance companies. Various methods by which it might be done are noted, but all of them are called "drastic" and their efficacy is considered "problematical." The much discussed suggestion that State laws might be liberalized to encourage insurance companies to invest in common stocks is likewise put forward tentatively with reservations that go far toward dissipating alarm.

However, the report is unqualifiedly critical of the methods employed to sell industrial insurance, and recommends the substitution of some form of low-cost Government insurance to take its place. This proposal will undoubtedly bring sharp protests from insurance officials who have already been aroused by the critical assaults of witnesses before the TNEC. Nevertheless the criticism has merit. There is abundant evidence to show that industrial insurance is unduly costly and selling methods defective in many respects. Unless the private companies are able and willing to institute sweeping reforms in their methods of handling this type of business, the Government ought to intervene.

Matsuoka's Mission

Yosuke Matsuoka is soon to leave Tokyo on a fact-finding mission which is to take him to Moscow, Berlin and, possibly, Rome. What he hopes to find out, doubtless, is whether the time is at hand for Japan to move south on Singapore and the Dutch East Indies. There are those in Japan who insist that never again will the time be more propitious for such a coup than it is now. But the risks of that venture are also not being minimized in Tokyo. There is the fact to be considered that Singapore is heavily fortified, and that the Dutch have assembled a sizable defensive force in their rich South Sea islands. There is also the uncertainty of American policy to be reckoned with, the presence on Japan's flank of hostile Chinese forces and, last but not least, the mystery regarding Russia's position.

Before giving the go-ahead signal for an attack on Singapore, therefore, Mr. Matsuoka would no doubt like to be sure that Russia will stay on the sidelines. But, above all, the Japanese foreign minister wants to know whether Hitler will be able to synchronize his prospective all-out attack on Great Britain with the Japanese move in the Far East, and to make that attack successful. Otherwise Japan might easily find herself at the end of a perilous limb. In that connection the fact that Mr. Matsuoka hopes to visit Rome is not without its pertinence. Rome is not only the capital of one of the signatories of the Berlin agreement, but also a place where Mr. Matsuoka can find out how dangerous it is for a nation to overextend itself when it does not have the strength to follow through.

LANDSCAPE

There were no lights along the shore
The night her ship came in;
Only a thin moon in the clouds,
That wandered out and in

With cold surprise to see so still
A figure on the sand,
Holding a creased and pencilled map
All crumpled in her hand,

And wearing on her face the look
Of one whom calm, not tempest, shook . . .

U. S. Special Police

There seems to exist in the minds of many, doubts or indifference as to the need of immediately increasing the pay of the U. S. Special Police. The U. S. Special Police or "guards" are entrusted with the protection of the countless millions of dollars worth of Government property. Much of this property once destroyed could not be replaced by any amount of money. They protect military and naval secrets coveted by many unscrupulous agents of foreign governments.

While at work the tens of thousands of Government employes, from Cabinet members to laborers, have as their sole protection against criminals of all types, fifth columnists, etc., the U. S. Special Police force.

Yet, despite the responsibility on them the salaries of the guards are almost unbelivably low. I believe that any fair minded person will agree that their pay should be immediately increased.

Senator Nye's Statement

I think the public would be interested to know upon what facts Senator Nye bases his recent statement that the British started the present war and his statement of yesterday that they were the world's greatest aggressor nation.

Does the Senator regard Germany as a less aggressor nation? If he does, how does he reconcile his opinion with the fact that not one of these small nations that Germany has conquered, robbed and enslaved has been in the least danger from Great Britain? On the contrary, in the opinion of most Americans, Great Britain has been the champion and protector of the liberty of these small nations for the last 100 years.

Labor's Position

The position of labor has been radically altered in Presidential esteem. Having discovered the advantages of foreign meddling as opposed to now dulled domestic reform, the President must curry favor with the industrialists to achieve coordination in our war preparation.

Our only hope in averting the coming national catastrophe is in labor, the real victim of war. It must seem strange to the once loved "third" to witness the growing affection of Roosevelt for his former enemies. At a time when historically the profiteers "have cleaned up" the President embraces them to the exclusion of labor.

Let all of us who will pay the cost in this mad endeavor make ourselves heard over the brave talk of those who stand to gain by involvement in a useless foreign war.

Hurrah For Aikman

Hurrah! for Duncan Aikman and his articles on The Unready Republic! It has taken Armageddon to do it, but intelligence and honesty has finally made an appearance in the press. The Post is to be congratulated for every such willingness to discontinue the traditional newspaper attitude of helping the American people hide their heads in the sand.

Our Dreamland

Should Britain fall, the little countries would all leap upon Hitler's victory-studded bandwagon in hot competition for his favor, through physical necessity and idolatry.

In other words, the situation of the United States is about 1,000 times more serious than anybody in the world seems to regard it. It's over a year later than we think—it's late because Hitler has been frantically organizing the powerful mill of science against mankind—while we babes in the woods have prattled blithely in our dreamland of illusion, listening to the Red Ridinghood philosophy of our gang of Little Lame Princes.

O truth, how unwelcome art thou, as an advance agent of danger. Men believe in a rose, though not its thorn until it has stuck. Churchill's priceless warning was scoffed at until the black lightning came. America is no wiser—while Hitler proceeds so openly and brazenly to gather the powers of science into his own hands, binding countries as he proceeds, we sleep on peacefully—to the lullaby of our Little Lame Princes.

Danger Of Delay

Every day's delay in giving full aid to Britain, Greece and China makes the future more difficult as well as more uncertain for us. We won't make our best effort until we have committed ourselves wholeheartedly to support what we think is right in this world. If our way of living isn't worth fighting for, then it isn't worth having. Let's respect the sincerity of leaders on all sides of the discussion. We need lots of "loyal opposition," of the inspiring sort that Mr. Willkie is showing to keep us from making bad mistakes. But there's no place now for mere personal antagonism of the kind some of our politicians are showing. If we want freedom for ourselves in this world, we must develop the power to assure it. Let's get our best brains working with the English to this end. Let's go for union now and freedom forever.

The Nation's Health

For years there has been no concern on the part of the authorities concerning the health of the average worker. Now that man power is needed for war purposes, the true conditions are beginning to emerge. Physical examination of Selective Service registrants by local board physicians has given a cross section of the physical condition of the average young men of America between he ages of 21 and 36.

It has been found that 32 per cent of the young men examined by local board physicians prior to January 31, 1941, have been rejected as physically or mentally unfit for general military service. In other words, one out of every three young men had to be turned away because of their health. Such has been the result of our economic and social strucure in terms of human welfare.

No program for national health has yet been gotten under way, though the defense agencies are talking about the importance of the national health and morale. With the decrease in the standard of living that is inevitable in an arms economy, it is to be anticipated that the national health will grow worse, rather than better. Of course, the responsibility rests on the past—the years of man power deterioration under an economy which could not adequately care for the physical needs of the people.

Of Totalitarian Trends In The U. S.

The Post of March 6 contained an article entitled "Dean Doyle Warns of Totalitarian Thinking in the United States." I wish to compliment Dean Henry Grattan Doyle on the stand he invariably takes against totalitarianism, with specific reference to the aforementioned article. However I do feel that he is rating this American tendency to slip down into totalitarian ways too highly when he calls it "thinking."

"Thinking" entails the exercise of our cortexes and what is happening to us is in our reflex patterns. Our fears are being played upon, fear of publicity, fear of losing our jobs unless we conform, etc.

The meanings of words are being skillfully and insidiously distorted and used for our destruction, words we were wont to depend upon, for instance the word "cooperation."

Cooperation used to mean getting together, talking things over, pooling our knowledge for the common good, each making what contribution he could to the common fund with no hard feelings if there was a conflict of opinion, and finally coming to the conclusion which would seem to give the most benefit to the greatest number of people. But now it means doing exactly as you are told to do by those in authority or else. If you put up any argument or offer any suggestion not "en rapport" with the "powers that be" you are "failing to cooperate." I see this on all sides. In other words you are defying authority. And you had better watch out. This insidious distortion is arousing the instinct of fear and crippling our powers of resistence.

The Nazi method of wearing down a person who does not "cooperate" is in evidence all around us. Nazi if you will, but it is the good old Satanic urge to force the other fellow to do our way, which seems to be dormant in each one of us. It is universal. Civilization has tried to crush this devil, but seems not to have succeeded very well, so far. Theft is at the root of this spirit. If you can bend the other fellow to your will then you can more easily rob him of all that makes life worth living and he will be too enfeebled to strike back. This sort of thing is in evidence all around us but we are too near to it to sense it. There is a very specific method in use to force the obstreperous one into line. I call it the "wearing down" process. First, everything you do is wrong, even if you do exactly as you are told to do. This pernicious procedure is guaranteed to "wear down" the most stalwart constitution, given time. In the Spanish Inquisition I understand that the prisoners were driven mad by letting drops of water fall on their heads with a rhythmic beat. This is a degenerate form of that ancient practice.

Step number two is that everything you do is ridiculous. Very few of us can stand up under ridicule. If you wish to be successful in putting on this pressure you must keep smiling while you do it.

But if you are very strong and manage to keep above water after the attack by these two vicious weapons then you are branded queer. This is in order to disqualify you as a witness.

This sort of thing is not so Nazi as it is premedieval. It is astonishing that we Americans have allowed it to creep up on us and wrap its octopus arms around us, and we think we are so smart. But are we? After you are broken, then they hasten to protect you. As though a pat on the back will bring back to life something which has been murdered in cold blood!

The Post Impressionist

Trombone Town

Trombones made their appearance in America when a farmer of Lancaster County, Pa., gave to Nicholas Louis, Count Zinzendorf, in 1741, a fine farm of 491 acres complete with springs, for what was was at first called a "congregation" of Zinzendorf's refugee followers. At first the little hamlet had no name; but when Zinzendorf, the leader of the Hussite remnant called Moravians, returned to his native Bohemia, he conferred upon it by letter in 1756 the status of "economy" or industrial community, bestowing at the same time the name of Litiz. This spelling was retained until 1810.

The Moravians are the oldest Protestant sect represented in this country. As a church they date officially from 1456, when the persecuted Bohemians and Moravians who had followed John Huss formed a religious association called Unitas Fratrum under the protection of King George Podiebrad of Bohemia in the barony of Litiz, in what would now be Czecho-Slovakia. The founding of Litiz, Pa., marked the three hundredth anniversary of this occasion.

There were great rejoicings when Litiz, Pa., was christened. The people of the little community held a solemn jubilee—with trombones. Trombones are as old as Moravianism; they even serve as its symbol. Through all their centuries of revolt against Catholicism the Moravians have kept much that is Catholic—a love of great music; a love of the dramatic and the human in religious festival; an emotionalism that has in it nothing of tawdriness, but which in the use of the most majestic music we have still keeps a certain childlike joy in liturgy and church festival. On great days Litiz rings with ancient harmonies and almost smells of incense.

For spiritual guidance and for the antiphonal singing which makes up so large a part of the religious festivals of the Moravians, each congregation is divided into choirs: Children's, Single Sisters', Single Brethren's, Widows', Married People's. Among these are divided the services of the year, including lovefeasts, marriages and funerals. At each of these the trombones play, usually in quartets. Those who know the old chorales can tell at once the age and status of that one for whom the trombones play.

On Christmas Eve it is the Single Sisters, gowned in white, with pink ribbons in their white lace caps, who serve the love feast cake and coffee to the congregation and later bring in the candles. Old customs are hardly broken: From the tall pulpit a child still sings the Morgenstern:

Be thou welcome,
Morning Star in the Holy Night!

as the choir from the loft above the entrance door responds.

Hosanna, praised be
He who cometh . . .

The dramatic moments are still given in German. When the choir sings, "Mache dich auf, es werde Licht!" the procession of white-clad girls moves forward from the east, each bearing a trayful of lighted beeswax candles.

The soft light from the candles (there is no other light in the church now) falls upon the little pink frills under the yellow candles, rises in a straight flame to illumine fair faces under pink ribbon and lace. The procession stops at pew ends; each member of the congregation, whether of the faith or not, takes his candle, as he took his cake and coffee a moment before, and keeps it alight until he goes out into the cold church square, where the lighted windows stretch purple and crimson fingers on the snow.

From some invisible nook the white steeple of the high-shouldered narrow Old World church has been floodlighted, and there is a candle in every window of every house in the three-sided "square." The tall evergreens in the churchyard are covered with snow, and snow crunches underfoot as the quiet congregation turns homeward past the corner where the community shops used to stand from which blacksmiths, organmakers, flutemakers, weavers, used to come each Christmas Eve to a service exactly like the one just over. The congregation turns homeward down a village street where every humble lamppost is hidden by a pointed fir tree with a lighted star atop.

On the way home many stop at the oldest house in the village to see the "putz," or Christmas crib, which the Huebner family has always built and kept from Christmas Eve until the Day of the Kings. This year it is just the same—a rocky hillside with a cave beneath and a village of flat-topped houses above, against a blue sky with a single downward-pointing star. If you sit down in the little ladder-backed chair you can see the Holy Child away back in the cave where the light is. An angel stands near the inner opening; outside the shepherds stand and the kings kneel, quaint little figures from some old European Christmas collection. On the hillside, climbing up the rocks, is a flock of little white lambs. Spotted brown deer graze on the other side.

The Moravian Easter service, out of which grew the Bach Festival of Bethlehem, is very close to the Easter Plays of the Middle Ages. All during Passion Week the grandest and most solemn music of the year is played on the trombones and sung in the churches. Again it is Bach, Beethoven, Bach. Litanies and hymns follow the stations of the cross. The Good Friday liturgy is the noblest of all. It is then that the pastor, the choirs and the congregation sing the exquisite "Jesus Bowed His Head."

On Easter Day, Christ has risen; and early in the morning the trombone players go through the streets to awaken with their Bach and Beethoven those who must go to early service. Before the sun has risen, the trombones are leading the procession up the slope to the old Moravian graveyard with its flat stones arranged, not in families, but in choirs. There, facing the rising sun, the people sing their beautiful litany, and the trombones play the triumphant Easter music, the most glorious of the year.

America And Vichy

Question Of Feeding France

THOMPSON

"TIME" MAGAZINE this week carries a long article on the French and their Friends in the United States, dividing Frenchmen and Friends of France into three categories: the Vichyites, the de Gaullists and those who aren't classifiable under either heading.

The American public is certainly in a dilemma of feeling regarding France, and the statement of the Vichy thesis in the article in Time is hardly calculated to contribute to clarity. This is the statement:

"France did not collapse; France was beaten, after a hopeless fight. Under the terms of the armistice France may do nothing to help Britain—but France will do nothing to help Germany. France must collaborate with Germany until Germany loses the war, but France hopes Germany will lose. Meanwhile, France must be fed, because starvation will drive France into Germany's arms."

I SUBMIT that this is one of the most remarkably confusing statements ever issued on a matter of policy.

If France did not collapse, but was "beaten in a hopeless fight," why is the Vichy government holding former French political and military leaders for trial in Riom?

Apparently somebody has to be held responsible for the lost war, and so M. Blum, Paul Reynaud, M. Daladier and Gen. Gamelin have been picked. Just why it should be these men and not the group who from the beginning held that it was "a phony war," and sabotaged the defense effort all the time is without an answer if one takes the statement as sincere that "France hopes Germany will lose." For if that is so, why do the Vichy government and its representatives abroad fight the de Gaullists with such hatred?

Gen. de Gaulle is actually contributing to help the German's lose; he is continuing to fight. Furthermore, if Gen. Gamelin is being held as a contributing factor to the French defeat, then Gen. de Gaulle, who recommended a quite other military tactic, would seem justified by history and by Vichy itself.

THE VICHY government, to be sure, is a prisoner of the Nazis. It is hardly in a position to lift the banner of de Gaulle on French soil. But it does not need to slander and persecute the de Gaullists either—if it really hopes Germany will lose the war. It could regard the de Gaullists as freebooters outside the range of Vichy control and give them at least the aid and comfort of silence.

After all, if France hopes Germany will lose—which is tantamount to hoping Britain will win—then France must allow Britain to conduct the war as Britain sees fit. For Britain, with little Greece, is carrying the whole burden of a war against supremely heavy odds, a war which engages not only her whole wealth but the life of every man, woman and child on the British Isles.

HOW IN THE WORLD can the Vichy government "collaborate with Germany" and, at the same time, do so only "until Germany loses the war," and, at the same time, maintain the hope that "Germany will lose?"

According to Webster, collaboration means "to labor together and work or act jointly." If that is what Vichy is doing, then Vichy is certainly not "doing nothing to help Germany." You can't "collaborate" and "do nothing to help."

The truth is that the Vichy thesis is thoroughly insincere. The Vichy government does not want the Germans to lose. The Vichy government does not want the British and the de Gaullists to win. Because in that case the Vichy government would be swept from the pages of history. The Vichy government wants Britain to spend her blood and fortune in wearing down the Nazis to the point where a peace can be negotiated that will leave the Vichyites in power.

A British victory would be a victory for a free France in a free Europe; it would not be a victory for the para-Fascism of Marshal Petain. It would not be a victory for a regime that employs its energies in persecuting Free Frenchmen.

THIS COLUMN was never a partisan of the policies of M. Blum nor an enthusiast for M. Daladier or Gamelin. Yet the most controversial figure, M. Blum, is an incorruptible character, and his behavior, since the collapse of France, has been of a calm dignity that puts some others to shame. M. Blum has a son who is a prisoner of war of the Germans, just as much a prisoner of war as any other Frenchman's son.

That in the overwhelming woe of France the Vichy government should concentrate its animus on other Frenchmen; that its representatives abroad should constantly be denouncing the British; that it should have deprived of their nationality persons who deserve at least as well of their country as, let us say, M. Laval; and that having forced them to flee France it should attack them for fleeing; that, unable to make war on its captors, it should make war on Mlle. Curie—than whom no more passionate or disinterested friend of France exists in this world—those are the things that disgust Americans.

AND THESE THINGS complicate the question of American food for France. The question is, for what France? For the France that "must collaborate with Germany" or for the France that "hopes Germany will lose?"

When Americans read that food which is reaching Spain is being distributed to the people along with Falangist propaganda, in order to bribe the people into sympathy with Fascism, the enemy of democracy, our humanitarian instincts turn cold. Frankly, we are becoming sick and tired of having our best instincts exploited against us.

The same government which wants us to feed France also announces a decree this week which bears startling resemblance to the Nazi policy first enunciated in Stuttgart in 1937. The Vichy government intends to "control efficaciously the political action, whether public or private, of all French nationals abroad."

As the Herald Tribune pointed out in an editorial, we are now forced to suspect every French guest of being an agent of the Vichy dictatorship. We already have branches of the Ogpu and Gestapo in this country, and now, it seems, we are to have the French equivalent, too.

THE AMERICAN SYMPATHY for France is sympathy for a people suffering under Nazi tyranny. France, to us, is not just a piece of geography, it is a spirit and a culture—a spirit that cannot be comprehended outside the concepts of Freedom and Fraternity. We love France for her devotion to the humanities, for the generosity of her spirit, for the lucidity of her intellect.

The values of mind and spirit that constitute France—and which a generation of the selfishness and dissension unhappily characteristic of all democracies in this era, including our own, helped to wreck—must be reconstituted if France is to live and Europe is to live.

To help rebuild such a France—and such a Germany—the collaboration of Americans will always be available. But we have no desire to have humanitarianism exploited against the humanities. A French government that indulges in the persecution of its own nationals and minorities and by its own policies adds to the suffering of brave and honest Frenchmen and brave and honest democrats will never be able to appeal to Americans.

America can no longer afford to play the Good Samaritan to the enemies of her basic institutions and her basic ideals. If we give food to France we must be perfectly certain that we are feeding freedom and not tyranny.

Defense 'Resisted'

(Copyright, 1941, by the Newspaper PM, Inc., in the United States, Canada and all the countries in the International Copyright Union. Reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.)

ON THE TRAIN between Seattle and Portland, I met my worried businessman who was worried about too much business. A representative he had in Washington had phoned him the night before that a contract for making some new kind of a gadget for Army camps was "in the bag." All he had to do, he understood, was to sign on a few dotted lines and grab it. And he was rushing down to consult some of his financial backers in San Francisco about it—and fretting his heart out.

"It looks swell on the surface," he laid his troubles before me, "but you got to look at these things from all sides. For instance, to make this stuff in the quantity they want it, I have to practically double my plant. Well, you say. I can get loans for that and some kind of amortization plan that wouldn't look too bad to a fellow going into a steady business. But how do I know it's steady? Where will I be if this defense business blows up two months from now and leaves me with a plant half built and no way to use it?

"And what about my competitors? Won't they, with no Government contracts in their hair, rush in and try to grab away my regular customers? And what about labor? I'll have to double my working force. How do I know I won't get a bunch of labor agitators on the place who will raise hell for me?"

"You know," he ended disconsolately, "a fellow can take one of these contracts and think he's making big money, and wake up some morning to find himself stuck with just a lot of grief."

I HAVE no idea whether he took the contract or with what spirit of caution he is now executing it, but unintentionally my confiding friend did a considerable service to these researchers. He put in words the black American folk fear which I am tempted to list as the "all out" defense program's No. 1 public enemy.

"Suppose I get stuck?"

A few days later in San Francisco, I sat in the grimly furnished office of the C. I. O. labor leader Harry Bridges. At the moment Bridges was in high rage. He was raging against some injunction which the late Senator McAdoo—he was alive then—as head of the President Shipping Lines had managed to wangle from the courts restraining one of Bridges' waterfront unions in some jurisdictional dispute. The general idea of the rage was that, with defense programs, more and more injunction abuses would be revived to "stick" unions with. And worse things.

Next week I was in Los Angeles when the Vultee aircraft strike was rolling up. I couldn't stay to see it happen, but I heard plenty of talk about it—on both sides. The employers' side—I heard it at least twice a day from the brightly dressed, snappy young executives of the Douglas, Lockheed and Vultee plants—ritually began with the familiar one about how happy the men were with their pay and working conditions when they weren't being bothered by a lot of "Communist agitators." But by a little sympathetic questioning it was usually possible to break this down. Then the real employers' side would come out.

As the front-office straw bosses put it, it was this: "Labor's going to gain a lot of power in this war—just as it did in the last one. A lot of these questions of closed and compulsory dealing with unions which out here we still have a fighting chance to argue about, are going to become fixed."

BUT THE MEN on the gigs in the aircraft plants were also thinking about the risks they would run if things should be "frozen" on the labor front. "Look here," they said to me, and cited the lower wages they got for corresponding skills and hours than the unionized aircraft workers in Seattle. "If we wait until the Government outlaws strikes and puts us under compulsory arbitration and all that tripe, we'll be sunk right where we are."

So both sides wanted their test of strength before the final disciplines of an "all out" defense program could be clamped down on them.

It all gets back to a point we have been discussing in all these articles. The physical and military peril in which the United States stands today, is possibly more, certainly not greatly less, than England's after Munich. And in general terms United States opinion certainly wants to bring an efficient, completely rounded, fast-producing defense program into action. But we have hardly put our little fingers to work creating the kind of an "all out" defense program which England has improvised since Dunkirque.

We want an "all out" defense program, but we want our "American way"—as we variously interpret it—along with it. We want more even than "business as usual." On the capital investors' and the employers' side we want a defense program which will actually strengthen "business as usual." The very thought of adjourning the feuds and the competitions of "business as usual" is shocking to the majority of us.

It was as if war and defense programs were simply another form of casual business speculation—in which the precious substance which the gentlemen romantically called "Venture Capital" should be expected to take no more risks than an orphan asylum's trustees take in buying a mortgage.

Nobody was interested, as the British seem to have been under blitzkrieg, in the possibility that for the democracies mere naked survival might become precious. My friends of the streamlined offices and the country clubs were interested in survival with their best clothes on.

Labor at times seemed more interested in getting the perfect insurance policy on its best clothes than in protecting the bodies which might be expected to wear them.

AND THE ARMY officers were spending the fall and winter and most of the spring training the 1940 recruits in the individual mechanics of soldiering as if they had all the time in the world to create a maneuvering army.

"All out" defense, in a word, seemed to be checked and weakened, if not blocked and defeated, by a kind of giddy perfectionism, shared in one degree or another by all the social and economic groups. According to our national spoiled child's philosophy and our class and individual day dreams of good living, we want the good life first, and then may seriously consider going to work with our full powers to preserve it.

Sometimes they left me wondering about something. If the bombs ever begin falling on Main Street, would not the allegorical American citizen rush out into his front yard, social security card in hand, and screaming:

"Hey, you can't do this to me. I'm supposed to live and collect on this."

Britain's Life-Line

IT IS TIME for everyone to realize the grim seriousness of the shipping situation. The experts here are virtually unanimous that the oncoming war crisis will turn on Britain's ability to keep open her shipping life-lines under German air and submarine attacks. Putting it very bluntly, the experts think there is a substantial chance the life-lines will be cut and British resistance broken.

ALSOP

The British government has already appealed for aid, and will soon send to Washington as shipping member of the British Supply Council a man of commanding reputation and unequaled experience. Although the Administration has been strangely paralyzed by the lease-lend debate, ways of giving aid are under consideration. In the end, it is possible to foresee joint planning of the use of British-American merchant marine resources. Meanwhile, it will be well to examine the shipping problem in some detail.

THE EXPERTS' gloom arises from their expectation that when the Atlantic weather moderates, as it is now doing, the Germans will be ready to unleash an air and submarine attack on British shipping far worse than anything yet seen. Established in Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and along the French coast, they have occupied an ideal strategic position for such an attack ever since last spring. Their submarines can no longer be bottled up, as they were in the last war, by mine fields laid at the mouths of the North Sea. Their long-range bombers have all the bases they can wish. During the winter, while crews were being trained, their shipyards have worked 24 hour shifts on submarines, and their air factories have been turning out in quantity their new long-range bomber model, the Focke-Wulf Curier. They have also equipped several additional surface raiders to work out of French ports.

As to the extent of the German strength, there is much disagreement between British and American authorities. The British believe that by hammering the shipyards the RAF has kept submarine output to a minimum, while our people fear it was not much hampered. Sensible men on both sides scout talk of "600 subs," but it is authoritatively estimated that the Germans will be able to keep several scores of submarines, and perhaps as many as 100, continuously at sea.

Furthermore, the German system of using submarines and long-range bombers in combination is peculiarly difficult to beat. The Focke-Wulfs have two sets of bases, one in France, near La Rochelle, and another in Denmark and Norway. They fuel and take on bomb-loads in France, fly out to sea, spot the incoming convoys for the waiting "wolf packs" of submarines, direct the subs to their quarry by radio, drop their bombs and land in Norway or Denmark. There they refuel, take on more bombs, and return. Air attacks have recently accounted for 25 per cent of the British shipping losses. Submarine attacks are also more troublesome to ward off, since the submarines no longer have to surface before sending their sound-directed torpedoes. In at least one recent case, nine simultaneous topedo explosions were a convoy's first warning of the presence of danger.

Many months ago, foreseeing this danger, the British began intensive production of small destroyers and torpedo-carrying corvettes. These vessels, now off the ways in quantity, will diminish the danger to the convoys. But no one doubts that when the Germans send their full strength to sea, British shipping losses will rise terribly beyond the current average of 50,000 to 60,000 tons a week.

There are indications that the rise has started already.

FURTHERMORE, even when convoys slip safely through, war conditions sharply reduce the serviceability of every ton of shipping. Under the convoy system, ships must collect in port until from 16 to 60 are ready to sail, and then proceed across the ocean at the speed of the slowest. Thus the amount of goods the average vessel can carry in a given time is cut in half. The shipping accident rate is very high in the maritime blackout, and repairs are slow with every shipyard jammed with work. And the Mediterranean campaign is a cruel additional strain, since the ships supplying the Greeks and the British army in Africa cannot risk the run through Gibraltar, and must make the immense detour around Africa and up through the Suez Canal.

KINTNER

Finally, because the Germans command the Channel, all ships bringing goods to Britain must dock at the five west coast ports, Glasgow, Liverpool, Bristol, Cardiff and Swansea. Of these, Glasgow alone is untouched. At the others, the harbor facilities are already badly battered. With the German air attack growing stronger, it will become more and more difficult to land the goods from the convoys that get through, and thus new delays will still further reduce shipping efficiency.

In short, although Britain still has close to 20,000,000 tons of merchant shipping available, her resources are even now strained to the utmost. Despite the rumors to the contrary, there is no sign here of any intention to aid the British by sending American warships on convoy duty. But there can be little doubt that Britain's resources will be supplemented in other ways.

The Home Front

A Defense Problem

THE PRESIDENT said a few days ago that finding the right kind of organization for civilian defense activities was one of the toughest administrative problems in his experience.

His opinion finds ready seconds among officials who have put their minds to the question. But some of the confusion may be due to efforts to contrive a completely new administrative framework instead of using the materials at hand. Certainly some is due to competition among officials and agencies to be put in charge.

A scheme which looks simple and workable has been worked out, however. It is similar to, but more complete than, the master plan which has been lying on the President's desk for six weeks.

At the top would be a National Home Defense Council for Volunteer Service. The President could set it up by Executive order under the Council of National Defense, an inactive cabinet body from which the National Defense Advisory Commission legally stemmed.

This home defense council would have 50 members—perhaps half women and half men. These would be prominent civilians, serving without compensation. Their chairman would be appointed by the President. Instead of setting up their own administrative machinery, however, they would have as their executive the Federal Security Administrator, in his capacity as coordinator of defense activities in the fields of health, welfare, education and recreation.

THE MAIN function of the national council would be to prepare a flexible plan for local community organizations of volunteer service. It would work through the State and local defense councils which are being set up all over the country. Already there are 39 State defense councils, and more than 1,000 local ones.

Each local defense council would have a subsidiary Home Defense Council for Volunteer Service. Each would have a volunteer service bureau under trained leadership. All organizations and individuals wishing to volunteer their resources or time would register with these local bureaus.

The local bureaus would steer the volunteers into the activities most needed in the various communities. They would also set up training courses for volunteers without special skills or experience.

This plan combines a central policy-guiding group with local administration. By tying administration to local defense councils, which already contain not only local officials but thousands of prominent private citizens, it avoids duplication of effort and probably a good deal of wasteful rivalry within the localities.

The Federal Security Administrator is a logical executive officer for the program because home defense needs are largely in the fields of health, recreation, welfare, education and related activities. Work in these fields may seem mundane to the patriots who would rather round up spies or practice shooting down parachutists. But many of these more exciting volunteer pursuits are superfluous, if not harmful.

THE FACT that the Federal Security Administrator is Paul V. McNutt will count against this plan in the minds of some of the President's advisers. They have not recovered yet from their shock at Chicago last summer, when they found how great McNutt's political strength was. They acknowledge privately that he deserves a high reward for relinquishing the Vice Presidential nomination which he almost certainly could have had, in spite of the President's insistence on Henry Wallace. But the fear is still profound that if McNutt is allowed to get his head up he will run away with the show.

McNutt is, however, an exceptionally competent administrator. And if, as the President's chief advisers assert, the times are grave enough to require national unity and the putting aside of partisanship, they are certainly grave enough to require the burial of feuds within the Administration.

Home defense of the type outlined above must be differentiated from civilian defense against military attack. The latter includes such problems as bomb-shelters, defense against gas, fire-fighting and the protection of water and gas mains, electrical and telephone cables and other essential services. This also will require some volunteer services. Mayor LaGuardia wants to organize and train thousands of volunteer firemen.

Civilian defense against military attack, especially air attack, must be handled through local officials and defense councils. This is a further argument for hitching all volunteer services to the local defense councils.

Flaws—administrative or political—may be discovered in the plan set forth above. But on its face it is simple and neat, and designed to make the fullest use of existing machinery.

Axis Strategy

By Barnet Nover

Hitler's Plans And Japanese Hopes

WHEN GERMANY, Italy and Japan formed an alliance last September their chief purpose in doing so was to frighten the United States. In effect, this Nation was warned that if we continued to pursue a policy of all-out aid to Great Britain Japan would go to war with us; that if we became embroiled with Japan, Germany and Italy would treat this country as an enemy power.

NOVER

For all of its pretensions, the tripartite alliance was a product of failure. It was the product, first of all, of the failure of Japan to bring her undeclared war on China to a successful conclusion, even though that war had already gone into its fourth year. It was even more the product of Hitler's failure to bring the British to their knees.

Twelve days before the Berlin agreement was signed a Nazi aerial assault on London, the climax of a succession of daylight mass raids on the British capital, was beaten off with the staggering loss of 210 German planes. That great air battle made it clear to the Nazi leaders that the R. A. F. was still unbeatable on its home grounds. As long as that remained true the contemplated invasion of the British Isles had to be postponed. But that very circumstance made it all the more important that the assistance rendered Great Britain by the United States be kept down to the minimum.

AS IT HAPPENED the tripartite alliance completely missed fire, so far as this Nation was concerned. The United States refused to be intimidated. It did not abandon its program of aid to Britain. Nor was it frightened into withholding assistance to China. Such minor triumphs won by the Axis as the adhesion of such satellite states as Slovakia, Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria have been much more than offset by the defeat which Germany, Italy and Japan suffered when both Houses of the American Congress, in each case by a large majority, gave their approval to the lease-lend bill.

The prospect now is of a rapid increase in the volume of help which the United States is to give Great Britain, Greece and China. It is a prospect which will greatly hearten those nations. By the same token it creates a new and dangerous hazard in the path of the Axis partners. Each of them is now compelled to reexamine its position with respect to the United States and also with respect to each other.

THIS TASK is simplest in the case of Italy, most difficult in the case of Japan.

Italy no longer has any freedom of choice in matters of foreign policy. Having suffered a succession of disastrous defeats in Greece, Albania, Libya and East Africa, she must depend on Germany for assistance. And even that assistance will not save her empire. The imperial efforts of two generations of Italians is going down the drain.

Japan is in a very different category. There is nothing which Germany can do for Japan directly except to put further pressure on the Vichy government to give way again to the demands of Tokyo, and to use her good offices in Moscow to come to terms with the island empire. However, if Japan could have any real assurance that Hitler's prospective attack on the British Isles will succeed, nothing else would matter.

Then Japan would be in a position to take the bull by the horns in Southeastern Asia and proceed at once with the effort to bring the Dutch East Indies and British Malaya into what the Nipponese call their "co-prosperity sphere." For if Great Britain goes down to defeat the United States would be under compulsion to move at least part of its Pacific fleet to the Atlantic and thus constitute no obstacle in the path of Japan's southward drive. But if Great Britain cannot speedily be defeated, a Japanese gamble based only on the fact that Hitler is certain to attack the British Isles, might prove catastrophic.

FOR BOTH Germany and Japan the time element is of the very greatest importance. If Hitler is to win he must win this year. By waiting, he might be able to increase the industrial productivity of the vast area he has conquered. But he would also be faced increasingly with the problem of putting down discontent and unrest in the conquered countries. Moreover it may prove impossible, even by garrisoning the country, to prevent an Italian collapse unless succor comes to that country in the form of a total Axis victory. Furthermore, with each passing month the lines connecting Berlin and Moscow may get more and more frayed and may ultimately snap. But above and beyond all there is the fact which Hitler must reckon with that given time America's incomparable resources would really be harnessed to the task of making a British victory certain.

YOSUKE MATSUOKA is going to Berlin. It is the first time a Japanese foreign minister has made that trip. The occasion will be one which the Axis nations are likely to capitalize to its full propagandist value. Representatives of Italy will be on hand as also, no doubt, representatives of the puppet nations which the Axis has taken into camp. But Matsuoka will not go to Berlin for the ride or for the ceremony. He will go to find out what Germany is going to do and how well she can do it. As in Germany, inner compulsions move Japan to keep going from one adventure to another. To wait may be fatal. But the Japanese would prefer to act on a sure thing. Whether Matsuoka will be persuaded that a German victory is certain soon remains to be seen.

America Is Nation Falling in Decay, Says Msgr. Sheen

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, March 9.—The Right Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, professor at Catholic University, Washington, told 3,000 persons at St. Patrick's Cathedral today that many elements of the American way of life are not worth preserving.

Declaring that America was an old nation falling into decay, Msgr. Sheen declared, "most Americans want to keep the country just as it is. The same expediencies in politics, the same godlessness in education; the same infiltration of subversive activities.

"American must learn that its needs as a young nation are not the same as the needs when old and in days of decay. We are not a young nation," he said in the second of a series of Lenten sermons. He added, "America needs saviours who will rescue it from decay, not conquerors to capture fresh ground."

"The American way of life must not be thought of as something to be saved but to be amended. We can be saved from disintegration from within by realizing that much in western civilization deserves to perish," Msgr. Sheen said.

Dr. Cartwright To Repeat Review

Dr. John Keating Cartwright, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception and a member of the faculty of Catholic University, will repeat his review of "Mein Kampf," under the sponsorship of the Critics' Forum — Catholic Thought on the Best Sellers—on Friday evening, March 14, at 8:45 o'clock at the Mayflower Hotel. This second review is the result of popular request as several hundred persons were unable to gain admittance last Thursday night.

Marshalls, Mrs. McLean Give Sunday Parties

Two parties that are fast becoming "Sunday institutions" in this town took place yesterday. The Chief of Staff and Mrs. George C. Marshall gathered in a congenial group for luncheon—and this is getting to be a habit with the Army head and his gracious wife. Mrs. Edward Beale McLean entertained at her usual Sunday evening dinner—and this is more than a habit with the owner of the Hope diamond, it's a rule rarely broken.

The Marshalls' quarters in Fort Myer was abloom with flowers yesterday giving a hint of spring, despite snow blanketing the country side. Honor guests at the luncheon were the Minister from the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close. There were 20 guests in the party.

Long about 8 o'clock a steady stream of limousines, coupes and taxis wound their way up to Friendship, the rambling, friendly home of Mrs. McLean. Alighting from the cars was as widely a diversified group as anyone but Mrs. McLean would dare ask to dine together.

Peruvian Envoy Attends Dinner

Preceding dinner, guests drank their cocktails in the drawing room where fluorescent lights are used at the windows. Mrs. McLean wore a smart dinner dress and the Hope diamond blazed from its jeweled chain. Many of the guests inspected the pine-paneled bar, the room full of china objects or the amazing collection of paper weights arranged in glass topped coffee tables.

Dinner was served at tables for eight and huge standards of spring flowers centered each one. The Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel Freyre y Santander, was among the guests. Being asked about their new baby were the Finnish Minister and Mme. Procope, who had their son, Johan Frederik, christened on Saturday. The baby was christened in a robe presented him by Mrs. McLean.

They may not see eye to eye on the foreign policy, but Senators Bennet Champ Clark, Claude Pepper, Alben Barkley and Hiram Johnson agreed that the movie shown following dinner was excellent. With the exception of Mrs. Barkley, who is away, the wives accompanied their husbands.

Frank Walkers Enjoy Party

The Postmaster General and Mrs. Frank Walker and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins represented the Cabinet last night. The Supreme Court was also well represented. Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas were there as were Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed and Justice Frank Murphy. Senator Theodore Green added his amiable presence to the throng.

An unusually interesting guest was Sir Hugh Dowding, head of the British Air Service who is here on a special mission. Still more Senators adding sparkle to the list were Senator and Mrs. Robert Taft, Senator and Mrs. Alva Adams, Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Senator Robert Reynolds and Senator Joseph Guffey.

Taking time out from investigating was G-man J. Edgar Hoover. Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins delighted her dinner guests with stories of South America. Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt was there as were Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Berle, Father Edmund J. Walsh, commandant of the Navy Yard and Mrs. George Pettengill, Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles, and Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold.

Mrs. M. E. Taylor, Col. A. M. Heritage Are Married

The marriage of Mrs. Marion E. Taylor, of Washington, to Col. Arthur M. Heritage, Chemical Warfare Service, U. S. A., has been announced by the bride's father, J. S. Bretz.

The ceremony took place on Saturday at noon at the home of Gen. and Mrs. Charles D. Hartman, 1870 Wyoming Avenue. The couple will be at home at the Kennedy - Warren Apartments after April 1.

Wrights, Soon To Leave, Give Family Party

Commander and Mrs. Jerauld Wright, who will leave next Sunday for Honolulu, were hosts at a family party yesterday afternoon following the christening of their small daughter in their quarters at the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

Wearing an heirloom christening robe—which had been worn by her mother—the baby was named Marion for Mrs. Wright's mother, Mrs. Phillips B. Thompson. The Thompsons had come down from New York for the ceremony. Serving as godmothers were Mrs. Lee Warren and Mrs. George Garrett. The godfather was Col. John Thomason. Chaplain Thomas, of the Naval Academy, officiated at the ceremony.

Other members of the family on hand for the party were Mrs. David Key, of Connecticut, who was accompanied by her daughter, Marjorie; Roger Tuckerman, of New York, and his daughter, Nancy; Mrs. William Mason Wright, the baby's paternal grandmother, and Maj. Mason Wright.

Debs to Usher At 'Candida'

A group of debutantes will usher at the presentation of "Candida" to be put on by the Villagers dramatic group at the State Theater in Falls Church, Monday, March 17, at 8:30 p. m. Proceeds will go to Bundles for Britain.

Ushers will include Miss Betty Stewart-Richardson, Miss Kitty Hill, Miss Marion Norris, Miss Mary Theresa Norris, Miss Elaine Darlington and Miss Mildred Dunn.

The Belgian Ambassador, Count vander Straten-Ponthoz, is among the patrons which include Mrs. Raymond E. Lee, Mrs. Lewis Cheesman and the Rev. and Mrs. Stanley Brown-Sermon.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

COURTLAND H. SMITH, mayor of Middleburg, was chairman pro-tem at two meetings held recently to organize a Virginia Breeders Association. "Courtie" is considered the best all around horseman in America and is thoroughly informed on all types of horse. For years he owned the best show string in the country. He was a breeder of thoroughbreds, trained steeplechasers which he rode himself and was the outstanding amateur jockey in the country. "Courtie," driving his coach and four in the show ring and along country roads with a party of friends is something to be remembered. In his stables are grand hunters that carry him and his family right up front. In recent years he has bred and raised on his farm, Clydesdales, heavy draft horses, originally imported from Scotland.

Mr. Smith says the half-bred hunter of years back were much better than they are today, for their dams were the fine, well-bred diving horses and riding horses of times that are no more. Wherever this sage of the horse is found speaking you will see young horsemen hanging on his words.

IT WAS DECIDED to name the new breeders organization. "The Virginia Horsemen's Association, Inc." Kenneth Gilpin, of Boyce, was elected president; David N. Rust, of Leesburg, vice president; Henry W. Front, jr., secretary; Colin MacLeod, jr., treasurer. The directors were divided into groups and are as follows—representing the press, Walter Craige, of the Times-Dispatch, Richmond; Hubert Phipps, publisher of the Eastern Breeder magazine and the Fauquier-Democrat, a county paper that comes out twice a week in Warrenton; Stacy Lloyd, of Millwood, publisher of the Middleburg Chronicle, a horse paper, and the Clarke Courier, a weekly, at Berryville.

Representing the thoroughbred will be Kenneth Gilpin, Boyce; H. Rozier Dulany, jr., of Upperville, and Washington; David N. Rust, Leesburg; Whitney Stone, Charlottesville; Christopher T. Chenery, Doswell; Colin MacLeod, Middleburg, and Mrs. Marion duPont Scott, Montpelier, near Orange, Va.

Hunter representatives include Alex MacKay-Smith, White Post; Mrs. Cary Jackson, Keswick, and Mrs. Fay Ingalls, Hot Springs. Draft horse representatives: Hayward C. Thompson, Round Hill; Dr. C. A. Bocock, Bristow; Prof. R. E. Hunt, of V. P. I.

United States Remount Service: Lieut. Col. Pleas B. Rogers, Front Royal. Pony breeders represented by Mrs. James C. Hamilton, Warrenton. The group of three to represent the saddle horse was left open, but among those suggested were Dr. Huston Sinclaire and Lewis Tierney.

IN INTRODUCING the constitution and by-laws, Col. Rogers said dues had been made low enough so every farmer with only one or two mares would want to and could afford to become a member. So much interest has been given this venture that a number of prominent breeders throughout Virginia have subscribed $100 each, and many others have subscribed. Any one interested in the welfare and breeding of the horse can become a member of the Virginia Horsemen's Association for $5.

Turner H. Wiltshire, of Middleburg, has sold his good steeplechase horse, Houseman, to Christopher Greer, of Old Melbourne, near Bluemont. Houseman won many races for Mr. Wiltshire, among recent races being those won last fall during the hunt racing season, namely the Long Island Hunt Cup; the Mount defiance Cup, at Essex Hunt, in New Jersey, and the Loyal Hanna Steeplechase, at Rolling Rock Hunt, in Pennsylvania. Mr. Greer will run this good timber horse at the spring hunt races.

Houseman already has been entered at the Deep Run meeting, for the first week in April, and more than likely that is where he will be seen first this spring. Johnny Harrison, of Philadelphia, trainer and rider of Houseman, has arrived in Middleburg and has several horses in training here. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison have leased a small house, from Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shirley Turner, on Goodstone Farm, and have set up housekeeping in Virginia for the spring months. They are a great addition to and are popular in the younger set of the hunt country.

D. A. R. Chapter To Meet Today

The Army and Navy Chapter of the D. A. R. will hold its regular monthly meeting today at the Army and Navy Club, Seventeenth and I Streets. The speakers will be Mrs. Wilfred J. Clearman, State chairman of the Filing and Lending Bureau Committee; Miss Charlotte Gartland, State chairman of the Good Citizenship Pilgrimage, and Mrs. George C. Ober, jr., State chairman entertainment.

The regent of the chapter, Mrs. Hubert E. Paddock, will preside.

David Rankin Barbee, columnist, historian and author, will speak on "Major Pierre Charles L'Enfant" before the Filing and Lending Bureau Committee of the District D. A. R. at 8 p. m. Friday at the Chapter House, 1732 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Mrs. Wilfred J. Clearman, State chairman of the committee, will preside. Miss Gernaine Johnson will sing period French songs.

Coast Guard League Of Women to Meet

The Washington unit of the Coast Guard League of Women will hold its regular monthly meeting, followed by a tea, at 2:30 this afternoon, at Tilden Gardens, the home of Mrs. L. T. Chalker.

2 State Units Plan St. Patrick's Fete

The Iowa and Nebraska State Societies of Washington will join Saturday evening in a St. Patrick's party in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel.

Several attractive features have been planned for the evening. On the program will be Maj. E. L. Dyer, Roderick Bacon of the Greek Dramatic Academy, Miss Cynthia Eden from England and there also will be a floor show, and dancing from 10 to 1.

Representative John W. Gwynne, from the Third Congressional District, is the president of the Iowa Society; Howard Blanchard, official of the Union Pacific Railroad, is the president of the Nebraska State Society.

Tickets can be obtained from Miss Gertrude M. Louis, at the Roosevelt Hotel or Mr. Blanchard, National Press Building.

Mt. Pleasant Y. W. C. A. To Meet Thursday

The executive board of Mount Pleasant Chapter of the Y. W. C. A., will meet Thursday at 1 p. m. in the E Street Branch, 614 E Street. The regular meeting will convene at 1:30 p. m., with the president, Mrs. W. M. Coffman, presiding.

Miss Florence Dunlap, Camp Kalert secretary, will speak on the accomplishments of the camp. The nominating committee will be elected at this meeting.

Miss Pat Jarrett Gives Cocktail Party at Legation

Celebrating her birthday anniversary Miss Pat Jarrett, of the Australian Legation, gathered in a small group of friends yesterday afternoon for cocktails. The party was given at White Oaks on Cleveland Avenue which serves as the legation.

The Minister and Mrs. Richard G. Casey attended the party. Among others were the Naval Attache, Commander Henry M. Burrell; Second Secretary of the British Embassy, Angus Malcolm; Assistant Naval Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. A. W. Clark; Otway Smithers, also of the British Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Turner Calledge and Mr. and Mrs. Max Boyd.

Montgomerys Return

Mr. and Mrs. William Montgomery have returned to their home, Blythe Knoll, on Nebraska Avenue after spending the winter at the Breaker's Hotel in Palm Beach, Fla.

Foote–Doeg Prenuptial Lunch Today

Prenuptial parties for Mrs. Scudder Doeg and Edward Addison Foote took the spotlight over the weekend and will be climaxed today with a luncheon given by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Scudder, at the 1925 F Street Club, in honor of the out-of-town guests.

The wedding ceremony today will be a quiet one, attended only by members of the family and a few close friends, at Mrs. Doeg's Georgetown home. It was only late last week that announcement of the impending nuptials was made. A flurry of parties immediately ensued.

A breakfast party, given by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Block, started the ball rolling yesterday. Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. William Sprague entertained at a cocktail party in honor of the couple. Still later Miss Ruth Tuckerman was hostess at a buffet supper at Tuxeden, the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman.

Those attending the breakfast party included Mr. and Mrs. Scudder, down from Newark, N. J., for the ceremony; Mrs. Edward A. Foote, of Cleveland, Ohio, mother of the prospective bridegroom; Edward and Richard Scudder, brothers of Mrs. Doeg, of Rumson, N. J., and Robert Walker, of Rumson; Edward Williams, of Cleveland, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Burr Freeman, of New York; Miss Jean Conrad, Mrs. William T. Mann and Mrs. James Hunting Turner, mother of Mrs. Leonard.

Roy C. Dawsons On Wedding Trip Through South

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Carlton Dawson are on their Southern wedding trip and will visit New Orleans. The marriage of the former Miss Virginia Trullinger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Trullinger, took place Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Church of Our Saviour, with the Rev. Alvin Lamar Wills officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a suit of pale blue and a corsage of orchids. Her flowered hat matched the ensemble. Miss Ernestine M. Loeffler was the bride's only attendant. She wore a suit of dubonnet. William A. Nolte was best man.

A reception and buffet supper was given at the home of the bride's parents. White flowers were used with palms to decorate the house.

The bride was graduated from Ohio State University. Mr. Dawson, who is the son of Mrs. Virginia Dawson, was graduated from the University of Maryland. Both received M. S. degrees at the University of Maryland.

The H. B. Le Roys to Be at Home In Alexandria After March 15

MRS. HAROLD B. LE ROY

Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Le Roy will be at home after March 15 at No. 5 Auburn Court in Auburn Gardens, Alexandria, Va. The marriage of Miss Bonnie Elizabeth King, daughter of Mrs. Bonnie L. King, of Arlington, Va. took place last month in the Calvary Methodist Church in Arlington with the Rev. Thomas G. Beschler officiating. The church was decorated with Southern smilax and standards of white gladioli and lilies.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Fay M. Thomas, of New York City. She wore an antique ivory gown made with lace and trimmed with pearls. Her finger tip veil was of duchess lace. She carried a prayer book with an orchid and showers of lilies of the valley.

Miss Charlotte King was her sister's maid of honor. She wore a pink marquisette and lace gown and carried an arm bouquet of roses. Another sister, Miss Janet King and Miss Louise Griffith were bridesmaids. They were dressed in similar frocks one in aqua and the other in yellow. They carried spring flowers.

Robert Clements was best man. Ushers were William Woodruff, and Everett Babcock.

A reception for the wedding party and immediate families was held at the home of the bride. Mrs. Le Roy attended Antioch College in Ohio. Mr. Le Roy attended Maryland University. Mrs. I. D. King, of Richmond, Va., grandmother of the bride, came up for the wedding and others from out of town included Mr. and Mrs. Fay M. Thomas, of New York City, Mrs. E. L. Fay and Mr. and Mrs. Waverly G. King, of Richmond and Paul Smith of Yellow Springs, Ohio.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

TO BE HOUSE GUESTS of one of Washington's most popular hostesses and to be entertained at luncheon by another equally charming Capital personage was the pleasant lot of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Burden, of New York, last weekend. The Burdens spent a few days with Mrs. Robert Low Bacon and were guests of honor at a gay and cozy Saturday luncheon given at the 1925 F Street Club by Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins. As if that, plus the Burdens' own charm, weren't enough of an "open sesame" to Washington, the visitors were taken in tow after luncheon by capable Mrs. Warren Austin and whisked off to the Capitol to hear the last of the debate on bill 1776.

At luncheon Mrs. Robbins seated her guests at a long, narrow table which permitted conversation with one's vis-a-vis as well as with one's neighbors. Across the fragrant red roses which were placed at intervals down the table, I talked to Anthony Balasy about his life in London during the last two years. He spoke of many old friends of Washington who are there now, among them Col. and Mrs. Martin Scanlon. "Mike" Scanlon is air attache at the United States Embassy in London and Gladys is one of the few remaining American diplomatic wives—or perhaps the only one—left in the bombed city. Someone remarked "how brave of Gladys to stay on amid the bombs, especially as she is rather high-strung and nervous." And another old friend immediately countered that Gladys' nervousness was surpassed by her curiosity and that she was too afraid of missing something to mind a few explosions. In fact, a bomb did land near her one evening as she was walking her dog and even that didn't scare her.

Also in London now is Charles Ritchie, formerly of the Canadian Legation here who sent messages to his friends by Mr. Balasy and who hopes for leave in Canada next summer with a visit to Washington thrown in.

Ranking lady at Mrs. Robbins' luncheon was attractive Mrs. Stanley Reed and next was Mrs. Warren Austin who brightened the dark day with a dove gray costume and a matching hat with small pink wings. Mrs. Robbins and Donna Julia Brambilla wore ever-chic black, as did Mrs. Bacon and Mrs. Burden, the latter two having added crisp touches of white to their costumes.

The gentlemen at Mrs. Robbins' luncheon-party were the Peruvian Ambassador, always delightfully philosophical and humorous; Chester Burden, Glenn Abbey, Myron Hofer, Ulysses Grant Smith, Joseph Alsop and Anthony Balasy.

DINING WITH the Minister of Finland and pretty Mme. Procope I met Mrs. Victor Marowetz, of New York, who had come to Washington to be godmother to the Procopes' baby son. As the christening had taken place that afternoon toasts were still in order by way of congratulation and good-luck. A toast to the baby was proposed by the Norwegian Minister in an amusing little speech, followed by toasts to the godmother and the parents. Our host himself, after lifting his glass in "skol" to each of the guests, proposed a toast to his wife. He said that a Finnish custom demanded that a man either drink a toast to his wife, or give her a pair of silk stockings next day.

One of the Americans at the dinner pointed out that the young Procope, having been born in Washington, could become President of the United States. The idea so pleased Mrs. Morowetz that the proud godmother began making plans for his future in the White House and said that the baby already has the air of a presidential candidate.

Others dining with the Procopes that night were that favorite couple, the Norwegian Minister and his engaging wife, Mr. and Mrs. Burrall Hoffman; Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, and Albert Hoffman, who is visiting his brother and sister-in-law and who has often been in the Capital as the guest of the Snowden Fahnestocks.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Invited by Polite Acquaintance to 'Tea Shower' For Bride-to-Be She Barely Knows, Woman Goes And Is Bored and Irked; Is Her Attitude Justified?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: If provincialism has led me to pass false judgment on a recent social affair to which I was invited, please set me right. The invitation was to a tea and lingerie shower for a bride-to-be. It has always been my understanding that invitations to showers of so intimate a nature are confined to close friends of the honor guest. It is true that I know the girl who was honored on this occasion, and I also know the hostess, in a rather casual way. But our intimacy goes no further than an infrequent evening at bridge, perhaps once every three months, and dinner and a movie at even greater intervals. Naturally I was a bit taken aback by the demand of the invitation, but I dutifully brought my gift, arriving at the appointed hour.

The hostess greeted me with, "I'm so glad to see you. You are the first person to come that I know!" With increased skepticism about the sincerity of the "tea," I gave the hostess my gift, only to be completely stunned with, "It looks as though Mary were going to make a good haul." The stack of packages did look rather promising.

There were a goodly number of women in the living room who were utter strangers to me, and judging from the rather heavy silence which filled the room, it seemed that most of the guests were only slightly acquainted, if at all,—and that the weather, as a topic of conversation, had been exhausted. There were a few persons from the same office who created conversation by business chat, but on the whole it was pretty stiff and extremely stuffy. Each arrival meant another round of introductions. Some of the guests I knew slightly—but well enough to feel safe in wagering that none of them is a close friend of the bride-to-be.

Eventually the "opening" of the packages began, and instead of the usual air of grace and spontaneity which one expects at affairs of the kind, there was much embarrassing awkwardness. It developed that the hostess had also sent invitations to out-of-town friends (they could almost be considered intimates), who were hundreds of miles away, yet who perforce sent gifts.

Am I wrong in seeing this "tea" merely as a connivance to make the aforementioned "haul?" Or is my belief that "showers" of this kind should be limited to very close friends, the result of having lived long in a small city,—where friendships span a number of years and are the outgrowth of close, continuous, pleasant associations? Yours,

PUZZLED.

Woman's Resentment Has Emotional Base

DEAR PUZZLED: What is any "shower" but a polite "connivance" on the part of all concerned to make the honor guest the beneficiary of a "haul"—collected in the guise of a free-will offering? Your disapproval of the recent occasion is more an emotional than a rational reaction. If the hostess felt herself obliged to call in guests from the highways and byways, figuratively speaking, it probably was because she was resourcefully adapting to the circumstances of her residential situation.

Washington, as everyone knows, is and has been for years—and every year becomes increasingly—a "city of transients," wherein citizens of the "floating population," if they are of friendly temperament, act on the sensible (and surely Christian or God-given) assumption that every likeable acquaintance is a potential friend; and further proceed, on the basis of this assumpiton, to break with regional or Victorian tradition, in the matter of compiling guest-lists for various types of parties they plan.

It appears that you are a comparative newcomer to Washington. Perhaps your hostess belongs in the same category, as well as most of the guests—including the honor guest—bidden to the "shower tea." Since most of you were, presumably, more or less in the same boat, it seems to me the hallmark of civilized character of each, or all, of you, would have been to pull together in helping the hostess put the party across. Instead, it seems, most of you stood guardedly apart, like so many primitive or jungle creatures, animated by the theory that "what is strange is hostile (or offensive) to me."

Your conviction that the party was a flop, and deservedly so; because (in your opinion), the hostess had no business staging the affair on the scale she did, probably goes back to the frame of mind which you took to the party. I suppose you went grudgingly, annoyed by the fact that you were going to be taxed an admission fee of sorts,—and that this annoyance flared into suppressed rage when your hostess, with truly sophisticated candor, blithely called a spade a spade, in conceding the anonymous and miscellaneous nature of her guest list and the practical purpose for which they had been summoned!

I have a feeling that if most of the guests had been up to the mental and social level of outlook of the hostess, the party would have been a rollicking event. I think it is rather to her credit that she didn't try to put a simpering false face on the affair; and I imagine she paid off each individual guest for his contribution to the honor guest, in terms of food and drink and the opportunity (for those who had the wit to employ it), to find at least one person in the grab-bag assemblage who was worth talking to, and perhaps cultivating thereafter as a friend.

As a matter of fact, any one "good guest" may—if he will, and on his own power—"put a party over," even after it begins to look as if it were falling to ruins around a hard-working "hostess" head. And it has always seemed to me that a guest takes with him to any party an obligation to contribute to an atmosphere of spontaneous cordiality among fellow-guests. The person who fails to do this is either so lacking in social gifts, or so remiss in his social obligation, as to have no right to complain of "wretched times that were had by all," at any parties where he has been.

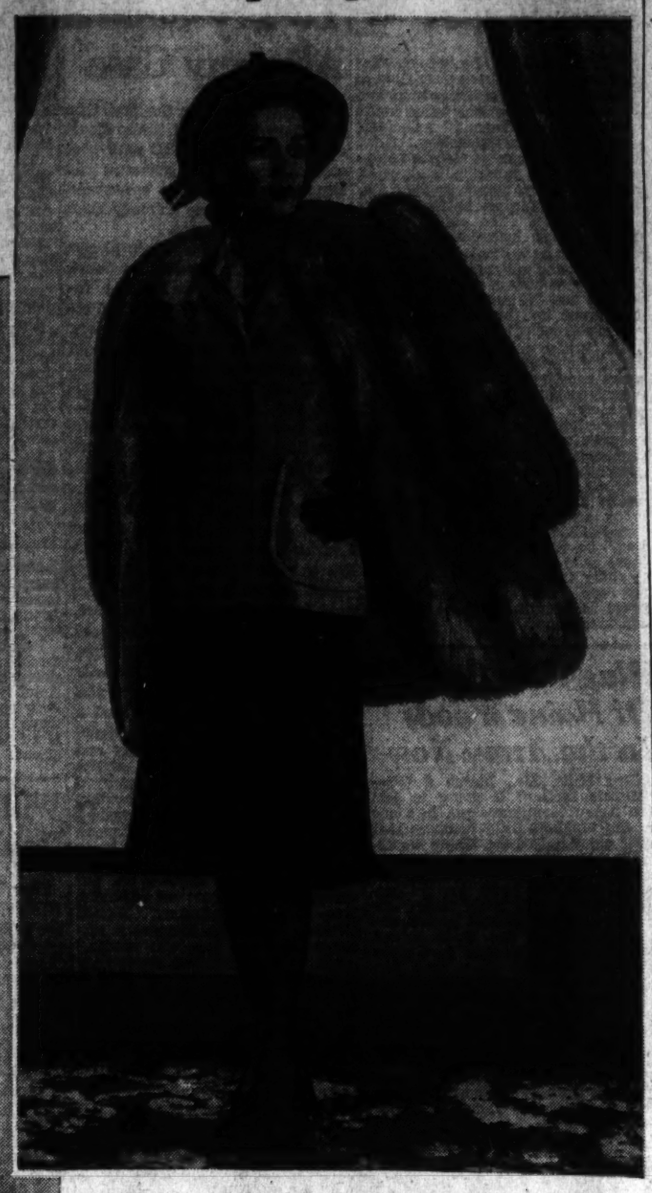
Furs Now Contribute Color to Spring Ensembles

Color invades the world of furs for spring and summer wear. Beige is the by-word, as furs are taking on a pale blond look. Beige muskrat, broadtail and fox are up-to-the-minute fashions. If furs are not white and sleek or in one of the taupe shades, then they will be rich and dark—almost black. Below—Barbara Stanwyck, movie star, wears sables which appear almost inky over her lightweight woolen dress



Displayed in a fashion show by a local store at the Shoreham recently was the striking ensemble above. Underneath the natural lynx greatcoat is a striking sports outfit featuring beige and brown. The jacket, of nude fleece, and cut like a man's sack coat, is worn over the ever-smart gabardine brown skirt. The lynx greatcoat is one of the longer variety of jackets. Capes, too, are important in this new longer length as well as the shorter ones of from 14 to 18 inches. This ensemble will serve for widely varied occasions

The following is one of a series on "The Personality Glamorous," by Miss LaJeanne DeSpain, expert on beauty, charm, style, love, window boxes, international relations and needlepoint.)

By LaJeanne DeSpain

How the hurried career woman may appear glamorous and devastating at a party is my subject for today. I find from my research that far too many women executives and workers go to social events looking strained, distraught and exhausted and without that meticulous grooming that men so greatly admire.

Miss De Spain

There is absolutely no reason why the career woman should not be as fresh, vibrant and magnetic, and as exquisitely attired as the parasitical wife or debutante. All that is needed is clever planning.

Now, suppose you are due at a dinner at 7:30 o'clock. Try to get away from your office not later than 5:30. Now, it may be, of course, that your boss will have a bright idea—and probably some extra work—around 5:30, also that assistants, colleagues, office boys and strange voices on the telephone will seek to defeat your plans. Nevertheless, be firm—and, even if you are held up until 6 o'clock—you still have ample time in which to make yourself lovely, provided you systematize your plans.

Don't Hurry— Just Relax

On arriving home, your first step is to relax. While you are relaxing, make yourself a cup of hot cocoa or a bowl of soup, or even a pep cocktail (made by squeezing the juice of two lemons, one orange and one grapefruit, shaking well, and springling with vitamin B1).

After your relaxing comes your bath. I would advise a Pasteurized milk bath for reaching the ultimate stage of allure. While you are running the bath and charging it with the necessary herbal juices, mineral and vegetable oils, bubble salts, dehydrated perfumes, etc., cleanse your face, arms and throat with Undine cream No. 333, then massage in gently Anna Held nourishing cream No. 555 and massage your body with Cleopatra herbal oil No. 999.

After you have assembled your assortment of brushes for arms, legs, back, chest, elbows, knees, toes, fingers, etc. step into the foamy brine, lie back and relax for 15 minutes. Next give yourself a thorough rubbing with your brushes, and on emerging from the tub apply body oils, then a body cream, then your cologne, and finally dust lightly with bath powder.

More Relaxing And Anointing

Now, donning your negligee, relax again on your divan—this time with a Lady Hamilton masque cream, No. 888, on your face and Messalina eye paste No. 444 around your eyes. Cover your eyes with cotton pads soaked in DuBarry lotion No. 666.

After you are thoroughly rested, arise, remove your creams and brush your hair 5,000 times until it has that glossy sheen that men love.

Now you are ready to begin your make-up with your astringents, skin toning lotions, foundation creams, various shades of face powder, rouge, eye shadow, mascara, etc.

Relax again after your make-up, then do your posture exercises, so you can make a dramatic entrance. Relax again, then don your dress, reinspect your make-up, rearrange your hair, add your perfume and other finishing touches. Just before you start, take a final relaxing and at this time concentrate on some noble verse or inspiring motto.

Of course there may be some unexpected accidents to impede you—such as a buckle off a slipper, a mislaid evening bag or gloves, a hem or a seam that is out, a run in your party hose, etc., but remain serene. With proper planning you can take care of these difficulties and arrive at the dinner—a trifle late, perhaps, but a beautiful, radiant—and relaxed—woman.

Count Calories To Reduce

SUCH A struggle for Mrs. Stout—getting into her "armor plate" style corset! And even such strenuous measures as this don't conceal her matronly bulges.

But on a slimming low-calory diet she could lose at the rate of 10 pounds in five weeks, make those dreams of a one-piece girdle and youthful dresses come true!

It's not how much but what you eat that counts. Meals that are heavily laden with calories soon pile on the pounds. A cup of cream of corn soup (200 calories), 2 pop-overs with butter (300) and banana and nut salad with mayonnaise (300) add up to a total of 800 calories!

Think of it—without starving or being a martyr you can regain that "perfect 36!" Just keep an eye on your calory chart, avoid pound-givers like baked beans (300 calories a cup) and lemon meringue pie (300 calories a serving). Substitute buttered string beans, 86 a cup; lemon jelly, 100 a serving.

Red and Green Seen on Shoe Front

Everyone it seems is going to want something red this spring. Some will want a pretty big dose—a bright red reefer worn over a beige or navy suit. Or just a bit of red such as matching shoes and hat, or shoes and handbag. Red shoes are going to be big news this spring—red alligators particularly.

Green, too, is a color that will be putting its best foot forward this spring. And the beige-to-brown family all set to give navy some stiff competition. One of the new pilot green suits will look stunning with a pair of bright red alligator pumps or sandals. The new beige, maple or navy alligators, too, will be smart this spring.

Youth Secret: Keep From Getting Rusty

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE are words that pair off together because of their natural association, such as young and supple, old and stiff.

But I have seen young people who were not supple, and some older ones who were. I know a woman of 60 who has always kept active and who is more supple than many a woman in her thirties. A Spartan resident of Greenwich Villiage, who is well past 60, scorns the elevator and trots up and down five flights of stairs several times a day. She claims it is good exercise and that it keeps her young. She is certainly more agile than a woman of about 40 I saw trying to hoist herself up on one of those high chairs at a lunch counter in Pennsylvania Station. She was stiff, overweight and puffing, and she couldn't make it by herself. She had to be helped up.

Don't Get Creaky

It seems to be true that people rust out more than they wear out. And the pity of it is that just a little exercise will keep anyone from growing stiff and creaky. And if you object violently to exercise, you can skip the calisthenics and keep flexible simply by putting your joints through their full range of motion every day. Because of the stimulation to the nerve endings in the joints, this also gives you an infinitely increased sense of well being.

Here is a tip-to-toe program that will keep you flexible:

Begin with the neck. Tip the head backward until it rests between the shoulders, then circle around until it rests on one shoulder, down in front, and over to the other shoulder. Do this very slowly, or it will make you dizzy.

Now for the shoulders. Let the arms hang limply at the sides and move the shoulder tips in backward circles. Hunch the shoulder tips close to the ears, the move them backward—drawing shoulder blades together, then releasing as shoulders move in the downward arc. Perform very slowly. You will find that shoulder circling helps to untie nerve knots at the base of the neck. After you have finished that, swing alternate arms freely from shoulders in wide backward circles. Then swing arms in front simultaneously, crossing them and flinging them out at sides.

For the Hips

Now for the hip joints. Place one hand on a chair or table for support, and swing opposite leg loosely from the hip joint, up in front and out in back. Don't make an exercise of it. Just swing loosely and easily. Then swing other toe.

That brings you to your knees. Sit on a table and swing alternate legs back and forth in a loose-jointed rhythm.

Finish by circling feet at the ankles, and hands at the wrist, and flexing fingers and toes.

Plan Apartment to Suit Plans For Living, Bride Is Advised

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

WHAT should a bride do with $2,000 and a four-room apartment? Well, that's enough to thrill—and panic—any girl. So, S. G. writes to us for help in planning the furnishing for her new little home on that sum. Some friends tell her that each room may be furnished in a different period; she thinks that the apartment ought to all be done in the same general style. Naturally she's perplexed and wants to know the answers. Another problem is about color—if she decides on a basic color scheme of gray, rose and blue, how should she go about carrying it out? What are the most important "do's" and "don't's?" she asks. And about how much should she spend on each room? How much for draperies?

Alas, there are no hard and fast answers to any of these questions. For nearly any decorating rule can be broken, providing it's broken with style. However, your questions are all practical, legitimate, to the point and so we will try to help with suggestions that we hope will be a guide.

As to different periods for each room, that's a matter of personal preference. You could use several different styles in the same room and get away with it—and so it's quite possible to succeed with each room in a different style. But we think your idea of keeping the whole thing in the same general style is a safer and more tranquil solution for a small apartment. In working out the color schemes, we'd plan the living room and dinette with a background in pale grays (rug and walls), then have a figured material for draperies and maybe one or two upholstery coverings (this material to combine your three colors), then have other upholstery in blues and in rose fabrics. The bedroom might then take one of these colors and combine it with some other color—to harmonize but not just repeat the same effect. For instance, a bedroom all in blue and white could be delightful. Or a bedroom all in rose and white might be pretty. Or you might use the same flowered chintz here as in the living room, but with white for walls, curtains, spreads and washable tufted rugs.

The most important "do's" are: Choose styles and colors you and your fiance feel comfortable with; plan the apartment for the sort of life you will live, the things you like to do; buy fewer and better pieces; be sure to have one dominating piece, perhaps a breakfront; but fewer and bigger accessories. The chief "don'ts" are: Don't clutter the place up with too many little oddments; don't crowd with too much furniture; don't plan too pretentiously for the size and means of the apartment; don't feel you must buy everything at once.

New Beater and Bowl Simplifies Dessert Making

A dessert idea I cannot resist rooting for is the dessert luncheon. You invite your guests to skip dessert at home and drop in at your house for it. And when you say dessert, you mean just that, supplemented only with a beverage. This dessert idea is especially good for afternoon bridge parties, because you can serve the guests before the game and thus not spoil their appetites for the dinner hour.

For desserts to serve at such time, I would suggest an English almond souffle. It is easy to assemble, and especially so if you have one of the new de luxe members of the beater-and-bowl family.

This new type beater beats the egg yolks and whites in rapid time, and the same goes for cream when it is to be whipped. This beater operates on the angle-beating principle (like whipping cream with a spoon) with cross-hatch design of turbine blade (knife-like edges which break up cream while aerating it).

The sturdy platonite bowls of these sets are specially designed with modern horizontal line treatment to be used for table service. They are available in five colors—Chinese red, green, white, blue and yellow. Enhancing the colorful design of the bowl are the streamline red plasting handle with matching gear knob and the brightly finished, cobalt nickeled steel part.

The attractiveness of the bowl is the least of its virtues, for it is very efficient—a half pint of cream can be whipped in half a minute. Eggs, salad dressings, etc., are handled in a similar speedy fashion. There is no spattering, no slipping and sliding of a conventional beater around the smooth bottom of a common kitchen bowl.

If you can use one of these tricky whippers you can whip up the English almond souffle in record time. Here is the recipe:

English Almond Souffle

Sift 2/3 cup sugar. Beat until light 8 egg yolks. Add the sugar gradually. Beat constantly until the yolks are creamy. Fold in 2 teaspoons grated lemon rind, ½ pound almonds, blanched and ground. Whip until stiff 8 egg whites to which has been added ½ teaspoon salt. Fold them lightly into the yolk mixture. Place the batter in a greased baking dish. Set it in a pan of hot water. Bake it in a moderate oven, 325 degrees until firm—about 45 minutes. Serve with wine sauce.

Wine Sauce—Stir with a wire whisk in a double boiler until thick and frothy, ½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons grated lemon rind, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, ½ cup wine and 3 beaten eggs.

Dies Predicts Sabotage Blitz On British Aid

By International News Service

Agents of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis and Russia will stage a "sabotage blitz" throughout the United States in the next fortnight in a joint attempt to prevent aid to Great Britain under the lease-lend program from reaching effective proportions, Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Committee on un-American activities, predicted last night.

Informers brought him word in the closing days of the Senate battle over the bill, Dies said, that upon its enactment a concerted Axis-Communist drive would be launched to retard American war production and nullify benefits to Britain under the legislation, and that detailed plans to this end already were complete.

Dies said his information, offered by "informers within foreign-controlled organizations who have never been wrong before," was to the effect there would be a sharp increase both in defense industry strikes, and in "explosions, wrecks, and other industrial 'accidents.'"

Trained Saboteurs

"Every form of sabotage is going to be resorted to by this tightly knit, expertly trained corps of foreign saboteurs and spies," Dies declared. "Some of their work will bear the semblance of legality. I refer to Communist-inspired strikes which are ready to go. Other acts will be plainly illegal and violent, but will be so engineered as to erase any sign of sabotage."

Dies said his committee has positive evidence the German, Italian, Japanese and Russian espionage forces here have secretly banded together to attain common objectives.

"Their major aim now is to take the sting out of the lease-lend bill," he said, "and they are determined to impede our production, to curtail the promised flow to Britain by fair means or foul."

Any such sequel to the action of Congress, it was learned, is among the contingencies which have long been considered, and prepared for by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Plans are under way to provide funds for an increase of 700 special agents.

Director J. Edgar Hoover, supervising hundreds of factory surveys to insure against espionage and sabotage, has declared his bureau competent to meet any emergency in this field.

Dies criticized the Federal Government, however, for what he termed failure to act upon "conclusive evidence" which he said his committee had furnished, showing strong Communist influence in ten national labor unions, and presence of German citizens in key defense industries.

"Strikes are more effective sabotage than bomb throwing," he said. "Immediate aftermath of this active gesture of aid for Britain will be slow-downs, sit-downs and work stoppages in our defense industries. Persons inspiring them will find some pretext to make them appear within the pale of law and justified."

Isolation Stand 'Suicidal' For U. S., Dr. Butler Writes

New York, March 9.—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, asserted in a report made public today that it is "suicidal" to regard the European war as something from which the United States "may and should remain aloof and isolated."

Dr. Butler, who is president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, made the statement in his annual report to the endowment's trustees on the division of intercourse and education.

"From the point of view of an American," Dr. Butler wrote, "it can only once more be repeated that to speak of this war as a European war is childish. To describe it as something from which the American Government and the American people may and should remain aloof and isolated is worse than stupidity, it is suicidal."

In a commentary on the degradation of the "once great German People" and the total collapse of moral principle and international law, Dr. Butler noted the failure of the democracies at first to comprehend the revolutionary scope of totalitarian aggression.

"Unfortunately," he wrote, "the democracies have been very slow to recognize the significance and the character of the attack being made upon those fundamental principles which are their foundation. Now, however, they are coming to recognize that this invasion is directed at all of them, wherever they are, whether in Europe, in Asia, or in the Americas. The object of the so-called new order is specifically declared to be to displace that social, economic and political liberty which has been so widely established during the past 300 years and so highly acclaimed by the leaders of the world's thought."

Dr. Butler defined as the essential duty of the Carnegie Endowment consideration of the postwar reconstruction of the world in terms of social, economic and political reorganization and machinery for cooperation among the nations to demonstrate that the lessons of the present conflict have been learned.

"Now more than ever, when nearly all the world is at war and when orderly solution of international affairs can scarcely be visualized," he wrote, "it is essential for those who are still relatviely free to study the principles upon which the world must be organized if peace is eventually to be secured and maintained.

Plug-Ugly Bear Of Maine Woods In the Army Now

Dry Mills, Me., March 9 (AP).—"Meanie McGee" is going to join the Army tomorrow—and he's one of the toughest little hombres that ever came out of the Maine woods.

His father was a sheep-killer and a robber. "Meanie" himself has been guilty of some pretty low-down stuff. He's made things uncomfortable for McNeil Brown, superintendent of the State Inland Fisheries and game farm here, since he was captured in a tree last spring.

"Meanie" is a 10-month-old, 175-pound bear being sent to Camp Edwards, Mass., as a mascot at the request of Corporal David A. Lambert.

"By all means let's have him, as we want the very meanest, toughest critter there is," Lambert wrote game wardens.

Appeals Court To Try Capital Alimony Case

Thought to be for the first time in history the United States Court of Appeals here will sit as a trial court today, hearing witnesses and arguments on whether a husband who refused to pay alimony shall be held in contempt.

This sort of thing has always been handled by the District Court, with the higher court being restricted to appeals based on selected and refined questions of law.

The case involves a three-year-old dispute between George A. Brown, 56, Mount Rainier (Md.) electrician, and his wife, Mrs. Mary Estelle Brown, 55, apartment manager, 3436 Brown Street Northwest.

Brown sued for a divorce July 8, 1938. Mrs. Brown denied his charges, and filed a countersuit. Justice Oscar R. Luhring of the District Court granted Mrs. Brown $45 a month temporary alimony, which Brown is reported to have paid for the duration of the case.

Justice Jennings Bailey dismissed both cases April 11, 1940, holding that neither Brown nor his wife had proved the charges they made.

Last June 5, Mrs. Brown filed a new suit, this time for separate maintenance, charging cruelty and desertion for a second time. Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue dismissed this suit in a few weeks, holding that the issue was decided against Mrs. Brown by Justice Bailey so that she could not make it the basis of the new suit.

Appealing this decision to the United States Court of Appeals, Mrs. Brown's attorney, Harold Shaller, asked for temporary alimony while the case was pending there. The court last September 21 ordered Brown to pay $108 a month. He refused, and on December 2 the court ordered him to pay up or show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court.

Brown's counsel, Louis Lebowitz and Alfred E. Goshorn, claim the higher court has no authority to do this. They demanded an oral hearing such as a recalcitrant husband would in such a case in the District Court. This hearing is scheduled to be held by three justices of the higher court at 10:30 a. m. today.

If the court should find Brown in contempt and send him to jail for disobeying its alimony order, a further anomaly would arise. His legal avenue of appeal would be to file a petition for habeas corpus in the subordinate District Court, asking that court to correct errors of law of the higher court.

U. S. Dentists Will Be Asked To Help Examine Selectees

National Selective Service headquarters plans to call upon dentists to assist local boards throughout the country in examining registrants, a national official disclosed last night.

The announcement followed a warning by Dr. G. D. Timmons, of Chicago, executive secretary of the American Dental Association, that unless deferment from "buck private military service" is given practicing dentists and men in training for the profession, there will be a "serious shortage" in American dentistry by 1945.

Preparations are under way to have dental examiners appointed by the President upon recommendations of the Governors of the States, the Selective Service official said. As with examining officials, the dentists would volunteer their services.

In several States, it was said, dentists have already volunteered and have been working unofficially with physicians assigned to the local boards.

Five-State Clinic Opens

Most of the registrants who have been rejected so far in physical examinations were found to be suffering from bad teeth or poor eyesight, according to official surveys.

Dr. Timmons was one of hundreds associated with the dental profession who arrived at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday for a Five-State Post Graduate Clinic to be held there from today through Thursday. More than 3,000 are expected to attend.

The average age of the dental graduate is 24, Dr. Timmons said, and there have been 24,971 men graduated from the Nation's 39 dental schools in the last 12 years. According to estimates there are 6,700 men of selective service qualifications in this group who are liable to be called to military service, he stated.

"Thus far there have been 52 practicing dentists drafted as privates," he said. "National selective service headquarters have nothing to say about this. It's entirely a matter for the local draft boards."

PractitionersAre Fewer

He emphasized that "it is not a matter of dentistry not being willing to aid in national defense. But it is pretty obvious that the dentist is needed in the military service in his professional capacity.

A decreasing number of men are entering the dental profession, according to statistics of last year, Dr. Timmons said. There is an average normal loss to the profession of 2,400 men annually, while only 1,601 dentists were graduated from schools last year, he pointed out.

Following an address of welcome at 9 a. m. today by Daniel F. Lynch, president of the District Dental Society, a symposium on the dental profession and national defense will be held at 10 a. m. Dr. C. Willard Camalier, Col. L. R. Rowntree, Brig. Gen. L. C. Fairbanks and G. D. Timmons will take part.

The gathering is being held under auspices of the District Dental Society.

Willkie Indorses Baldwin for House

New York, March 9.—Wendell L. Willkie appealed to the voters of the Seventeenth Congressional District by radio tonight to elect Councilman Joseph Clark Baldwin, Republican candidate for the seat of the late Kenneth F. Simpson, in Tuesday's special election.

Voters in the district will receive Monday a letter from Willkie emphasizing that Mr. Baldwin's election will enable him to "assist in providing constructive watchfulness over the administration of the national defense program and the domestic policies of the present Administration," which he said was very necessary for the country.

A radio appeal for the election of Dean Alfange, Mr. Baldwin's Democratic opponent, was made by United States Senator James M. Mead, Democrat, who asserted that the election will be regarded by the Nation" as the acid test of the policies advocated by the Administration since the November election.

Pierre Van Paassen Will Talk Tonight

Pierre Van Paassen, foreign correspondent, will lecture at 8 tonight in the Roosevelt High School auditorium.

The talk is under auspices of the Wilson Teachers College chapter of Sigma Tau Delta, national professional English fraternity.

Beached Freighter Believed Doomed

Ocean City, Md., March 9 (AP).—A crowd estimated by Coast Guardsmen at more than 20,000 persons came down to the sea today to look at the beached Norwegian freighter, Olaf Bergh, as one of it's seamen expressed the opinion the vessel was doomed.

William Morris, who said he had experienced 46 years at sea, declared it probably would be "impossible" to refloat the freighter, which ran aground early Friday in a storm.

"Six feet of her stern post was torn away, and it has become necessary to pump oil from the ship's tanks," Morris said.

IT'S BIRTHDAY WEEK. Carr and Don, of the Madrillon, are celebrating their second anniversary at this notable Latin-American spot. Theirs is the only two-maestro band in these parts, has rolled up success like a snowball since its Madrillon debut in '39. Congratulations to Carr and Donn and the Madrillon, too . . . Today also marks the beginning of "First Anniversary Week" at Casino Royal with posies to be given to all the leddy customers, an extra large revue with the dancing Hollywood Starlets, Venee Villon in her Peacock Dance, tap steppers Vincent and Anita and others. The week-long party also marks the first birthday of "Jivin' Jack" Schafer's orchestra. Jack's swing trumpeting, hilarious songs, were first fully appreciated by the astute controls of the Casino Royal, Jimmie Wing and Huey Liang. Their smart judgment has been rewarded by a spendidly successful year.

Marguerite Sharpe, whose picture adorns the cover of this week's Life as the "typical Government girl," celebrated its appearance by spending an entire evening in the Rainbow Room, where she was feted no end, spoke via the "mike" to an applauding crowd. And to think Hollywood overlooked her when she lived there.

DRIFTING DREAMS COME TRUE. The Dalton Boys, stars of the Neptune Room, weren't so prosperous a few years ago. In fact, they were picking fruit on a summer vacation job on Niagara Peninsula. One evening after a long day of peach picking they went boating on Lake Ontario, sang "Drifting and Dreaming" to their own banjo accompaniment. And who should be walking on the lake shore but the owner of a local radio station! He hailed them and offered a job. After that it wasn't long until they got their first big break in Chicago. They still pick peaches, but it's a pleasure. P. S.: If you belong to a "barbershop quartet" bring your gang down to the Neptune Room and see the Dalton boys. They want to cook up some close-shaved harmony.

DELL RILEY'S departure from the Pall Mall Room to become an Army hostess at Fort Lee is involving a lot of changing around. Hostess Fern Gardiner, of Mayfair, will fill Dell's place at the Raleigh, Pretty Kay Anthony, Fern's assistant, will be promoted to the post of Mayfair's hostess.

THOSE MUSIC HALL BOYS look as though they're going to be at the Shoreham for a run like "Tobacco Road's" in show business. But it's understandable. Speaking for this column, we've seen the M. H. Boys about 20 times, enjoyed them more every time. Shoreham newcomers this week are Jose and Paquita, Mexican high-steppers, and Alberta Mansfield, of the Follies Bergere, who'll dance in a frock confected entirely of glass.

S. R. O. signs have already been hung out for Tuesday night at Paul Young's. DeLloyd McKaye, sepia mistress of the piano, is the reason. Also opening tomorrow at P. Young's are Manu and Malia, Hawaiian dancers, who come direct from New York's Hurricane.

BLIZZARD OR NO BLIZZARD, a goodly crowd greeted Magico Guili-Guili's opening in the Metronome Room, were thrilled to his marrows by his astonishing feats. Besides staging his act on the dance floor, Guili-Guili also performed at a number of tables. This was especially fascinating, because it seemed so plumb absurd to be about a foot from him and not to be able to even guess how he did those amazing things. Guili-Guili will get you dizzi-dizzi.

FOR FOND REMEMBRANCE. Out-of-town visitors to the Lotus have such a good time, are treated so cordially by Emcee-Maestro Bill Strickland that they can't forget it. Every week Bill receives requests for autographed pictures of his band as a souvenir of a happy visit to the Capital.

HI HAT OPUS. Pianist Sandy Ross and singer Carmela Lazari, of Hi Hat, are working up a unique medley based on the classics. The idea is for Sandy to play bits from the great composers while Carmela will sing flippant descriptive lyrics based on the personalities of Schubert, Mendelssohn or whoever's music is being played. Clever, what?

A St. Patrick's Day party that will be the last word in St. Patrick's Day parties has been planned at Restaurant "823." Lee Everett will sing all the Irish songs ever written and there'll be a special St. Patrick's cocktail full of shamrocks, green cherries and Irish whisky.

MUSIC WITH "IT." The seductive organ interludes played by Ida Clarke at Lounge Riviera. Ida has a flair for those dreamy tunes . . . "Guadalajara," enthralling and unusual Mexican song being sung and guitared by Vicente de la Garza in the King Cole Room . . . The special arrangement of "Summertime" caroled by Dee Tracy at the Silver Fox. It'll make you forget all about your poor automobile stuck in a snowdrift . . . "There'll Be Some Changes Made," as all dressed up by Bernie Martin, singing violinist of Carmen Cavallaro's band in the Metronome Room . . . There's a double appeal to "Down Argentine Way" when Ariel does it in Ciro's Famous Village. Y'see she both sings and dances it, and with lure! . . . "Crossroads" as played by Don Carper's Four in Cafe Caprice. It'll set you a-dreaming . . . That gypsy music played by the Rob Strasszny group in the new Plymouth. It's the real Romany.

FOOD ON MY MIND. No less a personage than President William Green, of the A. F. of L., regularly enjoys those big Chinchoteague oysters at Olmsted's Grill . . . If you lunch at the Mayflower we defy you to ask for any kind of bread or rolls they can't produce in a jiffy. On a tour of the Mayflower kitchens we saw dozens of types of bread we never knew existed . . . Owner Dick Ashby, of Dick's Grill, likes land cress greens. But he just has them cooked for himself because the public isn't land cress conscious.

Budget Bureau Plans Traffic-Jam Relief

The White House is taking a hand in Washington's perplexing traffic problem. President Roosevelt's administrative arm, the the Budget Bureau, is working on a plan to relieve the rush - hour traffic jams by placing Federal employes on staggered working hours. Proposed starting times, it is understood, are from 8 to 9:30 o'clock. The new working hours would be in effect indefinitely instead of for the summer only. This is the first time an official attempt has been made to coordinate the departments and agencies to relieve traffic. It's true that some bureaus have had earlier working hours, particularly during summer months, but it's been a "piecemeal" affair.

With White House support, department heads will go along with the Budget Bureau plan, which is being worked out on a voluntary basis between bureau chiefs and District officials. The general plan is have employes in no two nearby buildings to report for work at the same time. For example, employes in the Commerce Building would report for work at a certain time and employes in the Labor Building across the street would be ordered to start either 30 minutes earlier or later. Chief of the Budget Bureau survey is Donald Stone of the administrative management division.

FDIC's top personnel will be given preferential treatment by the executive order issued last week that covered their jobs under Civil Service. The 700 FDIC jobs of lawyers, administrators and the like will be brought under by Civil Service rules. That means through noncompetitive tests, and the commission will give the employes three chances to pass the noncompetitive tests, if FDIC officials make the request. Employes in other agencies that will be brought under by the Ramspeck bill must pass the first noncompetitive test or be separated from the service within six months.

Representative Tom Eliot, former Social Security lawyer, has introduced a bill which would guarantee Federal employes who are drafted the benefits of the Ramspeck bill. The Civil Service Commission has approved the measure . . . UFWA is still scrapping with Secretary Perkins over the Labor Department's promotions - from-within policy . . . If your child refuses to drink milk, food scientists at the Bureau of Agricultural Chemistry and Engineering suggests that the milk be flavored with berry juice. A test was made recently of 55 Washington grade school children. The berry-milk combination was their favorite.

Artists to Aid Defense

War Department is hiring artists to draw animated movies to instruct officers and enlisted men in the different aspects of military training. More than 300 applied for the recent animated artist Civil Service test. Applicants were received from each of Hollywood's major movie studios. Mickey Mouse, the seven dwarfs and hundreds of other familiar animated movie characters were submitted by applicants to the commission.

Senator Overton says he'll introduce an amendment to each 1942 appropriation bill, that would compel Federal employes to sign affidavits that they aren't members of a group that advocates overthrow of our Government by violence or force. He believes it is a good policy in these times and is apparently suspicious of the beliefs of a few Government employes.

G-Man Chief J. Edgar Hoover says there have been "very definite efforts" to place members of subversive organizations in the FBI . . . FBI administrative employes work from 4 to 5 hours overtime daily . . . Hoover told a House committee that only one employe has betrayed his trust since 1924 . . . Only one applicant in a thousand is accepted for a G-man job. Since there'll be 700 new G-men jobs open, here are the basic requirements: Graduate lawyer, or expert accountant plus a working knowledge of a foreign language or extensive investigative experience.

No Pied Lines Here

Brazil, Ind., March 8 (AP).—Circuit Judge John Baumunk informed John Frew, a printer, that he would be required to pay $8 weekly to support two minor children during divorce proceedings.

"That isn't enough," spoke up Frew. "I want to pay $17."

When the court recovered he compromised on $15.

Yesterday Green notified police he had found the auto—parked just where he had left it. The heavy snow covered up his car so that he failed to recognize it.

Colleagues Eulogize Smoot's Life

King, Ashurst Praise Former Senator At Memorial Rites In Church Chapel

Three associates of the late Reed Smoot, United States Senator for 30 years, eulogized him as a statesman and church leader at memorial services in his honor last night at the Washington Chapel of the Mormon Church.

Former Senator William H. King praised his colleague as a man of indefatigable industry, of great ability and devotion to the national welfare. Before Smoot's election to the Senate, King said, he had played a prominent part in the economic development of his home State, Utah. As chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, King said, Smoot became a recognized authority in the field of financial and economic legislation. He worked day and night, King said, with industry and comprehension of our political and economic problems that won for him widespread confidence and respect.

Former Senator Henry F. Ashurst said that Smoot "was a victim of cruel and unjust persecution" when he first came to Washington. Not only did he win vindication, the speaker said; he also gained prestige and "the affection which is awarded those brave and patient men who practcie moderation, forbearance and forgiveness."

"As a statesman," Ashurst continued, "he not only originated many important measures, but displayed much skill and energy in the management of current legislation. Many of the monumental public buildings of Washington, with their amplitude and lines of elegance, were constructed as a result of his vision and unremitting exertions."

President Rudger Clawson of the Council of Twelve Apostles in the Mormon Church gave Smoot chief credit for bringing about the construction of the Mormon Chapel at Sixteenth Street and Columbia Road. He praised the former Senator as a man who "did God's work first" and also devoted great strength and endurance to the service of his country. Smoot's habit of relying upon Providence for guidance was never more effectively demonstrated, he said, than when he gained the floor of the Senate, following the declaration of war in 1917, and offered a prayer asking divine blessings upon the United States.

Ezra T. Benson, president of the Washington Stake of the Mormon Church, presided over the services. Prayers were offered by Senator Elbert D. Thomas and Bishop Edgar B. Brossard. A musical program was rendered under the direction of D. Sterling Wheelwright, with Frances Berrett at the organ.

Earlier in the day Clawson, Harold Lee, director of the church's welfare program; Benson and others spoke at a quarterly conference at the chapel on Sixteenth Street.

Grace Moore In Good Voice At Recital Here

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Grace Moore in a song recital Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Accompanist: Isaac van Grove.

Gowned in an emerald green anticipatory of St. Patrick's Day, Grace Moore sang in Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon for a large audience of obvious admirers, who gave her the kind of demonstrative welcome that prima donna sopranos like. Cordiality on the part of the listeners was matched by graciousness on the part of the singer, who chose for her extra numbers songs which her cinema and radio public associate with her and some for which requests had been made. Her accompanist was Isaac Van Grove, who applied to his task both digital skill and sympathetic tonal shadings.

BROWN

Miss Moore was in good voice, although there were occasional lapses from perfect intonation. During the early part of her program she was conservative in the use of full open tones, singing so softly at times that the words were well-nigh inaudible, but toward the close she was generous with volume of sound. She began with four songs from Shakespeare plays: Arthur Sullivan's "Orpheus with His Lute," Mario Castelnuovo-Tedesco's "Hark, Hark, the Lark"; Roger Quilter's "Come Away, Death" and Arturo Buzzi-Peccia's "Come, Buy."

Manuel Rosenthal's trifling "Fido" was incongruous with the other rewarding songs in her French group, which contained Berlioz' "L'Absence," Pierne's "Le Moulin," Paulins "Que deviennent les roses" and Chaikovski's "Toi seul." For encores she offered Bizet's "L'amour est un oiseau rebelle" and Schubert's "Serenade." The aria of Carmen was prefaced by the remark that she was singing for the first time in public an excerpt from a role which she hoped some day to enact.

An interesting novelty was the aria, "Ebben, ne andro lontano," from Alfredo Catalani's "La Wally," which was sung expressively and with care in phrasing. All too familiar was the following encore: "Mi chiamano Mimi."

In the closing group were combined Quilter's "Spring Voices," Young's "Red Roseybush," Edward German Jones' "Who'll Buy My Lavender" and Carpenter's "Serenade." Insistent recalls brought Miss Moore back for three additional songs: "The Old Refrain," "Ciribiribin" and "One Night of Love."

Robbery, Assault Charged Against Insurance Man

A Washington insurance salesman was charged by Prince Georges County (Md.) police yesterday with robbery and assault with intent to rape on complaint of a Riverdale (Md.) woman.

The man, John Ignatius Tartaglia, 37, of 1415 Juniper Street Northwest, was arrested Friday night at Riverdale. Police said they tracked him through the snow and found him hiding under a porch after the woman reported she had been threatened and robbed of $3.

Corp. Louis Mackall said several other women and coeds from the University of Maryland would be asked to view the suspect in a lineup tonight in an effort to solve a series of molestings in Mount Rainier, Hyattsville and College Park.

Dr. Lau Explains China's Setup

New China is a fighting China, fighting the Japanese aggresor, nationalistic in that it seeks unity, mildly socialistic in seeking to share the wealth, and based on democratic principles, according to Dr. K. S. Lau, of Canton, China.

Dr. Lau, who came to Washington last fall and has since been connected with the Chinese church here, described the New China last night to Foundry Force, Epworth organization of Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest.

Catholics Can Aid Hemisphere Unity, Declares Peruvian

The destiny of Pan Americanism is linked with the religious and spiritual revival of the American nations, Dr. Victor Andres Belaunde, of Peru, declared last night in a lecture at McMahon Hall, Catholic University, sponsored by the university's Institute of Ibero-American Studies.

Diplomatic Pan Americanism, although essential and basic, he said, does not imply necessarily the moral union and the deep material knowledge between the American countries that is necessary for real friendship.

"Latin America has a Catholic culture," declared the visiting lecturer. "Therefore, American Catholics and Catholic intellectual institutions must take the lead in establishing Pan Americanism."

Arlington Churchmen Hear Fr. Slavin Speak on Defense

The labor for defense is "work for men of stout hearts, not those with the heads of braggadocio," the Rev. Joseph Slavin, O. P., of the philosophy department, Catholic University, yesterday cautioned men of St. Thomas More Church, Lee Boulevard and Thomas Street, Arlington.

"With Christ with us, supernatural courage makes us act," he told the 220 men who attended the annual communion breakfast of the Holy Name Society at the Washington Golf and Country Club, 3017 North Glebe Road.

Father Slavin, who was sent to Europe by the university for special work, described his experiences in Spain during the civil war and in Czecho-Slovakia when it was annexed by Germany. He spoke on "Catholic Men in Defense."

"The extent of our defense in America is in defense of the truths we love," he asserted. "If our country is to be preserved, we must love truth and be willing to make sacrifices for those things that are worth dying for."

Howard Horowitz was toastmaster, and the Rev. Edwin J. Lee, pastor, led the prayers opening the meeting. Special numbers were sung by men of the choir.

Montgomery Citizens Balk At Zone Plan

A rising tide of civic opposition to the rezoning of property abutting on Sligo Creek Park for apartment houses became apparent last night as several civic groups announced plans for combating the movement.

A special meeting of the Allied Civic Groups of Silver Spring, Md., was announced for Wednesday at 8 p. m. at the Liquor Control Board Building in Silver Spring. Gilbert H. Wiley, chairman of the special zoning committee of the Sligo Park Hills Citizens Association and Sligo Park Hills Garden Club, has been announced as chairman of a special committee of the Civic Groups to handle opposition to the rezoning.

Three other associations of adjoining territory, the Sligo Park Hills Citizens Associations, the Seven Oaks Manor Citizens Association and the East Sligo Valley Citizens Association, plan to ask emergency action for a resolution opposing the rezoning at a meeting of the Montgomery County Civic Federation tonight at 8 at the Bethesda Elementary School.

Won Earlier Fights

Civic groups battled several years ago to keep apartments from the park and were successful in maintaining the residential A zoning kept for most of the tract. A corner on Saratoga Avenue now has been developed into apartments because the zoning was in effect before the civic battle started.

Officials of the civic groups last night were discussing plans for fighting the encroachment of apartments on the park. The proposed rezoning would flank the entire driveway of the park along Sligo Creek with apartments nearly to Colesville Road.

Opponents declare that the apartments will lower property values in the neighborhood, create traffic congestion in the park and provide a tremendous problem of supplying schools and other necessary services.

May Appeal to U. S.

Possibility of invoking aid of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission in the fight against the apartments is beirg considered. The Federal Goyernment provided a large sum toward the park construction and the national group has supervisory powers to defend the values of the park both from an esthetic and from a commercial standpoint, civic leaders assert.

A hearing on the proposal to rezone the tract will be held Friday at 7 p. m. at the Liquor Control Board Building by the Montgomery county commissioners, sitting as a district council.

Woman Doctor Is Found Dead Of Gas Fumes

Dr. Elizabeth Muncey, 83, retired Carnegie Institute Research physician, was found dead of gas in her apartment at 1344 Harvard Street Northwest yesterday. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of accidental asphyxiation.

Dr. Muncey was found in bed by members of Fire Rescue Squad No. 2, who entered the apartment through a rear window, after gas fumes had been detected by Samuel S. Carroll, apartment house owner.

Police said an oven jet in the kitchen of the apartment, where Dr. Muncey lived alone, was open.

A practicing physician in Washington for a number of years, Dr. Muncey later became associated with the Carnegie Institute and traveled through the country and abroad. She returned to Washington to live about a year ago.

A native of Bristol, Pa., she attended Howard University when most colleges refused to accept women students. She received her M. D. degree from Howard in 1898. She was married to Daniel Muncey, who died more than 20 years ago.

Surviving are a son, Elliott, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and a daughter, Marguerite, of Surrey, England.

Smoke Overcomes Two Fire Fighters In Maryland Blaze

Volunteer firemen battled two hours last night to extinguish flames that started in the basement of a ten-room frame residence at 103 Spa Street, Cottage City, Md. Two members of the fire department were overcome by smoke.

W. A. Middleton, Washington lumberman, and his family were out for the evening when their home caught fire shortly before 8:30 p. m. Damage was estimated at $500.

Overcome by smoke were Assistant Chief T. Weston Scott, jr., and Sergt. W. A. Stittle, of Cottage City. They were revived. Assisting the Cottage City Department were firemen from Bladensburg and Mount Ranier.

Police Boys Club Topic Of Citizens

District Suffrage, School Expansion Also on Program For This Week

Support of the Police Boys Club campaign, proposed District suffrage legislation and changes in the Washington school setup will be discussed at some meetings of 20 citizens associations this week.

A poll of citizens' opinions on the newly formed municipal assembly will be continued also, and results will be reported at the Federation of Citizens Associations meeting Saturday night.

Nine associations are scheduled to meet tonight.

Suffrage will be debated at the West End meeting by two George Washington University students; Burleith citizens will conduct an auction of garden seed and implements; Bradbury Heights members will hear a talk by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board of education, and several pending Congressional bills will be examined by the Northeast Citizens Association.

Tomorrow night, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, will address Summit Park citizens in connection with the Police Boys Club Fund drive.

On Wednesday, Miss Irene Wright, of the Cultural Relations Division of the State Department, will speak on "Pan Americanism" at a meeting of the Rhode Island Citizens Association in the Sherwood Presbyterian Church, Twenty-second Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast. Fifteen committee programs will be reported at the meeting, according to President John L. Fowler.

The week's citizens association schedule follows:

Capital News In Brief

Thief Drops Loot, Eludes Detective

The Courthouse Coffee Shoppe, 458 Indiana Avenue Northwest—next door to police headquarters—was broken into for the nineteenth time yesterday, but this time the prowler was almost caught.

Detective Michael Dowd, about to enter headquarters building, noticed a youth walking out of the alley between the restaurant and headquarters. When Dowd approached him, the youth ran off, dropping a sack containing $7.75 worth of groceries.

Youth Breaks Leg Fleeing Police

Attempting to escape arrest, according to police, Milton Thompson, 17, colored, of 626 C Street Southwest, suffered a compound fracture of the left leg yesterday when he jumped from the second story of 1214 Six and a Half Street Northwest and landed on an ashcan below.

Thompson, who police said had escaped from the National Training School, was taken to Gallinger Hospital.

Volunteers' Office Is Robbed of $43

The office of the Volunteers of America, at 433 Third Street Northwest, was entered yesterday and robbed of $43, it was reported to police.

Forum Talks Church Plans For Selectees

Plans for church-sponsored parties for uniformed selectees on Saturday afternoons, and for entertaining service men in church members' homes over weekends, were discussed yesterday at an Adult Forum in Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, 1410 Columbia Road Northwest.

Congregation members might well take selectees from nearby camps into their homes while they are in town on Saturdays and Sundays, it was suggested by Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Labor Department's Children's Bureau.

This was seconded by Miss Elizabeth Haney, of the Y. W. C. A., who pointed to the current shortage of low-cost housing facilities here for weekend visitors.

Thomas Wilson, cochairman of the church laymen's committee for selectee recreation planning, suggested that local churches might write to the selectees in camp and appoint special committees to invite them to attend church services and recreational programs.

Mrs. Fred S. Buschmeyer, wife of the church minister, presided. Final plans for the Mount Pleasant church's participation in selectee recreation will be made at a meeting there next Sunday morning.

Rep. Martin Reiterates He'll Resign

Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, told more than 200 high school boys and girls here last night that "My resignation as chairman of the Republican National Committee definitely will be submitted and I hope that it is accepted."

Martin was reported wanting to resign the chairmanship shortly after the Presidential election last November. But Willkie, here to testify before the Senate hearing on the lend-lease bill, urged Martin to reconsider his plans for retiring and party leaders thought he might bow to Willkie's request and retain the job.

The audience of the House minority leader came from 62 schools in 16 States east of the Mississippi. They are studying the workings of the Government at first hand for a few days under the auspices of the National Capital School Visitors Council.

Representative Martin told the group that "We need a two-party government." He stressed the importance of a minority party.

He forecast a change in Congressional party majority in 1942, "if we should happen to be drawn into a war in the next few months."

Questions posed him in an hour-long session ranged from one girl's, "How does one get to be a minority leader?" to inquiries of intricate duties of Congressional committees.

Yesterday the group went to Annapolis, Md., by bus, attending chapel at the Naval Academy and inspecting the grounds. On the return trip to Washington they visited the Beltsville, Md., experimental farm.

Today they will be introduced to the House. Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, will discuss the good-neighbor policy before the group at the Pan American Building tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Sons of Veterans Of U. S.-Spanish War Form 1st Post

Washington's first Sons of Spanish-American War Veterans camp was legally instituted and named William McKinley, No. 145, yesterday at a meeting in Pythian Temple. Leo D. Lietz was elected president.

The following were named officers: Paul J. Clarke, senior vice president; George D. Reeves, junior vice president; Richard La Roche, of Arlington, Va., captain; Edwin W. Reeves, secretary; Donald Hanley, treasurer; John D. Reeves, sergeant at arms; Lawrence S. Martin, assistant sergeant at arms; William Cattell, guide, and Anton and Joseph Cohen, color bearers.

Speakers at the meeting included James Dwyer, national organization chairman; Arthur Lou, past department president of department of Pennsylvania, and Harry J. Goodman, department inspector. James B. Freeland, past department inspector, was master of ceremonies.

Victim in Hospital After Slugging On Steps of His Upshur Street Home

A 35-year-old District businessman was in Garfield Hospital with a possible skull fracture and other injuries last night after three white men had beaten and robbed him of approximately $600 as he approached his home at 1714 Upshur Street Northwest early yesterday morning.

William Jeweler, owner of the Columbia Liquor Store, 3910 Fourteenth Street Northwest, told police the men attacked him about 12:15 a. m. as he walked up the steps of his home. Two men held him, Jeweler said, while the third, who concealed his face with a handkerchief, struck him several times with a cloth bag containing a brick.

The three men then took his store receipts, he said, and escaped East on Upshur Street. Police believe the men followed Jeweler from his store.

Walter Hofmann, 21, 3 Barnes Lane Northeast, night manager of the Homoco gas station, 1702 Benning Road Northeast, notified police that a white man, 21 to 23 years old, confronted him with a revolver about 4:30 a. m. Sunday. After locking Hofmann into a back room, the bandit took $15 from the cash register and fled.

A grocery store at 1327 W Street Southeast, was robbed of a quantity of small change. A 19-year-old colored youth, Albert Leon Valentine, 2634½ Bowen Road Southeast, was found hiding behind a counter by Eleventh Precinct detectives and charged with housebreaking.

Catholic Drive Set March 3 for Foreign Relief

The first comprehensive Nationwide appeal to United States Catholics for funds to relieve suffering abroad will be sounded on Passion Sunday, March 30, it was announced here yesterday.

The announcement came from the Bishops' Relief Committee, which was set up last November to coordinate the work of several committees that previously operated independently.

They include the committees for Polish relief, committee for Lithuanian and Baltic States relief, committees for relief to France, Belgium, Holland, England and the Scandinavian countries, for refugees from Germany, Austria and Czecho-Slovakia, for Chinese relief, child refugees and for the Mexican Seminary. These committees continue to function as subcommittees of the general committee. Members of the new committee are the prelates who comprise the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

So an Ancient Argument Raises Its Battered Head

The One About Capital as Two-Week Stand; Miss Bankhead Confirms Earlier Suspicions; This, That and the Other About the Theater

SINCE THERE WERE TWO BATTLES OF BULL RUN, there might as well be two over the matter of Washington's right to be recognized as a two-weeks' run for the better things of the legitimate theater. We were ignominiously defeated in the first tilt, but here of late new ammunition has come up along with various types of monetary and moral reinforcement.

BELL

It was "The Man Who Came to Dinner" that brought these new sinews of war to this department. The piece that closed its local fortnight's run in the National Theater Saturday night, with Alexander Woollcott playing himself in one of the most audacious comedies of recent years, had irrefutable evidence to offer that the Capital is a two-week town for any work of the first rank—and "The Man Who Came to Dinner" is of the first rank in any terms of frank and expository writing.

We are not in the habit of publishing box-office audits—since that is a fiscal matter that is none of our business—but, with the sanction of Manager Edmund Plohn, of the National Theater, it seems pertinent to record that "The Man Who Came to Dinner" negotiated a bit of an all-time high in what pass for "extended runs" on E Street. The first week of the engagement grossd a cool $21,800. The second exceeded that by running up a ticket-wicket toll of $21,959. Together, they represent a "take," as we say in the counting room, of only a shade under $44,000. If that is not convincing evidence to the plush-and-mahogany gentlemen of the New York booking offices that their National Capital is a two-week stand for their most distinguished items of public barter, we would be glad to contemplate testimony they might deem any more conclusive.

And the current week will afford another instance of the case in point. The Theater Guild-Gilbert Miller production of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," costarring Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans, is virtually sold out, at the moment—and let this be a warning to those masters of "skull"-diggery, who always want two on the aisle at the last minute, that this week the drama department is bankrupt. The local demand for seats for "Twelfth Night" already so far exceeds the supply that Bess Davis Schreiner, sales manager for the Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription seasons, is proferring her good offices to secure seats for disappointed Washingtonians at Ford's Theater in Baltimore, where "Twelfth Night" will play after it leaves here.

All of which harks back to the friendly verbal joust we had some years ago with the gracious and incomparable Katharine Cornell. Miss Cornell had elected to present one of her new plays one week in Washington and two in Philadelphia. Our contention was that it should be the other way around. The one week at the National netted $28,000. The first in Philadelphia returned an approximate $15,000; the second, something in the neighborhood of $12,000. Figure it out for yourself.

We were under the impression, as expressed here last week, that Robert C. Sherwood, producer of "Adam Had Four Sons," now on the Earle screen, possessed the most paralyzing penchant for unanswerable questions we had ever encountered—what with his "What does the public want?" and the like—but now comes the topper. Mr. Wallace Shuman, 641 Fifteenth Street Northeast, postcards this elementary inquiry: "Could you please answer a problem for a high school student of Washington? My problem is to find which are the words that a journalist uses to write vivid, interesting and appealing stories for the public." That's something I'd like to know, too. Presumably they all are included in a fairly well known volume compiled by one Mr. Noah Webster. All you have to do is dig them out. In terms of eternity, it only takes a few minutes.

Comes a wire from Father Hartke, the distinguished prexy of the Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University: "'God's Stage' company went through 17 hours of blizzard to make Cleveland opening." That they made it is attested by the Cleveland dateline, as of 3:38 p. m., March 8. Father Hartke is the type of Trojan who would make it, blizzard or no blizzard.

We have always contended that Miss Bankhead is one of the most sagacious of our stars.

Hollywood, March 9.

Hollywood, like China, absorbs its conquerors. Yesterday on the set of "My Life with Caroline," starring Ronnie Colman, I saw a familiar face. It belonged to that fine character actor, Nicholas Soussanin, who a few years back was the Akim Tamiroff of his day. Soussanin was doing one line as second butler in the picture. And for an ironic overtone, Olga Baclanova, who divorced him a few years ago, is now appearing in the New Broadway hit "Claudia" . . .

Now that M. G. M. is contemplating a remake of "Cimarron," and we already have remakes of "Back Street," "The Letter," "The Strawberry Blonde," "Blood and Sand," and "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," I'm asking—are we remaking old favorites because there aren't enough good originals? Or is it impossible to sell an original because the studios insist on putting new dresses on old favorites? Not that I have anything against oldies—heaven forbid! But the public's getting confused, like the bright child whose mother insisted that teacher continue her darling in the fourth grade "because his marks are always so good."

Burgess Meredith nearly bent my ear off with his enthusiastic claim that John Steinbeck's Mexican picture, "The Forgotten Village," will stand the industry on its head.

'Apple Cart' Not Upset by Civic Players

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE APPLE CART." The Washington Civic Theater presents the play in three acts by George Bernard Shaw. Produced by Leon Askin; settings by William M. Girvan. At the Wardman Park Theater.

—THE CAST—

In its arduous undertaking of presenting George Bernard Shaw's discursive drama of "The Apple Cart" for the first time in Washington, in the Wardman Park Theater last night, the Washington Civic Theater reaffirmed its right to be judged by professional, rather than amateur, standards of appraisal.

Under the understanding and adroit direction of Leon Askin, the members of the cast contrived to "suit the action to the word" to a degree that served to give one of Shaw's more declamatory contributions to the theater pace, humor, accelerated tempo and vivacity. It was an especially smooth first-night performance that was offered a large and enthusiastic audience at the Wardman premiere. It is, of course, preposterous to pretend that "The Apple Cart," under any circumstances, could be made a vehicle of unbridled hilarity. It is not that kind of play. But insofar as it lies within the power of any cast, the Civic's last evening did Mr. Shaw as much credit as his complex commentary upon the monarchial problems of Great Britain in the year 1962 might ever reasonably expect to receive.

Shaw Speaks His Piece

"The Apple Cart" is less a concentrated and direct drama than it is a lengthy lecture on the part of its author on what in this country would be called "the state of the nation." In the large view, it is a stanch defense of Britain's prevalent political structure, although it betrays no reticence in paying doubtful respects to democracy, accentuating the point that all kings are apt to be philanderers and that the prime ministers are children of expediency, playing both ends against the middle, as the saying goes. The principal conflict is waged between King Magnus, a discerning and discreetly dissolute ruler, and his cabinet of ministers, who lay down an ultimatum which the King evades by those royal endowments of instinctive sagacity that make kings kings. There are times when it seems that a great deal more could have been said in far fewer words, but the sum total of the Shavian exercise in explosiveness is practically all on the side of mental, if not emotional, exhilaration.

This, then, is the play that the Civic group essayed under the guiding hand of Mr. Askin, whose attitude, as once expressed to this department was that while all of Shaw's plays may not be masterpieces, all deserve to be given a public hearing. He has rendered Washington a definite service in putting on "The Apple Cart."

Cast Carries Burden Lightly

The cast also has rendered the Capital a definite service by bringing so much interpretative skill to the elucidation of a work that is more British than American and more argumentative than dramatic. Top honors, by any yardstick, go to Rudulph Justice Watson for the minutely shaded variety of his performance in the role of King Magnus, Audrey Fenshaw, as Orynthia, combines her tantalizing talents with his in making the second act boudoir interlude one of the most amiably inflammatory periods of the play. Eileen Fowler, the Queen, makes it apparent why Orynthia exerted so potent a spell over a monarch who reveled in his relaxations, but realized his more immediate and inescapable responsibilities.

Harrison Libby does a dynamic chore as the Prime Minister and Ted Projector, Charles Grunwell, Lawrence Beckerman and Lester C. Burdett, jr., make themselves emphatically known as other members of the cabinet. Bibby Osterwald and Doris Cooper, feminine distractions from the cares of state, play with easy grace and graceful indifference to the usual proprieties. The remainder of the cast never is far behind and Mr. Girvan's settings are such as might do credit to any production of any Shaw play.

It is pleasant to welcome the Civic Theater back into the top flight of resident theatrical enterprises, where it belongs.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, March 9.

POLITICS DEPT.: Wendell Willkie has been watching closely the progress of the Lease-Lend Bill and is considering making a radio speech on that subject, if he thinks it will help—and it will . . . After Willkie had met Queen Elizabeth he told Winston Churchill how deeply she had impressed him with her wit and charm and great understanding. Churchill, in turn, reported this to her Majesty. "You made an excellent impression upon Mr. Willkie," said the Prime Minister. "Why didn't you impress Ambassador Kennedy the same way?" . . . "Well," replied the Queen, "it's not because I didn't try."

REALTY DEPT.: Alexander Woollcott, whose "Man Who Came to Dinner" company soon will play in Philadelphia, decided to live in a house there, rather than in a hotel or apartment. He therefore has rented the home belonging to the mother of Pandro Berman, the movie producer. The arrangements were completed, and then Alec sent a final letter to the lessor—in which he listed some minor details concerning his tenancy, and then casually concluded: "If there's anything else you wish to know please write me at the above address . . . The "above address" was the White House.

LOCAL NEWS: Charles Laughton will return to comedy roles in "Almost an Angel," for Universal films . . . After 25 years in the theater, Ruth Gordon made her debut with a swing-band—with Jimmy Dorsey's Orchestra . . . Jack Dempseys' will hold a midnight supper for the British American Ambulance Corps on March 25. Jack will preside, and will have sports figures participating in a revue . . . One of the paintings recently sent here for sale by the Nazis is a Rembrandt from the Uffizi Gallery in Florence, Italy. They can't get an art-dealer to handle the sale . . . Jim Farley will be the principal speaker at the Jackson day dinner in New York.

BOOK DEPT.: Pottsville, the home town of John O'Hara, has invited him to return there March 13, to be the Distinguished Guest in honor of Mayor Lord's birthday. O'Hara won't be able to attend, because he must go to Hollywood. He framed the letter of invitation from the Mayor, for it marked the close of an episode . . . O'Hara's first novel, "Appointment in Samarra," which established his reputation as a writer, was set in Pottsville. His hometowners voiced ringing objections to it, as a poor reflection upon the community . . . And so across that framed letter inviting the Pottsville Prodigal to return, and be its Distinguished Guest, John O'Hara pasted a sign: "Forgiven."

DRAMA DEPT.: Recently seven people of Broadway organized themselves as a student group and joined the Drama Class at Benno Schneider's famed school for actors . . . The seven who will take acting lessons from Schneider are Vera Zorina, now a movie and musical comedy star; Arnold Moss, who won good notices for his recent appearances in "Fifth Column," "Journey to Jerusalem" and the current "Flight to the West;" Arlene Francis, the radio star who was featured this season in "Journey to Jerusalem;" Katharine Locke, who has costarred with Franchot Tone and Maurice Evans; Jessica Tandy, Hume Cronyn, whose performance in "Retreat to Pleasure" was hailed by all the reviewers, and Martin Gabel, the producer, director and the star of "Medicine Show" . . . The last direction job of Benno Schneider, their illustrious drama teacher, was "Liliom." It flopped.

EMPLOYMENT DEPT.: Six years ago the Clymas Troupe of Apache dancers were featured in the vaudeville houses and the big cafes of Broadway. One member of the troupe, Leslie Berger, preferred a career which offered steadier employment and a more stable future than could be found in vaudeville. Berger retired from show business and became a waiter at Reuben's Restaurant, where now he has risen to the post of captain . . . The Clymas Troupe now is filling an engagement at Leon & Eddie's on West Fifty-second. An important member of the troupe—the knife-thrower—became ill and his partners worried about having to close . . . They solved their problem by inviting Berger to rejoin. And so Leslie Berger now has two jobs—doubling between the floor show at Leon & Eddie's and the waiter's shift at Reuben's Restaurant.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 9 (INS).—Maybe it isn't fair to say "no rest for the wicked" about a nice person like Tyrone Power—but his schedule is enough to make a dynamo swoon. Twentieth Century-Fox has just bought "Benjamin Blake," the Literary Guild book-of-the-month, for Ty and planked down $50,000 for it. That makes three in a row—"Blood and Sand," "Yank in the R. A. F." and now "Benjamin Blake" for Power without even enough time off to visit the island he and Annabella bought off the coast of Mexico.

"The Man Who Came to Dinner" goes into production in May—hot or cold. That doesn't give Warners a lot of time to get their cast ready. I had thought the Charlie Laughton thing was set, and Charlie is still the hottest choice, but within the last 24 hours there've been some developments. Monte Woolley, who created the Alexander Woollcott role in New York has expressed an interest and a test has been made of him in New York.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Jane Novak, veteran actress of the silent days, is in the Queen of the Angels Hospital very ill, following a major operation; Gail Patrick and Eddie Lowe dancing around Ciro's as if they meant it. Talk is that this is really the town's hottest romance; dined at Romanoff's and went on to Ciro's to see Rosario and Antonio, the gypsy dancers again, apparently many other people had the same idea as the place was crowded. The Howie Mayers, here with young Jeff McWade of the McWade Advertising Co., wanted to book the dancers then and there for the Pump room.

The Basil Rathbone party for Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt started, of course, after the theater, and although I made up my mind not to stay late I had such a good time. Ouida is such a charming hostess and has the knack of making her guests feel at home; Janet Gaynor, whose hair always looks so well, tells me she has to have it cut every week to keep that sleek appearance. Adrian carries a picture of their baby in his cigarette case and he and Mary Lee Fairbanks, who also had a snapshot of Daphne, were comparing their children; Dorothy Parker, whose conversation is as amusing as her writings, was there with Alan Campbell.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Gayety

Rose LaRose, one of burlesque's outstanding entertainers, is the featured star of this week's revue at the Gayety.

Always a favorite here, Miss LaRose offers a circle of songs and dances which have made her one of the circuit's better-known strums. In the current bill, Rose presents several musical specialities which are not only novel and cleverly presented but nothing short of sensational. We might add that Miss LaRose's million-dollar smile is more radiant than ever and her gowns stunning.

The comedy department has been placed in the capable hands of Tiny Fuller, Hal Weber and Harry LaVine, a trio of veteran funsters, who offer many witty and laugh-provoking situations. Harry Jackson and Dorothy Sevier, the latter generally recognized as burlesque's most clever "talking woman," prove valuable assets to the comedy "bits."

Aside from the charming LaRose, the revue boasts a trio of ravishing sirens in Betty Alfred, Winnie Garrett and Mary Walsh. Miss Garrett's musical presentations are nicely done, while Miss Alfred, whom we predicted not so long ago would be promoted from the chorus line, offers several colorful beauty parades.

One of the biggest hits of the show turns up in some folks billed merely as the Sheldons. The act, composed of a boy and two girls, execute some of the best acrobatics seen at the Gayety this season.

D. C. Snowtime

JUVENILE artists in the District were busy yesterday as a clear, cold day provided ideal weather for building snowmen and snowladies, as well as for snowball battles and general snow-romping.

Setting a pace which would shame many a defense contractor, the young builders erected countless snow forts and at 5014 Fulton Street Northwest built snow models of the Union Station, Lincoln Memorial and the Capitol.

AT Thirteenth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, youngsters built a 10-foot masterpiece, which, however, they left anonymous.

A "snow lady," with modern hair-do and latest style dress, materialized about noon at River Road and Garrison Street Northwest.

Meanwhile, hardy souls at Rock Creek Park attempted plain and fancy styles of skiing, while others went sledding on Park slopes. There were snow battles nearly everywhere.

PHOTOGRAPHY experts, and others who merely snap pictures, invaded Hains Point and the parks and streets, doing their best to make the snow scenes imperishable.

Thousands merely drove around, some of them apparently to view newly erected statues of stout gentlemen. Traffic went at a snail's pace. Crowds on foot and in cars were "unusually heavy" throughout the city, police reported. Pedestrian traffic was particularly thick on F Street in the late afternoon.

1. Washington took advantage of a bright Sunday for capers in the remnants of the winter's biggest snow. Sledding on the Soldiers' Home grounds were (from left) Harry Coffman and John and Jim Powderly. Motorists and hikers sought . . .

2. . . . scenes like this to admire and photograph. This study in black and white was found near Pierce Mill in Rock Creek Park. Great blankets of snow still untrampled persisted. For those who like . . .

3. . . . vigorous winter sports there was skiing on the slopes of the Rock Creek golf course. But the snow was too soft for swift sledding and skiing, as Frank Trainor discovered. However, the . . .

4. . . . quality of the snow was perfect for snowmen, forts and fantasies sculptured by youthful artists. Admiring the 10-foot snowman at Thirteenth and Massachusetts are Pat and Leo Harrington. The snow also . . .

5 . . . was just right for snowballing and battles raged over the city. Frances Mroczkowski is seen just before tossing a handful of snow at the photographer

From distant Patagonia to Southern Califo'nia,
You'll find his piggish nibs, the collared peccary.
His flesh is very edible, and so it's not incredible
You've met him a la sandwich double deckery.

Of course, we're only making fun, for it's quite plain in Washington,
Or Georgia, Butte, Des Moines or Cairo on the Nile:
That if you ate this chevalier, then what's he doing standing here?
As fat and sassy as a pampered juvenile.

Mungo 'Fired' by Dodgers for Misconduct

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 9.—The team on the spot in this year's American League pennant race seems to be Cleveland. For any other club to win the pennant there is at hand a valid excuse but if the Indians finish anywhere except in first place they will be tagged, simply, "over-rated and don't have what it takes."

POVICH

Last season the Indians' complaint was that they couldn't play ball for Oscar Vitt. His pop-off tactics unnerved the players and disrupted their play, they charged. Even under that handicap, however, actual or fancied as the case might have been, the Indians finished only a game out of the lead. As the new season nears, they are rid of Vitt, proclaiming their delightful harmony, and back in the same league with virtually the same ball team. If they muff the pennant this time, it will hurt.

No other club is under the same compulsion in the pennant race as the Indians. The Yankees, if they fail to win, will scarcely be under any disgrace. Joe McCarthy is taking into the 1941 race a club that was last in team batting in 1940. He is gambling with three positions in his infield. He might win the pennant, but if his Yankees flop he will not need to dig up any explanation. It will be obvious.

And Detroit will not be a disillusioned city if the Tigers fail to repeat as champions. Until the pennant winners are licked, it is always assumed that they are a serious threat in any pennant reckoning, but manager Del Baker can be easily forgiven this year if he doesn't get his ball club down in front. His Tigers barely staggered in last season on the last leg of his creaky infield and now there is the new threat that Hank Greenberg will not be with the club after mid-season, due to the military draft. If the aging legs of Charley Gehringer and Dick Bartell were not sufficient alibi for Baker, then the loss of Greenberg would be the clincher. The Tigers definitely are not on the spot.

Neither are the Boston Red Sox, despite the fact that they are the power club of the league. Nobody except the most passionate Boston fans expect Joe Cronin's team to gain the pennant. If the Red Sox do win, then Cronin can be hailed as something of a miracle man because he will have done a magic job with what last year was the worst pitching staff in the league. As long as his pitchers are as horrible as they have been, Cronin need not worry about an alibi. He can simply point to the lot of them and say: "Houdini couldn't win a pennant with that gang."

There isn't another club in the league that can consider itself on the spot by any stretch of the imagination. A pennant for the White Sox, Nats, Browns or A's would come under the heading of a complete surprise. Managers Jimmy Dykes, Stanley Harris, Fred Haney and Connie Mack are carrying no burden in the race, in one sense. They aren't expected to finish anywhere near the top.

There has been one notable development among the second-flight teams, however, and that is the growing esteem in which the St. Louis Browns are being held. Baseball men throughout the league are hinting darkly that the Browns are the most improved club in the circuit and that they can finish in the first division without occasioning any surprise.

With little hullabaloo, the Browns have been putting together a potent sort of ball club; probably the best St. Louis team since the early twenties. Only the lack of an accredited catcher may keep the Browns out of a high place in the league. George McQuinn, Johnny Berardino, Ben Heffner, and Harland Clift comprise a clever and adequate-hitting infield, and the Browns have outfield power in Walter Judnich, Chet Laabs and Myril Hoag. It is a sound sort of pitching staff too, that Fred Harris, Roxie Lawson, Kennedy and Galehouse.

But the Indians at this writing are the only solid club in the league, with Manager Peckinpaugh's worries from a talent standpoint being fewer than any other managers. Peck's chief concern will be to keep his athletes battling the opposition instead of each other. In taking over the Cleveland club as Vitt's successor, Peck has stuck his neck out alarmingly. He's got to win the pennant, or explain how he muffed it with the best pitching staff and the best infield in the league.

Most of last season Vitt had a pennant-winning Cleveland team on his hands—and worse luck, in his hair. The Indians showed no liking for the going when the pressure was on, and swooned into second place when the Tigers came on to challenge them for the lead. The tough break that the Indians may be getting is that the pressure is on them the moment the season starts, and they may not have learned to like it.

Ace Hurler Is Shipped After Spree

Sent to Georgia And Told He Can Rejoin Team Later If He Reforms

By the Associated Press

Havana, March 9.—Van Lingle Mungo, the unpredictable pitcher who was going to win 25 games for Brooklyn this season, was fined $200 today and banished from the Dodgers' training camp for drinking.

The fiery fireballer was given transportation to Macon, Ga., and that if he wanted to return to the good graces of the Dodgers he would to do it at the camp of their Montreal (International League) farm which begins training there next Saturday.

Handed Walking Papers

The latest upheaval in Mungo's long and turbulent relationship with the Dodgers occurred last night at Brooklyn headquarters in the Hotel Nacional. After dinner he appeared at the bar in high spirits and offered to buy all the boys a drink. Two of the boys at the other end of the bar happened to be Manager Leo Durocher and Coach Chuck Dressen.

When the best-known citizen of Pageland, S. C., arrived at La Tropical Stadium today for the Dodgers' doubleheader with the Cleveland Indians he was handed a note by Club Secretary John McDonald that his stay with Brooklyn was ended at least temporarily.

"You are being furnished transportation from Havana to Macon," the note said. "You are to leave the Dodgers camp tonight."

Was Model Citizen

Thus ended the latest of Mungo's good intention campaigns. He had had many other adventures with the club, but last fall announced he was turning over a new leaf. He was carried on the club's coaching staff part of the season and supervised movies made by the club for training purposes in September. He has been a model of deportment up to now in camp and at his own request was assigned Whitlow Wyatt, a quiet, serious pitcher, for a roommate. He frequently and proudly declared he "hadn't had a drink since October."

In the past Mungo has always been the chief problem child of Brooklyn managers. In 1938 he jumped the club in Pittsburgh and was next heard from at his South Carolina home. Another time he and a couple of teammates got into a fist fight at a St. Louis hotel and he once rammed his fist through a train window while traveling with the club.

Indians Stop Dodgers, 8-4

Havana, March 9 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians stopped the cocky Brooklyn Dodgers' winning streak, 8 to 4, today in the first game of a double-header, but the Flatbush Flashes retaliated by winning the 4½-inning second game, 3 to 0.

The Dodgers raked Bob Feller for three runs in the third inning of the opener, while Korby Higbe was holding the Indians scoreless for three frames. But in the fifth the Tribe teed off on Lee Grissom for five runs, and that was the ball game.

The second contest was abbreviated to let the Indians catch their boat back to Florida, but before it ended Don Ross hit a two-run homer and Cleveland never threatened.

A crowd of 10,000 was on hand.

Yanks Rout Cards

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 9 (AP).—The New York Yankees today looked like the team fans used to call the Bronx Bombers, scoring all their runs in one tremendous inning to wallop the St. Louis Cardinals, 7 to 2, in an exhibition game.

The uprising came in the fourth against Harry Brecheen and Ira Hutchinson and the seven hits included homers by Tom Henrich and Mike Chartak and a couple of doubles, one by Gerry Priddy with the bases loaded.

Three Yankee pitchers allowed only one hit apiece, but the one Spud Chandler gave in the fifth

Pepper Martin's Spirit Still Haunts Cards' Clubhouse

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 9.—The spirit of Pepper Martin still fills the St. Louis Cardinals' clubhouse, even though the wild horse is 3,000 miles away.

Here is Martin's telegram from Sacramento, Calif., where he is manager of the Cardinal Farm Club, to Trainer Doc Weaver, posted on the dressing room bulletin board:

"Alas, Doc, no diathermy machine (heat-rendering apparatus) out here, and we sure need one. Club overhead terrific. Could you lend us one of yours this year? In return, could give you autographed ball, left-hand pitcher, or a couple of fat pigs. Hopefully, (Signed) Johnnie Pepper Martin, Manager, player, coach."

Roanoke Five Beats Regal's Of D.C., 47-29

By the Associated Press

Roanoke, Va., March 9.—Roanoke's American Legion rode to its twenty-first straight triumph here this afternoon, cutting down Regal's, Washington (D. C.) A. A. U. champion, 47 to 29, before 1,191 paid admissions.

The game was played for the National A. A. U. allotment ($280) which goes to the winner to help pay expenses to Denver's national tournament beginning next Sunday.

After a ragged start when its passing was shoddy and its shooting off, the legion overtook the Washington team at 10 to 9, lost the lead as Bob Custer, leading Regal's shotmaker, connected and then regained it for good as Forrest Hoke scored two straight baskets for a 14-to-11 advantage. By the half, the Roanoke team was ahead 21 to 13.

Regal Rallies

Regal's made its final threat just after the second half began. Ackie Vianna, Custer and Tom Folliard made straight baskets to slice the margin to 21-18. The Legion called time out and Bob Spessard, who led all scorers with 21 points, then found the range, making two crips and one free toss to cut the Regal rally and send the Legion safely ahead at 26 to 18. The Washington boys never threatened again.

Custer led his team with 10 points, which tied him for second scoring honors with Paul Rice, Legion forward.

The Legion, Virginia A. A. U. champions, will compete in the Denver tournament and is expected to leave either Thursday or Friday night, depending on the draw in Denver.

Capital Skeet Shooter Scores In Jersey Meet

By the Associated Press

Florham Park, N. J., March 9.—The Nassau Trapshooting Club of Mineola, N. Y., nosed out the Loantaka Arrows by one bird today to win the Middle Atlantic five-man team skeet shooting championship at the Loantaka Skeet Club.

Nassau brought down 484 out of 500 birds. Third place went to the National Capital Skeet Club of Washington with 480.

George Deyo, of Washington, who Saturday won the 410-gauge event, tied for third place with J. Lion, of Bayonne, and Frank Traeger, of Montclair, in the individual all-bore event. Each had 99. Frank Kelly, of West Orange, won the event for the third time after beating S. L. Hutcheson, of Larchmont, N. Y., 25-23, in a shoot-off. Each had a perfect score in regular firing.

Paul Runyan Leads In West Coast Open

Former P. G. A. Champion Clips 4 Strokes From Par for 67; Unknown Is Second

By the Associated Press

Belleair, Fla., March 9.—Paul Runyan, former P. G. A. champion from White Plains, N. Y., clipped four strokes from par for a 67 to take a one-stroke lead on the opening round of the 54-hole West Coast Open here today.

Within three strokes of the dapper little veteran were six other professionals who bettered par, with Joe Zarnhardt, Norristown, Pa., a comparative unknown, in second place with a 68.

Craig Wood, Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Willie Goggin, Miami, Fla., carded 69's, and the 70 bracket included Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa.; Chick Harbert, Battle Creek, Mich., and Sam Snead, Hot Springs, Va.

Finals Today

The final 36 holes of the $3,000 tournament will be played tomorrow, with the 60 low scorers and ties and 10 low amateurs qualifying for the last two rounds.

Skee Reigel, Glendale, Calif., was low amateur with a 71, even par.

Ben Hogan, the leading money-winner of the season from Purchase, N. Y., and Gene Sarazen, with whom Hogan teamed to win the Miami four-ball last week, did not enter.

5 Birdies for Runyan

Runyan had five birdies, going over par on only one hole. He dropped putts of 14 and 8 feet respectively for birdie threes on the first two holes and birdies at the long sixth and ninth holes enabled him to turn in 32, four under par. His only lapse was on the short twelfth, where his tee shot found a bunker and he had to take a four. He ran down a 12-foot putt for a deuce on the short fifteenth.

Lawson Little, National Open champion from San Francisco, had a first-round score of 76, but appeared safely in the qualifying limit.

Bruins Regain Lead

Boston, March 9 (AP).—The Boston Bruins regained undisputed possession of first place in the National Hockey League stretch drive by swamping the Montreal Canadiens, 8-0, before 13,000 fans at Boston Garden tonight.

New York Rovers Beat Boston, 5 to 3

By the Associated Press

New York, March 9.—The New York Rovers fought off a valiant third-period rally by the Boston Olympics today to gain a 5-3 Eastern Amateur Hockey League victory before 8,614 fans at Madison Square Garden.

Tallies by Bob Mee, Ty Anderson and Al Dumond, after the Rovers had taken a 5-0 lead, turned what had been a dull affair for two periods into an exciting contest that had the customers howling.

Before the game, Anderson, veteran Boston defense man of eight years, was presented with a gold watch by League President Tom Lockhart. It was the first E. H. L. sportsmanship award and will be given annually to the player with the least penalties during the season.

Baltimore Defeats River Vale, 5 to 2

Baltimore, March 9 (AP).—The Baltimore Orioles held an early lead throughout the contest to defeat the River Vale (N. J.) Skeeters, 5 to 2, in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League game here tonight.

The victory turned the tables on the Skeeters, who defeated Baltimore at River Vale Saturday night, and sent the Orioles within a point of the league-leading Washington Eagles.

Riley sent the Orioles into the lead at the fourteenth minute of the opening period when he scored on passes from Piche to Grigor. From then on Baltimore was never headed.

Pirate Pitching Picture Still Confused—Frisch

San Bernardino, Calif.—Manager Frankie Frisch says "not more than three pitchers have clinched" their 1941 jobs with the Pirates. He declined to identify the three, but indicated one was 19-year-old Dick Conger, of Los Angeles, who played with Beaumont of the Texas League last year. Fifteen aspirants are competing for the Pirates' ten hurling posts.

Waiver Ruling Rescinded by Judge Landis

By the Associated Press

Belleair, Fla., March 9.—Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis disclosed tonight he had rescinded a ruling which prevented major league clubs from sending purchased players back to the minors without first obtaining waivers.

Commissioner Landis said he had not changed his mind about the rule, but rescinded it "to correct something I overlooked"—the fact that many clubs had purchased players with the expectation that they could be optioned out for three years without waivers.

The commissioner said he would recommend that legislation embodying the same provision as his recent order be adopted at the baseball rules meeting in St. Petersburg March 17, to govern future operations and give purchased players the same protection as drafted players.

Tried to Help Players

Landis explained that he sought by his ruling to correct an injustice to young purchased players who could be farmed out to the minors for three years without getting a chance with another major league club, whereas a drafted player could not be sent back down the ladder without waivers being obtained from other major league clubs, giving him a chnace to remain in the big leagues.

However, the commissioner said he realized that because many club owners had purchased players since last season with the expectation that they could option them to the minors without waivers, enforcement of the waiver requirement would work a hardship at the present and he would drop it for the time being.

At St. Petersburg, President Sam Breadon, of the St. Louis Cardinals, expressed gratification at Landis' action. He said the Cardinals and other clubs had made arrangements with the expectation that the old rule would be in effect, and that the waiver requirement would have worked a hardshhip.

Washington 'Magic' Wins First Game

Outhit, 11 to 9, Nats Use 4 Green Pitchers Against Reds' Best For Weird Victory

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Tampa, Fla., March 9.—In their first attempt at baseball this year, the Nats committed a bit of lese majeste this afternoon. They slapped down the world champion Cincinnati Reds, 6 to 5, before the unbelieving eyes of 3,000 Tampans.

You had to see it to believe the Nats won the ball game, and then you scarcely believed it. The Nats were outhit, 11 to 9, and four weteared young Washington pitchers issued ten bases on balls to the champions, but at the finish there the Nats were in possession of a one-run lead.

Against the four bush pitchers of the Nats, the Reds trotted out some of their most fashionable pitching talent—Gene Thompson, Johnny Vander Meer, Joe Beggs and Monte Pearson—but the Nats were able to dig themselves out from under a 2-to-0 deficit in the early innings and stagger home with the ball game.

Rough on Masterson

Stagger is the right word. At one point, Washington led the Reds, 6 to 3, in the eighth inning, but a pair of Bucky Harris' rookies threatened to walk everybody in the park. A young Cuban named Agapito Mayor took up the pitching for Washington and walked four men in a row in the eighth inning. In the ninth, Alex Zukowski also walked a run across the plate and had the bases full when Floyd Young providentially hit into a game-ending force play.

The Reds treated Walter Masterson roughly, too, banging him for five hits and two runs in the three innings he pitched. The young man who carried off the rookie pitching honors for Washington was red-headed Sam Cunningham, lean left-hander from Charlotte, who walked off the field a comparative pitching hero. Cunningham allowed five hits in his three-inning turn, but the only run permitted was a tainted affair, and he was breaking a clever curve ball over the plate. He was the only one of Bucky Harris' rookies who didn't walk a batter.

Nats Bunch Runs

Cecil Travis collected three of the Washington hits and shared the batting honors with George Case and Ben Chapman, who slugged out important blows. The Nats weren't scattering their shots much. They came up with three of their runs in the fifth inning against Van der Meer, and they collected their other three in the eighth against Joe Beggs, the former Yankee, to break a 3-3 tie.

Gene Thompson shut the Nats out for three innings, during which period the Reds took a 2-0 lead against Masterson. The Nats failed to stir up a run in the first inning despite the fact that George Case opened the game with a two-bagger to left.

Mike Thresh Hit In Head by Bat

Los Angeles, March 9 (AP).—Mike Thresh, Chicago White Sox catcher, was struck by a bat and knocked out in a baseball game between major league and coast league stars today.

Pepper Martin, manager of the Sacramento team of the coast league, missed a wide swing at a pitched ball and the bat struck Thresh in the head.

Four stitches were necessary to close the gash.

He Didn't Win the War:

Pieces of Haight

Washington, D. C.

Dear Boss:

Despite anything to the contrary you might hear from Jake, I haven't got a thought this morning that doen't have a Miami flavor. There's snow to the right of me, and snow to the left of me, but I can close my eyes and hear Biscayne Bay singing, "Lover, Come Back to Me."

HAIGHT

But I have just about worn out Miami as a subject for these letters, Boss, so I'll try another angle. I see by the papers that Army officers and enlisted men are no longer required to salute superior officers outside the military reservations, unless addressed by the superior officer.

I wonder if whoever made that change in the rules had in mind Washington in the early days of World War No. 1. Saluting here was a panic. There were so many officers around that it looked like the War Department was turning them out on a duplicating machine. Some of the newly made officers seemed to start out in the morning to see how many salutes they could get, something on the order of a kid "stamping" white horses and counting them.

There was much dissension among the boys headed for "over there" who had to keep popping up their arms to officers, who they had believed were doing little more than scar up the furniture with spurs. And don't think for a minute that many of the enlisted men didn't misjudge their salutes and turn it into a well-known gesture.

This saluting went on night and day and many a Western Union messenger boy got sick and tired of returning the salutes of Second Lieutenants. Then again, the Army had to salute the Navy and both had to salute the Marines and the Marines had to salute—but, you've probably got the idea.

In addition to messengers boys, the streetcar motormen, and mailmen, taxi drivers and hotel doormen all got their share of salutes and when they didn't acknowledge them they received a glare that was almost the equivalent of a court-martial.

The saluting business was especially annoying to the native Washington boys, who for the most part lacked the Congressional pull that sometimes made the difference between a private and an officer. It was bad enough for those out-of-town guys, with their damn education and their Sam Browne belts, to gobble up all the good jobs, but it was even worse when the District boys came back on furlough and found those guys escorting our girls and our only redress was to stiffen up when we saluted them. That, Boss, is when war truly was hell.

Don't get me wrong, Boss. I didn't win that war. I didn't get any nearer to the front lines than the tip of the Delaware breakwater and the closest contact I had with a submarine was when I helped clean up a ship loaded with pitch that had been torpedoed.

As far as I can remember I only had two brushes with Navy officers. I can remember the first time I drilled at the League Island Navy Yard. I had just gotten through telling the other recruits that I knew all about drilling because I was in Company E at old Business High when that company won the annual competitive drill. A warrant officer gathered us outside the barracks, sized us off and then yelled, "Attention."

We shuffled this way and that trying to make the line straight. The officer walked down to the end and looked up the line. "Hey, you," shouted the officer, looking straight at me, "pull back that belly of yours; it's sticking out like a Chick Sales in a fog." Only he used the right words for Chick Sales.

Then there was the time I was on guard duty at the radio station at Cape May. There were four sides to the enclosure from which rose the towers and a sentry box at each corner. Now, Boss, if you don't think it can get cold on Cape May on a windy night in February—well, I don't know if I was shaking from the cold or anticipation of a German attack, but my knees were knocking one dark night when I heard the brush near my post russling.

"Who goes there?" I shouted.

"The officer of the day," came the reply.

I gave him the usual "advance and be recognized," but I was so scared I was taking his word for it. Well, he gave the counter sign and then looked me over when we moved to where the light was better. He seemed to give me the O. K., but just as he appeared to be leaving he said, "By the way, do you know the guard rules?"

Now if it hadn't been for that gal in town I would have known the guard rules. I had intended to learn them, sometime, but I just didn't get around to it, just as I haven't gotten around to fixing that leak under our sink with the old stocking tied around it.

Well, I confessed, "No, sir. I do not know the guard rules."

I expected him to have me put in the brig but he replied sternly, "I'm coming back and I'm going to ask you the same question. If you know what's good for you, you had better know them."

Well, between that gal in town and the blackjack games I had been trying to do my sleeping fast and I could have used some, but when I was relieved of my post. I rushed back to the barracks, grabbed that Navy Manual and, in the four hours before I went back on duty, I crammed those guard rules into my fat head.

Boss, I learned "The Night Before Christmas" in a half hour when I was 8 and I rendered it to the Ladies Aid Society in a satisfactory manner, even if my mother did almost have to shout when she prompted me on that part about "the moon on the new fallen snow gave a luster—" .But those guard rules

Woe Is El Magnifico! Bull Dumps Him Again as He Seeks To 'Redeem' Himself; 10,000 Latins Say He's El Floppo

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, March 9.—El Magnifico, the fallen idol of the bull ring, was downed by the first bull he tackled today in his comeback campaign from "supreme disgrace," but recovered and dispatched three bulls before retiring in some doubt as to whether he had won back his public.

The high humiliation of having failed to best a bull last Sunday was upon Lorenzo Garza when he went forth to redeem himself in the tense arena this afternoon.

He started brilliantly and had hardly begun when he won the approving cry of "Ole." But after a series of passes, he was caught on the horns of the bull and hurled to the ground, half stunned. He killed the first bull after a few minutes without ever having recovered fully from the impact.

The wind made his cape work difficult and swirling dust added to his troubles.

He left the ring after his third and final bull amid jeers and cheers. Some threw flowers while others angrily hurled cushions, oranges and wadded paper.

Garza's green and silver embroidered suit was torn on the horns of the first bull, but he showed no wounds except a scratch on the left leg. His second bull responded poorly to the cape work loved by bullfight fans, and the third was even more trying.

The 20,000 fans filed out in heated dispute over Garza's merits, as always. Bullfight experts were at odds themselves, half for El Magnifico, half making threatening gestures.

But while Garza was considered still on probation, he apparently escaped the newly sharpened penalties providing up to 15 days in jail and a 5,000-peso fine (about $1,000) for bullfighters who don't beat the bull.

He had been heckled out of the ring, with threats of mayhem, when nine thrusts of his sword failed to kill the bull a week ago.

In the intervening week of broodful penitence, the authorities had laid a 1,000-peso fine on him for last Sunday's debacle, and as the Latin indignation bounded, they decided to up the maximum penalty.

The jail term may have been added to the increased fine in the light of "protective custody" for the fury of a Latin deprived of the gory climax is something to avoid. It does not stop at mouthy derision, or the Mexican version of the Bronx cheer.

Moreover, El Magnifico (as he was hailed before the probationary period of the past week) was not sure his public would applaud his next effort.

Large Crowd Expected for Great Event

Many Records Sure To Be Set on New Boards at Uline; Many Good Races

By Jack Munhall

Al Blozis, Fred Wolcott and Greg Rice, track's most glittering trisome, plus more than 400 entries will bring this city its greatest track meet tonight as Catholic University presents its eighth annual track and field games at Uline Arena.

Before a crowd that may reach 7,500 and over an 11-lap track of the newest design will speed many of the country's fastest dash and middle distance runners. In the center of the $700,000 plant the most amazing weight-thrower in history again will try to lower his indoor shotput record. And as a source of running interest Georgetown and Fordham will be locked in a point-for-point duel for the collegiate team title.

Against this dazzling backdrop will be staged a program of 28 events, calculated to span nearly four hours, opening at 3:30 p. m. with 15 minutes of high and prep trials and resuming in the evening at 7:30 when things will really start to happen.

The main things expected to happen are a flock of new meet records. Conservatively speaking, more than half a dozen marks are sure to tumble. Perhaps, they all will go. At least, J. Dorsey Griffith, the major domo of the meet, wouldn't be surprised if the talent he has imported smashes every available worthwhile standard.

2 New Events Installed

Though there are many eagerly awaited events most interest probably will attend a pair of newly installed events, the Touchdown Club 2 miles, featuring Rice and Mel Trutt, his keenest rival, and the Edward Killion mile, headlining Walter Mehl, "Miler of the Year."

But there are many fans looking ahead with just as much zest to the Rector's 1000, the Abbey Club Invitation 50, the Phi Kappa 880 handicap, and, of course, Wolcott's first appearance here, in the 50-yard high hurdles, and Blozis' latest onslaught on the shotput mark.

Wolcott also will be cofeatured with Georgetown's Jack Doolan in the Abbey 50. The Rector's 1,000 and the Phi Kappa 880 are the more interesting because in neither is there an outstanding favorite. Jim Kehoe, the former Maryland ace, representing Washington Athletic Association, will be the one to beat in the 880, and Bill Carey, Fordham's I. C. 4-A champion, looms as the soundest bet in the Rector's 1000.

Most unpredictable of all the headline races will be the 880. Though Kehoe undoubtedly is one of the three foremost half-milers extant, he'll have his hands full with Beetham, always a tough contender, and also a flock of up and coming youngsters, including Georgetown's freshman Lou Collado, Fordham's Frank Leary and Jack Galloway, Wake Forest's Southern Conference champion.

Big Three In Relays

Highlighting the collegiate section of the program undoubtedly will be the mile and two mile races. In the mile it'll be Georgetown, the Millrose Games champion, and Fordham, the team generally considered the best in the country. And in the two-mile event it'll be Fordham, Georgetown and also N. Y. U.'s quartet, featuring the sensational Les MacMitchell. This is the race N. Y. U. has been pointing for and it is withholding MacMitchell from the big mile to run the anchor leg.

Rice, with world's indoor records of 8:53.4 for 2 miles, and 13:51 for 3 miles, may conceivably notch a mark that will stand up for this meet for years to come. For back of him in the home streich probably will be the man who pushed him to his 2-mile mark, none other than persistent Mel Trutt. And with Trutt may be old Joe McCluskey, the 2-mile steeplechase titleholder, who just now is attaining his top form.

Georgetown's great frosh relay runners will be in the spotlight in the A. A. U. sprint medley and they're a sure bet to crack the record. The Hoya quartet of Short, Al Rogers, Hugh James and reliable Lou Collado have run the mile in 3:19.5.

Georgetown and Fordham both should crack the meet mile relay record of 3:36.2, held by Maryland, and these two schools probably will decide which is to haul off the hardware for the team champion in the 2-mile relay, final on the card.

Draws Local Interest

Of strictly local interest will be District of Columbia 880-yard championship which will bring out Sterling Kehoe, Maryland's frosh star, Hugh Short and Mike Arajuo, two more of Georgetown's plentiful yearling aces, and probably Stu Reeves, formidable Washington A. A. representative.

Navy is the defending team champion and will send a strong squad of some 20 men to try and retain that honor. Other crack college teams will come from Duke, North Carolina, Maryland, Washington and Lee and William and Mary.

Tech, Central, Roosevelt and other local and nearby high schools will be seen in the four races for scholastic trackmen.

The ticket office at Uline will be for ducats which are priced at 75 cents and $1.10 and $1.65, lowest price scale in the history of the meet.

Dick Ganslen, Earl Meadows To Renew Feud

The man who pushed Earle Meadows to a new world indoor pole vault Saturday in the Knights of Columbus games at Madison Square Garden will tangle with Meadows again here Saturday, in the Washington Athletic Association meet at Uline Arena.

Dick Ganslen, the former Columbia University star and Meadows' only 1941 conqueror, will lead two other great timber toppers in one of the features of the local club's first indoor meet. Genslen beat Meadows last Friday in the Maryland-Fifth Regiment games in Baltimore.

Meadows is due here tomorrow to train for his test and also to take a series of radio singing auditions which may result in his obtaining employment here and changing his residence to the District.

Tickets for the meet are on sale at the Sport Center, Young Men's Shop and Fairway Sports Shop, as well as at Uline.

Frank Leahy Calls Irish Gridders To Spring Drills

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., March 9.—Frank Leahy, Notre Dame's new football coach and athletic director, announced today that spring training would start Wednesday.

The 32-year-old successor to Elmer Layden, who quit to become commissioner of pro football, arrived Saturday and began making plans for the spring drills in a conference with his assistants, all of whom have been here several days.

Leahy said he would establish temporary residence at South Bend until June 1 when he would move his family from Boston and take a house near the school. The former Boston College mentor added that he planned to attend a civic testimonial dinner in Layden's honor here Monday night.

Riggs Defends Pensacola Title

Pensacola, Fla., March 9 (U.P.).—Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, had little trouble breezing through a successive defense of his Pensacola invitational tennis championship today. He defeated Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., 6—2, 6—4, 6—3.

Riggs and Jack Kramer, Los Angeles, Calif., beat Wayne Sabin, Portland, Oreg., and Gardner Mulloy, Miami, 4—6, 6—1, 8-10, 6—3, 6—3, for the doubles title.

This morning, Kovacs ended a semifinal match, winning from Sabin, Sabin and Mulloy bettered Norman Brooks, Oakland, and Chris Poulos, Pensacola, 6—2, 5—7, 6—1. Riggs and Kramer eliminated Eddie Alloo, Rollins College, Fla., and Bill Talbert, Cincinnati, 6—3, 6—4.

D. C. Gloves Fighters Off For New York

Eight youngsters with high ambitions—Washington's representatives to the Golden Gloves Eastern championship tournament—shoved off yesterday afternoon for New York and a shot at titles which may pave the way to fame in the professional end of the fight business.

They'll weigh in this afternoon in the New York Daily News offices and take the ring tonight at the Coliseum for their first taste of fire. Quarterfinals, semifinals and finals of the tourney will be held in Madison Square Garden.

The District's representatives include Bob Sullivan, heavyweight; Jackie Cranford, light-heavy; Lou Bass, middleweight; Nick Latsios, welterweight; Red Vernon, 135-pounder; Bernie Cady, featherweight contender; Danny Petro, highly favored 118-pounder, and his brother, Joe Petro, 112-pounder.

Al Farrell, coach of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club; Naiman Massey, of the St. Mary's Boys Club of Alexandria, and Glenn Drake, Apollo A. C. coach, accompanied the team as trainers. James A. Sullivan, manager of the Times-Herald tourney in Washington, went with the team as manager.

112 Fighters From 14 States in Gloves Meet

New York, March 9 (AP).—Golden Gloves boxing champions from 14 Eastern and Southern cities will swing out tomorrow night in the first session of the annual "tournament of champions" for the selection of an Eastern team to meet the West on March 26 at Chicago.

There are 112 entries in the Eastern eliminations, which will open with 56 bouts in two rings at the Bronx coliseum. The scene will shift to Madison Square Garden on Tuesday and Wednesday nights for the semi-finals and finals.

Teams competing here are sponsored by the Buffalo (N. Y.) Courier-Express, Charlotte (N. C.) Observer, New York Daily News, Union City (N. J.) Hudson Dispatch, Huntington (W. Va.) Advertiser, Jacksonville (Fla.) Lions Club, Newark (N. J.) Sunday Call, Miami (Fla.) Daily News, Philadelphia Inquirer, Southeastern district (Atlanta, Ga.) A. A. U., Syracuse (N. Y.) Columbia Awarded Open Qualifying Tests

Baltimore Will Play Host to Amateurs In Surprise Move; Play Here May 26

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The apparent dispute between the District and Maryland State Golf Associations as to who should handle the sectional qualifying rounds for the major tournaments has been settled by the U. S. G. A., awarding trial rounds for the National Open to Washington and the National Amateur to Baltimore.

Robert Stead, jr., sectional representative of the U. G. A., announced yesterday that Columbia Country Club, of this city, has been awarded the sectional rounds for the Open Championship, May 26. A course will be named, probably Five Farms for the amateur qualifying round in Baltimore August 14.

At the midwinter meeting of the Maryland State Golf Association, the U. S. G. A. announced that both Open and Amateur rounds would be held in the District under the supervision of the Maryland State body.

D. C. G. A. Objects

This plan met with objection at the District Golf Association meeting that followed, however, as the local members felt the District should handle the trial rounds for one or the other events. Columbia offered the course for the Open rounds at the time, if the rounds were conducted by the District G. A.

The original purpose of holding the tests here was because the city represented a central location for Maryland and Virginia golfers. The U. S. G. A. asked the Maryland body to oversee the rounds due to the efficient manner in which it had conducted trials in the past.

Thus it was somewhat of a surprise to Maryland State officials to learn the amateur rounds would be held in Baltimore, when they had already planned to hold them over here. The State body may still suggest the sectional tests be played over a Washington course.

Not So Important

When time comes for the sectional qualifying tests it will hardly make any difference as to where they are played or which association handles the tests as both tournaments are too far away to interest many District golfers.

The Open will be played June 5-7 at Forth Worth, Tex., and the Amateur, August 25-30, at Des Moines, Iowa.

The District was host to both rounds last year, Manor to the Open aspirants and Chevy Chase to the amateur place seekers.

Local entries in the National Open will have Friday, May 23, as a practice date at Columbia while out-of-town participants may practice Saturday and Sunday, May 24-25.

Club Members Honor Gardner

More than 200 members of Kenwood Country Club gave Manager Ted Gardner a surprise party last night before his induction into the Army Wednesday. He will leave for Fort Meade on that date.

Gardner has completed one year as manager after serving three years as assistant. He will be succeeded during his one-year service as a selectee by Ray Welch, assistant manager.

Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director of Selective Service, was the guest speaker.

Brewer Five Snaps Losing Streak, 51-34

The presence of Owner Chris Heurich, jr., in the stands apparently served as a tonic to the Washington Brewers last night as they came to life to rout the Champion Philadelphia Sphas before several hundred spectators in an American Basketball League game at Riverside Stadium, 51 to 34.

The Brewers flashed a complete reversal of the form that had cost them four consecutive defeats as they administered the Sphas one of their worst lacings of several seasons. The Sphas were playing without the services of Joe Gotthofer, their hard-driving forward, who is inactive due to influenza.

Sphas in Rally

The Brewers never looked better than last night. They hopped away to an early lead and were out in front in the opening minutes, 12 to 1, but faded before a determined Philadelphia thrust that pulled the Sphas within a 16-17 score at the period.

The Sphas made their most spirited bid for victory in the opening minutes of the second period, when Petey Rosenberg and Irving Torgoff sent them into a 22-19 command at one time, but the Brewers kept pounding away and were leading at the intermission, 31-25.

The game developed into a complete rout in the final period with Nat Frankel and Ben Kramer breaking away for some fancy shots and the entire Brewers line-up clicking smoothly.

Goldfadden Scores

Ben Goldfadden, the Brewer center, continued his brilliant work of recent games and brought the fans to their feet with two beautiful baskets scored on the dead run. Kramer, connecting from all angles, and Frankel, led scorers of both teams with 11 points each. Torgoff and Inky Lautman accounted for ten points each for the Sphas while Rosenberg, contributing several of his long distance specialties, dropped in nine points.

Andy Crawford Memorial Race Won by McKenzie

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 9 (INS).—Driving his tiny hydraplane "Peo" at a speed of 46.68 miles an hour, Ken McKenzie, of New Haven, Conn., today won the national championship for 91-cubic-inch hyroplanes at the third Southland Sweepstakes Regatta.

McKenzie also took top honors in the Andy Crawford memorial race, honoring the Washington sportsman killed last week.

Bettina, Comiskey Win Miami Bouts

Miami, Fla., March 9 (U.P.).—Melio Bettina, former light heavyweight champion, tonight knocked out Buddy Knox, of Dayton, Ohio, in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round fight before a crowd of 4,000 at Biscayne Fronton.

In another featured heavyweight clash, young Pat Comiskey, 210, of Paterson, N. J., made short work of Domnigo Valin, 201, San Francisco, knocking him out in 2 minutes and 16 seconds of the first round of their scheduled 10-rounder.

Patent Bowlers Top Capital Transit

Patent Office bowlers defeated Capital Transit, 2,842 to 2,814, in a special five-game match yesterday at Rendezvous Alleys.

Publink Trip Promised by Anacostians

Anacostia Golf Club members will send a representative to the National Public Links championship in Spokane, Wash., this year, expenses paid, according to announcement yesterday by Glenn C. Russell.

The club, now making a drive for new members, has several innovations planned for the coming season and one will be to sponsor any member qualifying locally for the national championship.

Six monthly tournaments will be held over the Anacostia course, starting in April. Five flights will qualify in each of the match play events.

The club also plans a stag affair for new members at the start of the season and a dinner dance at a later date. Team matches will be arranged with nearby clubs.

Any golfer who does not belong to an organized club is eligible for membership. The initiation fee will be $6. Green fees will be separate as the club is not privately owned.

Russell, secretary-treasurer of the club, can be reached at 1909 Minnesota Avenue Southeast for further details.

Runs, Hits & Errors

With SHIRLEY POVICH

(All communications to this department should be addressed to Shirley Povich, Angebilt Hotel, Orlando, Fla.)

Orlando, Fla., March 9.—A trade that would bring the Nats Shortstop Frankie Crosetti is seen as the solution to the Washington club's infield troubles, according to Washington Fan Thomas E. McMorrow, of 3500 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

"To my mind, all these ardent Yankee-haters are being extremely foolish in th wishful thinking that the new Yankee infield pair from Kansas City, Rizzuto and Priddy, will be a flop," writes McMorrow. "They hope that the Yankees will wind up far out of the running, and Griffith himself has said he'd like to see the damyankees in the cellar, but deep.

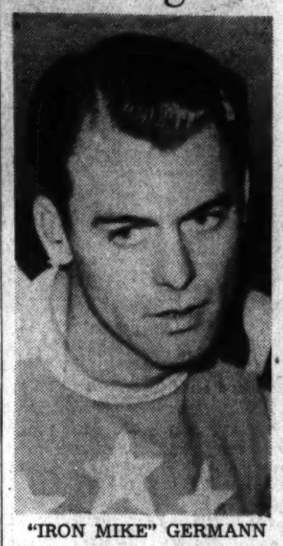
"This is all very well, but it occurs to me that these people are kidding themselves. If Rizzuto and Priddy don't come through, Crosetti and Gordon will return to last year's positions and Sturm will probably play first, whereas if they succeeed Crosetti will be on the bench and very eligible for trading or selling purposes. There has been much talk of his coming to Washington.

"If this deal were made, the Nats would acquire the best fielding shortstop in baseball, Travis could go back to third base, where he belongs, and Lewis to the outfield. These two men are now scheduled to play positions which they have proved conclusively they will never learn to play in 50 years. Yet here we are, ready to enter upon another season with two positions on the team miscast.

"The acquisition of Crosetti could turn what threatens to be one of the worst fielding infields in baseball into one of the best. It's a natural. The question is, Is Griffith too much of a tightwad to lay a little hard cash on the line, or doesnt he want to improve the team? Could you inform me how chances are for this deal going through, or why, perhaps, I am mistaken in thinking it would be such a fine thing for the club.

COMMENT: No doubt is there that any sane deal that would bring Crosetti to the Nats' infield would be a boon to the Washington club. It would at once solve both the shortstop and third base positions, enabling Travis to move back to third and giving Washington excellent protection at shortstop. Crosetti's defensive strength would offset any lack of power at bat. Fact is that the Nats have made the Yankees the highest offer for Crosetti of any club in the league, and may yet wind up on him. Balking the deal at this time is the uncertain status of Rizzuto in the military draft. When that is cleared up, the Yankees may be disposed to let Crosetti go. However, despite our correspondent's admiration for Crosetti, he is no better than the second-best shortstop in the league. The best shortstop in the league, by unanimous vote of every American League manager, is Cleveland's Lou Boudreau.

Germann Gets New Chance With Eagles



"IRON MIKE" GERMANN

A hard-trying but rarely unspectacular ice hockey player who two weeks ago was ticketed for release by the Washington Eagles is today the team's newest Cinderella Man.

Mike Germann, the square-shouldered right wingman with the left-handed shot, just about cemented his future with Red Mackenzie's Eastern Amateur Hockey League leaders Sunday night when he fired the goal that enabled the Eagles to beat the Atlantic City Sea Gulls, 3-2, in overtime.

Off Probation

That important goal which gave Washington a victory coincident with a 2-1 loss suffered by the Baltimore Orioles, the Eagle's only rival for the championship, was his second of the evening and capped one of Mike's finest performances for the local club.

And yesterday the pair of goals paid Germann dividends when Coach Mackenzie removed him from the probationary list and declared he'd probably be invited back next season.

Out to Win

Germann, his confidence buoyed and his spirit bolstered by his reinstatement, will be out to win new honors here tomorrow night when the Eagles resume the pennant chase in a match with the New York Rovers.

The Eagles will hold a workout at 11 a. m. today, prior to entering a busy period of the race. They face games with the Baltimore Orioles Friday and Sunday and in between they are to play River Vale's Skeeters on Saturday.

Roosevelt, B.-C.C. Paired for Games Friday at Durham

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., March 9.—Pairings for the third annual Duke-Durham Southern High School Basketball Touranament were made here today and the event will get under way Thursday night with Jefferson High, of Roanoke, Va., meeting Greenville, S. C., High in the first game.

In the upper bracket Durham goes against John Marshall, of Richmond, Va., at 9:20 Thursday night, with Greenville and Roanoke meeting at 8 o'clock.

The lower bracket has Lafayette High, of Lexington, Ky., against Bethesda-Chevy Chase (Md.) High, and Roosevelt High, of Washington, D. C., against Boys High, of Atlanta, Ga. Those games will be played Friday morning, the Lafayette-Bethesda game at 9:30, and the Roosevelt-Boys High clash at 11 o'clock.

By the Associated Press

Denton, Tex., March 9.—Don't say anything about powder puff shooting to the rifle team at Texas A. & M., the Nation's largest military school.

A team from the Texas State College for Women defeated the Cadet marksmen, 381 to 379. But that wasn't all. Top individual honors went to Miss Irene Chamberlain, who shot a 199 out of a possible 200.

Nats' Rookie Parade at Orlando

No. 9—SHERRARD ROBERTSON, Infielder

He'd make Clark Griffith the happiest man in baseball if he made good in the big leagues. He's Griffith's nephew, one of the seven fatherless children reared by the owner of the Nats. It isn't nepotism that has brought young Roberston to the Nats' camp. He has talent.

He was the leading run-producer in the Class B Piedmont League last year when he hit 23 homers, despite his mere .245 batting average. He has power at bat, and a throwing arm to match. He's no cat around the infield, but when he comes up with a ball, the batter is a dead duck at first base. He throws that well.

He's a handsome-looking, brown-haired 6-footer who bats left handed. He came out of the University of Maryland in 1938, and played a half season at Charlotte. He got a brief trial with the Nats last year and showed that he could field and throw, but was no bearcat against big league pitching. He's wearing glasses this year in the hope that he can follow the ball better.

In the Nat's camp, he's getting no favors. He's living not at the hotel with the more highly-rated rookies, but at the uptown boarding house with the lesser lights. He works with the afternoon squad of near-nonentities, but he can win his way into the upper crust if he can maintain any sort of a batting average.

His father was a ball player, with Montreal. Forty years ago, Mr. Griffith gave Infielder Jimmy Robertson a tryout in the Chicago White Sox training camp and a few years later married his sister. Robertson played most of his ball at Montreal.

Sherrard Robertson knows that barring a sensational performance in the Nat's exhibition game he's headed back to the infield and Charlotte, where his brother Calvin is president-manager of the Nats' farm. His home runs have made him a favorite there, but he thinks 30 points tacked on to his batting average would land him in the big leagues.

Nominations for Four Big Bowie Stakes to Close on Friday

$5,000 Rowe Memorial on Opening Card

Meade and Taylor To Ride at Meet; Other 'News' From Track's Press Agent

Now is the time for the Bowie press agent to come to the aid of the sports department by providing a lead story for the Monday racing page. Without further ado, here's his latest offering:

Meade and Taylor are only two of the top-notch jockeys slated to display their skill during the initial meeting of Maryland's 1941 season. Others coming from all sections of America are Johnny Gilbert, C. Mojena, Joe Renick, Manny Berg, Eddie DeCamillis, Wayne D. Wright, Al Shelhammer and Charlie Corbett.

General Manager Joseph A. Farrell calls horsemen's attention to the closing date for the four stakes to be run here this spring. The deadline for the stakes is Friday, March 14, at midnight. All entries postmarked prior to that time will be accepted.

Dates Are Listed

Dates for the stakes to be run here are: Wednesday, April 2, the $5,000 Rowe Memorial, 6 furlongs. Saturday, April 5, the $5,000 Bowie Handicap, mile and 70 yards. Wednesday, April 9, the $2,500 Bowie Kindergarten, five-eighths, exclusively for 2-year-olds. Saturday, April 12, the $5,000 Southern Maryland Handicap, mile and one-sixteenth. All stakes with the exception of the Kindergarten are for 3-year-olds and upward.

J. P. (Doc) Jones wired from Charlottesville, Va., that he planned on shipping the horses of Mrs. Louise Vlau and Crispen Oglebay here for the opening of the Eastern racing season.

Trainer J. Merryman Black wired from Florida that he was thinking seriously of cutting his campaign there short and shipping here. Black has some fleet 2-year-olds in Long Legs, Coffee Spoon, Rolling Car and Vale Dove, not to mention a fleet trick in Flanago, a 5-year-old.

Eastwood Horses Go

C. E. Eastwood, well known State sportsman, plans on racing Challamore, Brown Saxon, Sack, One Thirty, Room Service, My Elsie, Shaheen, Santiago, Eight Rolls, Chronos, Mayerling and two unnamed 2-year-olds during next month's sport. Eastwood wintered his charges at the Timonium half-mile track. He has arranged for Jockey Eddie Decamillis to come on from Florida and handle his charges.

Hirsch Jacobs, of New York, who already has a large part of his stable in training here, having shipped them from winter quarters, is also bringing up his Florida division. Jacobs, who topped the American list for seven consecutive years, is making a determined effort to regain his lost laurels.

"Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons, who topped America's 1939 list of winning trainers with the sum of $266,205, shipped in divisions of the Wheatley Stable and Bel Air Stud from Hialeah Park, Florida. Fitzsimmons will have Jockeys Jimmy Stout and Porter Roberts to handle his campaigners.

J. Donald Hay, who has been associated with American racing for a quarter century, will be in charge of the track's totalizator wagering.

Chevy Chase Pro, Pioneer of Modern Follies, 62 March 18

Ponce de Leon's search for the fountain of youth was launched too soon—in fact, about 420 years too soon. And what's more, Poncey was looking in the wrong place when he landed in Florida looking for a gushing spring.

This conclusion was reached after a hasty survey of the action of Norval Baptie on the ice at Chevy Chase Ice Palace, and it's too bad we couldn't get Juan P de L. off in a corner and say to him:

"Go west, chum—about as far west as North Dakota—and look for a frozen body of water, the kind that this fellow Baptie started out on back in 1889, and you might trace down your fountain of youth."

It seems that there's no stopping Monsieur Baptie, the chunk little French-American who is the pioneer of figure skating in America and who is now preparing to celebrate his sixty-second birthday at Chevy Chase next week—March 18.

Won't Hide Age

Baptie is a character who makes no bones about his age, says it's "too damn much trouble to try to hide it." He doesn't have to, anyway, for he looks 10 years younger than he really is—which makes us shed a tear for Poncey. With all the zeal the Spanish explorer had he might have take a look at Baptie hopped right out to Dakota and really found something.

As in the case of the billiard wizard, Willie Hoppe, there's little you can say about Baptie that isn't known to sports followers. He has held every speed skating record there is to hold on ice, and 15 years ago he started touring the country with ice shows that were the forerunners of the modern-day Ice Follies and Ice Capades extravaganzas.

You'd think, at 62, he'd be tired of it all—but 'tain't so. he is now making plans for another touring show this summer.

"I'm too damn old for speed skating—have been for some time—but I still can do all the tricks on the ice that I used to do 15 years ago," Baptie said frankly. "They still want to see me, I guess."

Baptie said he has an offer for a spot at the Auditorium this summer in St. Louis, Mo., and that he had several other things in mind. One thing is certain, however—he'll organize a troupe and hit the road with a show which will include Washington talent.

Wife May Join Troupe

Gladys Lamb, his wife and partner, with whom he skated to fame in arenas and tanks all over the Nation more than a decade ago after turning to figure skating, is now appearing in the Copley-Plaza Hotel in Boston. She probably will join him to go on the road.

Baptie is an enthusiastic showman and justly proud of the grace and agility with which he handles his trim frame on the ice. Yesterday, however, he was joking about his latest accident.

He took a spill on the rink at Chevy Chase last week while helping the boys scrape the ice and broke a rib. The plow knocked his feet out from under him, he hastily explained.

That carried Baptie back to his last "serious accident." It was in Canada when he was at the height of his success as a figure skating champion. He had just jumped ten apple barrels and the crowd was tearing the house down with applause. Not wanting to disappoint them, Baptie gave out with his best bow—and slipped flat on his face and broke his arm.

Baptie thinks Lillian Mae Tribby, 20-year-old Washington girl, has a great ice career ahead of her and that musical comedies on ice are going to approach Ziegfeldian proportions in the near future.

The Chevy Chase pro was never an amateur.

"Frankly, the money always interested me," he said, "I've won all kinds of medals and trophies, but, you know, you can't digest those."—AL HAILEY.

Broad-Jump Pits Not Big Enough In San Antonio

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Tex., March 9.—Claud Kellam is a believer now.

The broad jumpers were making practice hops yesterday—all but W. L. Clopham, of Oklahoma A. and M. He told Kellam, city athletic director, the jumping pit looked mighty small.

"Why son, the end of that pit is 25 feet from the takeoff. You aren't in the habit of jumping 25 feet, are you?"

On his first jump Clopham cleared 24 feet, 11¼ inches.

Drake Star Leads Missouri Scoring

Des Moines, Iowa, March 9 (AP).—Walter O'Connor, Drake's little guard, closed a brilliant three-year career by winning the Missouri Valley Conference individual basketball scoring title.

O'Connor topped the field with 129 points in 12 games, three more than Herb Van Deven, of St. Louis University. Ed Beisser, center on Creighton's championship club, finished third with 110 points and his teammate, Brownie Jaquay, and Don Dougherty, of Washburn, tied for fourth with 101 points.

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al:

I almost feel like bursting out crying every time I think of the hard luck some people would try to make us believe has come the way of Owner Charles S. Howard. Just think, he runs Mioland last Saturday and his horse only wins a cheap $50,000 race. I'll be satisfied if Clymene gets third money in a race at Bowie. The Kentucky Derby entries are out and I see that Alan Clarke didn't take my advice and nominate Moalee. Not that I thought Moalee had a chance, but it is the best way in the world to get $25 worth of publicity. Then again, suppose Moalee is that kind of a horse. He would at least have a crack at the Kentucky Derby which still is the most sought-after prize in American racing despite the fact that other races may carry more money. Although I was forced to give up on them before they won, Rex Flag and several other long-priced winners were put over recently to bear out the line I had on them. However, I did have some with good prices last week. But this Tropical meeting is going about the same way as Hialeah. I'll be glad when it's over. One guess is as good an another in Florida. They do everything but run backward. Looks like we will have to wait for Bowie. By the way, Bowie opens three weeks from tomorrow. George Cook, Dion Kerr, John Manfuso and other Washingtonians have their horses on the scene. I understand Alan Clarke has one there named Walter Haight. I wonder if he's a little fat rascal. The Jockeys' Guild was quick with an offer of aid to the family of Freddie Faust. Washington jockey who died recently. However, there was no large insurance payment. Freddie died after a long, expensive illness, due to a brain abscess that probably was caused by one of his numerous falls. Perhaps his passing was not as spectacular as some, but there should be a way to help his family. BILL.

First race—LADY JAFFA lacks some of the class of the opposition in this field but she gave a pretty fair account of herself in a race at Hialeah. She would be a keen factor with a good ride and I'm going to string along. CHERRIKO'S last was encouraging and this one will be a threat. PATRICIA A. for the show end.

Second race—SUN ANTIOCH likes this track and the veteran will be right there if those ancient legs hold up. I'm going to take my chances. DUSKY GIRL gets in with feather weight. JAW BREAKER for the minor money.

Third race—NOTFORME will have the improved Jockey Johnny Gilbert in the saddle and could be the right one in this rather open affair. JOTA has speed and may stick long enough to be a serious factor. BOAT COVER could be third.

Fourth race—KLEIG LIGHT has done about everything asked and should be prominent with these. I'm going to shoot for the whole works. TAXES has that excellent recent effort as a recommendation. INDIAN LODGE for the show end.

Fifth race—RINGIE closes briskly and may be along in time to make it embarrassing for these. DETROIT BULL is fairly consistent and fits nicely in this field. TOPEE will be a threat if the going is off.

Sixth race—AIR POST is fit as a fiddle and has been running accordingly. Looks like the winning favorite in this field. I'm still waiting for HE MAN to show his real race. BANKER JIM had a world of trouble last out and could take it all

Seventh race—SNOW looks like the right one in this field. Deserves the pick anyway you look at him. CHERRY TRIFLE and BIG ROVER to complete the money bracket.

Nats Beat Cincinnati In Debut, 6-5

Mixup in Outfield

It wasn't Masterson's fault that the Reds scored a run in the third. The fault lay somewhere between Joe Mellendeck and George Case in the outfield where Harold Craft's high fly dropped safely for a two-base hit while the Nats' two outfielders were toying with the idea of catching it. A single to center by Ripple scored McCormick.

All of a sudden in the fifth, the Nats began getting obstreperous. They were encouraged by Ripple's two-base muff of Bloodworth's long fly. Vander Meer walked Al Evans at this point, and after Cunningham struck out, Case got a run home with a single to right. Evans, who reached third on the hit, scored a bit later when Ripple stupidly caught Mellendeck's foul fly to short right. Ben Chapman then drilled another run home with a beauteous triple down the right-field line to lift the Nats into a 3-2 lead.

Cunningham escaped the fourth inning nicely, despite Baker's double past Lewis that opened the inning, but he gave up the tying run in the fifth after Frank McCormick doubled to left center with one out. A Texas Leaguer off Ripple's bat dropped at Mellendeck's feet for a single and the score was tied at 3-3. Cunningham, showing clever control of his curve ball, struck out two Reds in the sixth.

Mayor Has Horrible Time

The Cuban, Mayor, got by the seventh nicely enough, and in the eighth the Nats presented him with a 6-to-3 lead. They assaulted Joe Beggs for four hits and three runs in the inning. Mellendeck opened with a hot-shot single to center, and reached third when West singled to right on the hit and run play. Buddy Lewis fanned, but Travis didn't. He pasted a double to left center and scored Mellendeck. George Archie lifted a long fly to center that scored West from third, and Jimmy Bloodworth reached Beggs for a single to center that scored Travis.

The left-handed Mayor had a horrible time of it in the eighth, after getting the first man out. He walked three hitters in a row and had a working start on forcing a run across when Harris hastily called in Zukowski. The Polish lad inherited a two-balls-no-strike count on Craft and passed him to force the run home, but he escaped further damage when Bloodworth started a double play on McCormick's grounder.

Gets One Over Plate

Zukowski all but pitched away his two-run lead in the ninth. He got the first man out, then walked the next two hitters. He helped himself at that point by fanning Baker, but he walked Pinch-Hitter Mele to fill the bases and then he walked Bill Werber to force a run home. Then he had the great good luck to get a ball over the plate and Young grounded to Lewis to end the ball game.

Travis could have averted the one run the Reds scored off Cunningham if he had come up cleanly with Gleason's double-play grounder in the fifth. He succeeded finally in getting only one man . . . Until he flied out in the eighth, George Archie didn't get the ball out of the infield . . . He hit into a double play in his first time at bat and then fouled out twice . . . Ben Chapman's fifth-inning triple was the hardest swat of the ball game . . . He might have stretched it to a homer . . . If there was a fielding star for the Nats, it was Jimmy Bloodworth, who started an important double play and went far to his right for another important out . . . Rookie Catcher Dick Hahn did a noble job in spearing the wild pitches of Mayor and Zukowski in the last two innings . . . The Nats' bus headed back to Orlando tonight . . . On Tuesday they meet the Giants at Tinker Field.

were plenty tough. I finally went to saying them out loud, despite the "Hire a Hall" growls of the other sailors.

Well, Boss, although I repeated those rules over and over and watched the brush while on duty, I never saw that officer again, but I have never forgotten those guard rules.

Not to change the subject, Boss, but the Walter Haight Club looks like a flop. I guess you can give those three girl secretaries you hired to help me a week's pay and let them go. The first mail brought applications for membership from Brother Joe, Cousin Al, Aunt Gussie, Uncle Nate, my mother, my wife and my children, but the only others were from the fellows and gals up at Kip Edwards' office, bless 'em.

But I'm going to run a contest and I'm going to have two badges for the Bowie meeting and two seats for the opening ball game as prizes. Here's the dope: In order to become a member of the Walter Haight Club mail one dime and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Walter Haight, The Washington Post.

The dime goes to the Children's Hospital Blood Bank Fund and I send a membership card. Being a member makes a person eligible for my big contests.

Emmitsburg Club Organizes for 1941

Emmitsburg, Md., March 9.—The Emmitsburg baseball club of the Adams County (Pa.) League, organized for the 1941 season yesterday by electing officers. They are: Cooley C. Combs, president; John J. Hollinger, vice president; Charles J. Eckenrode, secretary; Guy S. Nunemaker, treasurer. The club played in the Adams circuit last year instead of joining Maryland leagues.

Major Stars Bow on Coast

Los Angeles, March 9 (AP).—Stars from six Pacific Coast League baseball teams beat those from four Major League clubs, 6 to 4, in an exhibition game today.

The coast leaguers hopped on Dizzy Dean, of the Chicago Cubs, for three hits and as many runs in the opening inning.

Seven major and four coast league pitchers were on the mound during the game and the lineups were changed frequently to give the 12,000 fans a chance to see noted players.

Mickey Haslin, of San Diego, and Elbie Fletcher and Vince DiMaggio, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, hit home runs and were rewarded by kisses from Film Starlet Martha O'Driscoll.

A's Nose Out Coast Nine

San Diego, Calif., March 9 (AP).—A minor league hitter solved "Black Jack" Knott for a four-bagger in the first inning today, but the hitter's mates could make only two more the rest of the game as the Philadelphia Athletics beat San Diego, of the Pacific Coast League, 3-2. Knott, "Chubby" Dean and Bill Beckman shared hurling duties.

Pirates Bow to Chisox

Pasadena, Calif., March 9 (U.P.).—Dario Lodigiani's ninth inning home run today gave the Chicago White Sox a 10-to-9 decision over the Pittsburgh Pirates. Lodigiani's homer was the fourth of a free-hitting game. Bob Klinger and Frank Kalin, of the Pirates, and Larry Rosenthal, of the White Sox, hit four-masters earlier.

The Pirates announced the signing of Alf Anderson, rookie infielder up from Atlanta, of the Southern Association.

Phillies Warm Up

Miami Beach, Fla., March 9 (AP).—The Sea Gulls defeated the Sand Dabs, 11 to 7, today in the Phillies' first intra-squad baseball game.

Charley Frye, who worked two innings for the Gulls, saw the roughest action, giving up eight hits and getting rid of a wild pitch, the Dabs got seven runs off Frye in the sixth.

Pitcher Paul Masterson, his Sand Dabs battery mate, Ben Warren, and Danny Litwhiler, the Gull's rightfielder, connected for homers.

Cub Regulars Bow

Avalon, Calif., March 9 (AP).—The Yannigans whipped the Regulars, 9 to 4, today in the fourth intra-squad game at the Chicago Cubs' spring training camp.

Lenny Merullo, rookie shortstop, led the Yannigans' attack with four hits. Phil Cavarretta also found the varsity pitching easy to solve, driving in four runs with a homer and double and scoring three himself.

Rangers Win, 8 to 5

New York, March 9 (AP).—The New York Rangers tonight defeated the Toronto Maple Leafs, 8-5, in a fast, exciting National Hockey League game that was in doubt until the last 2½ minutes, when wingman Lynn Patrick fired home a pair of goals to give the Rangers an unbeatable lead.

Bruins Beat Collegians, Lead Series

With the crowd rooting for the underdog Washington Collegians, the Washington Bruins, colored professional five, yesterday eked out a 30-39 victory to gain the first leg up in a three-game series with the former Recreation Collegiates.

"Ace" Parker was the individual star of the game, turning in 13 of the Collegians' points, playing opposite "Tarzan" Cooper and "Long John" Williams.

Bruins Lead, 15-10

The Bruins led, 15-10, at the half, but their lead had been reduced to two points, 27-25, with four minutes to go. "Buck" Covington and Tarzan went back into the game, the former accounting for a basket from side-court, and the latter adding one point from the foul stripe.

The Collegians put on a belated windup, Parker and "Superman" Henley drawing foul shots by Cooper's man-handling, and making them good.

Plummer Scores

Then "Bruiser" Plummer carried the ball downcourt to score from scrimmage and Willkie Watts tossed one that rimmed the basket as the whistle blew.

The Bruins announced the acquisition of Sidat-Singh for the game with the Brewers at Riverside Stadium on March 20. In the preliminary "Regiment" Troupe's Urams defeated Cardozo High School, 27-25.

Austrian Wins National Ski Championship

By International News Service

Aspen, Colo., March 9.—Toni Matt, who fled his native Austrian Alps a few months after the Nazi invasion and anschluss, today won the national combined downhill slalom championship on the steep, difficult Roch Run course at Aspen.

As the was crowned the new champion, Matt declared:

"I'm going to become an American citizen. I don't like the Nazis. If I were home now I would be forced to fight the British just like my two brothers have been forced to—and I know they are fighting against their own wishes."

Blonde Gretchen Fraser, of Denver, who performed under the colors of the Sun Valley (Idaho) Ski Club, won the combined women's downhill slalom title, replacing Marilyn Shaw, of Stowe, Vt. Miss Shaw finished third today. Second place among the women went to Nancy Reynolds, of Sun Valley.

Matt, a handsome youth of 21 years with finely chiseled features, replaced Dick Durrance, the former Dartmouth star, now of Alta, Utah, as the national combined champion. Durrance won the slalom race today with Matt placing second. But Matt's superior performance in yesterday's downhill event captured the combined crown on a point basis. Matt is now a ski instructor at North Conway, N. H.

Marceron Wins Pin Handicap

Frank Marceron posted the highest scratch set in the third annual bowling tournament of the Safeway Stores League yesterday at Convention Hall and won first prize with a net total of 403.

Marceron rolled 371 and with his 32 handicap sticks was winner of the $40 to prize by six pins. The new champion, who topped a field of 73 entries, is a member of the Happy Valley Bacon team.

William R. Smith was fourth with 368-28, 396, followed by Bob Litts, 369-20, 389, and A. A. Reid, 353-34, 387. All were money winners.

Bill Gartrell, high average man in the league with a 120 figure, finished out of the money with a scratch set of 387.

Frank Allan Wins Florida Golf Title

Sarasota, Fla., March 9 (AP).—Frank Allan of Pittsburgh, Pa., won the Florida West Coast invitational golf tournament here today, defeating Charles Eberhardt of Tampa, 4 and 2, in the 36-hole final over the Sarasota Bay course.

Eberhardt was one up after the first 18, but encountered trouble with his tee shots and Allan squared the match on the twenty-second hole, went two up on the twenty-seventh, and closed with a birdie 4 on the thirty-fourth.

Penn Adds Relay To Carnival Card

Philadelphia, March 9 (INS).—A one-mile relay event today was added to the program of the annual University of Pennsylvania Relay Carnival April 25. The new race will bring together teams from Army training camps east of the Mississippi River. H. Jamison Swarts, meet director, said he had invited Fort Dix, Fort Meade, Indiantown Gap, Langley Field, Marine Basic School, at League Island; Camp Shelby, Miss.; Quantico Marine Base, Navy base at League Island; Camp Devens, and Fort Knox, Ky., to send teams.

Spook to Aid San Diego In Tourney

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, March 9.—Spook, the invisible Mexican hairless Chihuahua, is back at the week-long National Intercollegiate basketball tourney that begins tomorrow.

For two years the San Diego State quintet has brought Spook, who consists of nothing more than a white leather leash, harness and dog tag, to the annual classic where his silent yelps of encouragement have carried the Californians to the final round on each visit.

This year's club, says Coach Morris Gross, is the best balanced of three he has brought East.

Spook was created by the San Diego players on their first trip to the tournament. A length of stiff wire was inserted in the leash and harness to mystify waitresses, porters and bellhops.

The Californians rank near West Texas State, top seeded team in the fifth annual tournament, as title favorites.

Dartmouth And Columbia Play for Title

By the Associated Press

New York, March 9.—The Nation's college basketball teams have finished up their local affairs, with a couple of exceptions, and from now on will work on a national basis.

During the last week the championship of three major conferences, the Big Six, the Missouri Valley and the Big Seven were settled. All other major title races except that of the Eastern Intercollegiate League and the North-South play-off in the Pacific Coast Conference, perviously had been decided.

The last two will be finished this week and at the same time the first of three national tournaments will be run off.

Dartmouth and Columbia probably will settle the "Ivy" league title when they meet tomorrow at New York. Dartmouth's Indians, seeking their fourth successive championship, beat Harvard in last week's only start for a record of nine victories in ten games.

On the Pacific Coast Stanford won the Southern Division title and Washington State the Northern division. Their three-game play-off, which also serves to qualify the winner for the national collegiate A. A. regional series, begins Friday at Pullman, Wash.

The Big Six race ended in a tie when Kansas dropped its last two games. As a result, Iowa State and Creighton will play off for the right to represent their district in the N. C. A. A. Western playoffs at Kansas City, March 21 and 22.

Arkansas previously had qualified for the Western N. C. A. A. tourney by winning the Southwest Conference title while Wisconsin, the Big Ten champion, and North Carolina, which had the best all-season record in the Southern Conference, have been named as two of the four entries in the Eastern tourney at Madison, Wis., March 21 and 22.

The first national event is the National Intercollegiate Tourney which begins tomorrow at Kansas City.

Western Kentucky is one of the teams being considered for the Intercollegiate Invitation Tournament at New York March 18-24. Seton Hall, Rhode Island State and Long Island already have been invited. Others under consideration include Wyoming, which won the big seven title; City College of New York, which still has to beat New York U. at Madison Square Garden tomorrow to qualify; George Washington, Westminster, Duquesne, Ohio University, Toledo, Bradley Tech, Texas Tech and Virginia.

Greenberg Hits Tiger Camp; Sees Good Year Ahead

By the Associated Press

Lakeland, Fla., March 9.—Big Hank Greenberg arrived in the Detroit Tigers' training camp today and said he looked forward to "another good year."

But whether the American League's "most valuable" player will spend that year in the outfield or in Uncle Sam's Army is a question yet to be decided by selective service officials. Greenberg holds a low order number, and draft officials in Detroit have classified him as immediately available for service.

All hands were accounted for at today's workout; including Eric ("Boob") McNair, a candidate for shortstop, who sprained his ankle in the opening drill a week ago.

Cowgirls Wrestle Here Thursday

Patsy Miller, a Nevada cowgirl who throws a mean lariat and is equally adept at a half-nelson, will meet another girl wrestler from the wooly West, Betsy Forbes, of New Mexico, in a special added attraction on Thursday's wrestling card at Turner's Arena.

Miss Miller appeared here several weeks ago and was a big hit. Joe Turner has promised the winner a match here with Mildred Burke, the Jim Londos of women's wrestling.

The match supports the card headlined by Lou Plummer and Joe Cox.

D. C. Dog Third In Field Trials

Pocomoke City, Md., March 9 (AP). Dog fanciers from seven Eastern States attended the three-day spring field trials of the Delmarva Gun-Dog Club which were concluded on the Edgar Shaw farm near here today. There were more than 60 entries in the meet.

Today's Open to All Stakes were won by Homewood Gallant Knight, a pointer owned by John H. Miller, Clayton, N. J. Zero, a setter owned by Virgil Hawse, of Staunton, Va., was second, and U-Boat, a pointer owned by R. A. Ralph, Washington, D. C., was third.

Hobbs Defends Wire-Tapping On Air Forum

Two representatives of the Government—a spokesman for labor and an attorney—indulged in a "'tis-'tain't" debate on merits of legalizing wire-tapping last night on American Forum of the Air.

Representative Sam Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, and Alexander Holtzoff, special assistant to the Attorney General, favored enactment of a bill introduced in the House by Hobbs. The bill was opposed "in principal and in letter" by Arthur Garfield Hays and Julius G. Luhrsen, executive secretary of the Labor Railway Executives Association. The broadcast was Nation-wide over the Mutual network, originating before an audience in the Willard Hotel.

In explanation of his bill, Representative Hobbs said, "It provides that evidence obtained (by wire tapping) shall be admissible as evidence in criminal prosecutions. That's all! Not indiscriminate wire-tapping by anyone. But only in a felony case, and not then unless authorized in writing by the cabinet officer charged with the duty of enforcing that law."

Hays visualized legalization of the act as similar to methods of the GPU and the Gestapo.

"Democracy is not as efficient a system for catching criminals as is dictatorship," he declared. "We want nothing of that kind in this country. Catching criminals is only one purpose of Government and it does not warrant espionage on the whole community. A fundamental of democracy is that citizens are to be trusted."

"It is misleading to assume that wire tapping by law enforcement officers involves an infringement of some fundamental traditions," countered Holtzoff.

"It is tragic to contemplate that foreign spies can freely use the telephone and the short-wave radio, without any right on the part of the authorities to intercept their communications."

Luhren said, "The evil that goes to the heart of wire tapping is that it cannot be limited to the guilty alone. Those innocent people who will be snooped on by detectives, if any wire tapping of any kind is legalized, are people like you and me, and the people in this room, and the people down the hall, and people out in the street."

U. S. Needs Good Personal Examples, Says Rep. Rabaut

Not only should the father set an example for his son, but the family should set an example for the neighborhood, Representative Louis C. Rabaut (Democrat), of Michigan, yesterday told 115 members of the Holy Name Society of St. Michael's Church, Silver Spring.

Representative Rabaut discussed the need of good example in the country today at the fourth annual communion breakfast of the society, attended by members and their sons, in Silver Spring Hotel, following communion in the church.

The Rev. Thomas A. Calnan, pastor, welcomed the society members and urged them to continue cooperation in parish affairs. The Rev. John Czyz, spiritual director of the society, also spoke. William A. Kehoe, president of the Washington Section, Archdiocesan Union of Holy Name Societies, was guest of honor.

Alexandria Asks Defense School Units

Establishment of a separate junior high school, construction of a $70,000 vocational building to house machine shops at the George Washington High School, and an increase in elementary school facilities to provide for children who soon will reside at a 300-home naval defense reservation on King Street extended have been proposed by Alexandria's school board as a means of meeting increased demands resulting from the influx of defense workers to the city and nearby communities. The board's requests are being studied by the city council's school committee, headed by Councilman Charles L. Burgess, and a report probably will be submitted to the body within the next few weeks.

According to T. C. Williams, superintendent of schools, Alexandria's recent population increases have resulted in overcrowded conditions in all city schools, but the most serious problem exists at the George Washington High School, where the cafeteria and auditorium are now being utilized for classroom space. The proposed vocational building, for which plans already have been approved by the State school board architect, would permit school authorities to convert the present vocational shop space into eight additional classrooms, which would temporarily solve enrollment problem.

Although a separate junior high school has been recommended, Williams said, the school board is asking the city council only to purchase a site, with a view toward erecting the building at a later date when it becomes necessary. Under the present system; elementary school graduates move immediately into the high school, and no junior high school system prevails.

The elementary school problem was described as most serious in the northwest suburbs, where facilities are inadequate to accommodate the children of families who will move to the Naval housing site, being constructed for workers at the torpedo factory in Alexandria. The only two schools in that area are now crowded to capacity, he declared.

In addition to the children residing in Alexandria, the school board may be forced to provide for many at Fort Belvoir, since there is no high school at the Army post.

Council to Discuss Winchester Bench

Winchester, Va., March 9.—Council will meet in its third consecutive special session tomorrow night to consider the election of a trial justice to succeed Donald L. Weems, resigned.

Council has been informed that before a trial justice can be elected, an enabling ordnance will have to be passed. Such an ordnance was submitted by City Solicitor James P. Reardon.

Council slashed the salary of the office 50 per cent, reducing it to $1,200 per annum; authorized the employment of a substitute trial justice at $5 per day, his salary in excess of 20 days to be paid by the trial justice, and the employment of a clerk at $500 per year.

Bonds were set at $5,000 for the trial justice; $2,000 for the substitute justice and $2,000 for the clerk, all to be provided by the city.

Trichinosis Hit Fairfax Family of 14

Revealing that 14 members of one family recently had been stricken with trichinosis, Dr. G. R. Carpenter, Fairfax County (Va.) medical director, yesterday warned against eating pork that hasn't been thoroughly cooked.

Dr. Carpenter said the 14 persons took sick after eating freshly killed pork, which on examination was found to be teeming with trichinella spiralis.

The cases were discovered by physicians from the division of zoology of the United States Public Health Service, Dr. Carpenter said.

Feeding of raw garbage to hogs is the chief cause of trichinosis, Dr. Carpenter said there are 15 large commercial hog farms and other non-commercial farms in the county where garbage is fed to hogs.

"Five to ten per cent of the garbage-fed hogs in this area are infected with trichinella, whereas less than one per cent of grain-fed animals are so infected," he declared.

Dr. Carpenter said both his office and the Public Health Service had urged the adoption of a county ordinance requiring the cooking of all garbage fed to hogs.

P.-T.A. to Discuss '6-3-3' Plan

Nicholas Orem, superintendent of Prince Georges County schools, will discuss the "6-3-3" plan proposed for county schools at a meeting of the Mount Rainier-Brentwood Parents and Teachers Association tonight at 8 at the Mount Rainier Elementary School.

The new plan provides for six years elementary, three years junior high and three years senior high in the county schools. Miss Pherme Miller, of Miller Cottage, will give a chalk talk and Little Temperance League children will present a playlet.

New Red Cross Unit To Meet at Takoma

The first meeting of the newly formed surgical dressing unit of the Takoma Park branch, Montgomery County Red Cross Chapter, will be held Tuesday from 9 a. m. until 3 p. m. at the Takoma Park Municipal Building, 8 Columbia Avenue.

Mrs. J. Wilson Dodd, chairman, has issued an appeal to all women living in the Maryland section of the town who are not engaged in other Red Cross units, to give some of their time to the new group. Meetings will be held every Tuesday.

Grace Guild to Open Lecture Series Today

The first of a series of five lectures for women will be sponsored at 11 a. m. today by the Women's Guild of Grace Episcopal Church, Woodside, Md., in the parish hall, Georgia Avenue.

Mrs. Hester Beall Provenson, assistant professor of speech at the University of Maryland, will discuss "Making the Most of One's Personality." Each lecture will be followed by an open forum.

French Africa To Be Defended Without Aid

By the Associated Press

Vichy, March 9.—France's African empire and naval bases such as Bizzerte will be "energetically defended by French forces alone" against attack from any quarter, it was announced tonight at the conclusion of Gen. Maxime Weygand's secret consultations in Vichy.

The chief of the formidable French Army in North Africa and Syria completed his talks today with Marshal Petain and defense ministers and prepared to fly back to Algiers within a few days.

A communique said that measures to defend French Africa against "foreign attack" were a subject of special examination during Weygand's four days of talks here and that this defense will be carried out by French forces without any foreign aid in event of aggression.

The Vichy government's official representative in Paris, Count Fernand De Brinon, was said by the Paris radio to have announced that the French Fleet will "engage in battle" with British warships if necessary to break the starvation grip of the British blockade.

France's decision, according to the Paris radio, has been communicated to Admiral William D. Leahy, United States Ambassador in Vichy.

An official spokesman of Petain said, however:

What Can We Believe?

By Roger W. Babson

On Foreign Propaganda

Savannah, Ga., March 9.

I have just come from the dining car of the Orange Blossom Special. While there, I was given the latest newspaper picked up en route. It was with great interest that I found in a box on the first page the following:

News from warring countries is subject to censorship. It may sometimes be misleading. It is the right and duty of every American citizen to do his own thinking, hold to his own beliefs, and not permit himself or his country to become a victim of emotionalism or propaganda.

Probably other newspapers carry similar warnings, but I had not before seen such a prominent notice on the first page of a daily paper.

I am 100 per cent for freedom of the press; it is the foundation of democracy. When we lose it, we might as well close up shop; but permitting free speech by Americans is very different from printing lies from abroad. When the newspapers receive dispatches from abroad, through regular channels, how do they know whether those are true or false? People who criticize newspapers should spend a day at a managing editor's desk and see the mass of stuff which comes in from all over the world. Based upon my experience in World War I, I do not believe two-thirds of the dispatches from the capitals of Europe, Asia and Africa. Christianity today is so ignored that every nation believes it is "right" to lie.

ROGER W. BABSON

Notwithstanding the present dastardly lying campaigns of every nation, the world is still getting better. Emilie Folting says that in the sixteenth century coffee drinking was forbidden in Constantinople "because it stimulated thinking amongst the common people." It is said that the first offense was punished by beating and the second by death. Yet, in my visits to Constantinople it seemed as though most of the people spent the larger part of the day sipping very strong coffee.

We can discount by 66 2-3 the news items from abroad; but it is difficult to keep calm over what is said within this country. The talk about "secret weapons," that a "new world order is inevitable," and that "democracy is doomed" is very bad. I also dislike talk about the futility of war and "I did not raise my boy to be cannon fodder." I recently listened to a Communist speech stressing the "corruption and oppression" by our "plutocratic democracies." Much of such talk we have heard in the halls of Congress during the past few weeks. Most of it has been honest; but some of it may have been enemy-inspired.

How far shall we go in suppressing such opinions? How can we distinguish between honest opinions of Americans and hired propaganda of foreign agents? It is more and more difficult for conscientious Americans to speak their minds if they disagree with the "higher-ups," or even with their intolerant neighbors. If we get so that those born in the United States or Canada cannot freely speak their honest thoughts without being persecuted, is democracy worth fighting for? Certainly, the treatment in some cities of John L. Lewis, Norman Thomas and Marian Anderson is a disgrace to us all.

Newsmen in Washington have already been photographed and fingerprinted. The Secretary of the Navy has sent a "confidential" letter to newspapers asking them not to print certain facts. While making studies at Washington relative to the war uses and supplies of arsenic, I am at a loss to know whether the Chemical Warfare Service is telling me the truth or stringing me along.

All of this reminds me of World War I when I worked for the Committee on Public Information under that able genius, George Creel. Although we now have no such "committee," yet Mr. Lowell Mellett heads a great press bureau in Washington which, indirectly, has the spending of millions of dollars of taxpayers' money. This bureau may be used to lead the taxpayers astray. Although I head a large statistical organization, scouring the country for facts, I am utterly bewildered at times trying to separate the truth from falsehood.

Of course, the real remedy for our difficulties will be found in the twentieth verse of the fifth chapter of Deuteronomy. Since time immemorial, lying has been recognized as one of the ten basic sins. In fact, the only hope of world peace is to get back to the teachings of the Bible which all nations have, for the time being, thrown out of the window.

As a second suggestion, I believe that all persons who are not citizens of the United States or Canada should be compelled to keep their mouths shut on political and social matters, especially in connection with the war. My church friends will not back me up in this. They say that if the United States and Canada should prohibit foreign propaganda in their countries, all the Axis powers and their friends would immediately throw out from their countries all American teachers, preachers and missionaries, especially those who are paid with money from the United States and Canada. So the plot thickens!

Cliff Edwards Down To Last Two Ukuleles

United Aircraft Net Surges to $13,139,984

By the Associated Press

New York, March 9.—United Aircraft Corporation, one of the Nation's primary producers of fighting aircraft engines and planes, reported today an increase of 150 per cent in production and 40 per cent in profits last year over 1939.

The company's consolidated net income was $13,139,984, or $4.94 a share, compared with $9,375,436, or $3.53 a share, in 1939—and 1939 established an earnings and output record.

On December 31 the company had $445,122,070 of unfilled orders on hand—another record.

The report indicated the company is turning out more than 1,000 high-power, air-cooled engines a month, a far greater number than the whole American industry was manufacturing a year ago.

"Shipments were increased from $51,161,599 in 1939 to $126,754,830 in 1940," said the report. "More than 70 per cent of all shipments were destined for the French and British."

Also reported was a fourfold increase in employes, from 5,200 two years ago to 20,500 three months ago, with the employment curve still rising.

Stewart-Warner Corporation

Stewart-Warner Corporation reported 1940 consolidated net profit of $1,470,804, equal to $1.18 per share, compared with $553,224, or 45 cents, in 1939. Sales in 1940 totaled $29,272,000, an increase of 13 per cent compared with 1939.

Phelps Dodge Corporation

Phelps Dodge Corporation, major United States copper producer, reported consolidated 1940 net income of $12,603,980 after provision for depreciation and estimated Federal income and excess profits taxes, equal to $2.49 a capital share. This compared with $12,278,601, or $2.42 a share, in 1939.

Texas Gulf Sulphur Co.

Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. reported net income for 1940 or $9,140,888, equal to $2.38 a capital share, compared with $7,847,483, or $2.04 a share, in 1939.

Skelly Oil Co.

Skelly Oil Co. reported 1940 consolidated net income of $3,316,678 after depreciation and depletion, equal to $3.28 a common share after preferred dividend requirements to the time of retirement on May 1. This compared with $2,360,783, or $1.98 a common share, in 1939.

Inspiration Consolidated Copper

Inspiration Consolidated Copper Co., for the year 1940, reported consolidated net income of $2,212,688 after charges and taxes, but before depletion, equal to $1.87 a common share. This compared with net income of $825,658, or 70 cents a common share in 1939. The company's mines are in Arizona.

American Ice Co.

American Ice Co. and subsidiaries reported net loss for 1940 of $519,050 after Federal taxes and depreciation, compared with net profit in 1939 of $84,435, equal to 60 cents a share on the $5 noncumulative preferred stock.

ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF ONE-STORY FRAME DWELLING, 7 ROOMS AND BATH, NO. 5009 BLAINE STREET N.E.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded in Liber 6788, folio 365, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, as modified by a certain unrecorded extension agreement dated April 5th, 1940, and at the request of the parties secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of the premises, on MONDAY, THE TENTH DAY OF MARCH, 1941, AT THREE O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described property in the District of Columbia, to-wit: Lot 65 and the West 12½ feet front by full depth of Lot 66 in Square 5191 in the Capital View Realty Company's subdivision of part of the tract of land called "Conclusion," as per plat recorded in Liber 72, folio 5 of the Records of the Office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia subject to the building restriction line as shown on said plat. Subject to the rights of redemption by the makers of the aforesaid deed of trust, their heirs and assigns, within a period of sixty days from the date of sale, not exceeding Sundays and holidays, as provided in said deed of trust. Subject to any and all liens created by conditional bills of sale for heating and other equipment, if any, and overdue water rentals. All other taxes and assessments to be adjusted to date of transfer of title.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase money to be paid in cash, balance in equal installments, represented by promissory notes of purchaser, payable in one and two years, with interest at 8 per cent per annum from day of sale, payable semiannually, secured by first deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash at option of purchaser. A deposit of $500 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within ten days from expiration of redemption period, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

Listen! with Glynn

It's always pleasant to have a guest columnist, especially on Mondays. And so today are presented the reactions of a now veteran broadcaster, heard recently over Radio Station WJSV.

"On Friday, December 20," they begin, "I was walking home from school just wishing I could broadcast soon. Just as I was walking in the door at home, the telephone rang. I ran to answer it and it was Miss Hall, a secretary at the Columbia Broadcasting System, and she said she wanted me to broadcast. I took it calmly 'cause I knew it was only a joke. But she repeated it and then I knew it wasn't a joke. I said 'Honest to goodness?' Miss Hall said, 'Honest to goodness, it's true.' Now I became as excited as anything. She told me to be at the Earle about 10 of 10 next day although the program didn't start until 10. The program was 'They Need Shoes Campaign.' When I got there I was all excited. Dad said, 'Who wouldn't be excited!' The funny part was that I was scared stiff before I went on the air but when I was on, I wasn't scared a bit. After the broadcast we went back to Dad's office and then went home."

The writer is Betsy Goodloe Porter, age 10, the daughter of Paul Porter, C. B. S. counsel in Washington, and the words above appear in the winter issue of the Lafayette News, just off the press at the Lafayette School.

Contract Bridge

Sitting South, you hold these cards:

You need all three tricks to win your contract; what is your best chance to make them?

Answer

Lead the five toward dummy's jack, and hope that West has the queen. If he has, he might think that East has the king, in which case the play of the queen by him might make possible a winning finesse against his partner's king. If West ducks, you make all three tricks.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — No Slug, Mugg — BY MILTON CANIFF

DON'T APPEAR SO STUPID! I SAID THE YOUNG MAN IS TO ACT AS A MEMBER OF KIEL'S STAFF! IF HE FAILS TO OBEY ORDERS HE WILL GO BACK TO THE PRISON AS A BRITISH SPY! KIEL GOT HIM OUT...AND KIEL CAN PUT HIM BACK IN!...
...AND BURMA WILL ALSO BE SHOT IF THE YOUTH DOES NOT OBEY ORDERS!
SO YOU KNOW MY NAME IS NOT MADAME LUSTRE...
OF COURSE! KIEL IS A VERY THOROUGH PERSON! I HAVE QUITE A COMPLETE FILE ON THE NOTORIOUS "BURMA"!
BEAT IT, BURMA! THERE'S A CAR OUTSIDE! ..I SHOT A GUARD WITH THIS GUN HE SENT ME!...I DON'T MIND USING IT ON HIM!
HO, HO! YOUNG WILD WEST SAVES THE FAIR HEROINE! ... THE GREAT DIFFICULTY IS THAT THE PISTOL CONTAINS ONLY BLANK CARTRIDGES!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

WHY, SUE! I WASN'T EXPECTING YOU AND TED FOR HOURS! IS ANYTHING WRONG?
YES.....! EVERYTHING'S WRONG!
I WALKED INTO TED'S OFFICE UNEXPECTEDLY, AND THERE HE WAS, WITH HIS WONDERFUL PAT--OH, AUNT MARY! PAT IS A GIRL! A PRETTY GIRL!
YOU'RE PROBABLY ALL UPSET OVER NOTHING, CHILD! I HOPE YOU DIDN'T DO ANYTHING FOOLISH!
WELL, I TOLD HIM TO TAKE HER TO DINNER.. AND I SUPPOSE HE DID!
TED!
DALE

DONALD DUCK — There's Something About a Sailor — BY WALT DISNEY

WELL, OKAY, I'LL GO, BUT YOU'VE GOT TO PROMISE TO BRING ME BACK IF I GET THE LEAST BIT SEASICK!
OKAY, SISSY, I PROMISE!
OH, DEAR! I...GULP...THINK YOU BETTER TAKE ME BACK, DONALD!

MICKEY FINN — A Question of Orders! — BY LANK LEONARD

MICKEY AND INSPECTOR BIFFALICK NOW KNOW THAT TEX EARL'S FINANCIAL BACKER IS WILLIAM MUFF, FORMER POLITICAL BOSS OF THE CITY!
I'M NOT SO SURE THAT IT WAS SMART TO LET MUFF KNOW YOU'RE WISE TO HIM, MICHAEL?
WE'RE COUNTING ON HIM GETTING PANICKY, UNCLE PHIL—AND MAKING SOME SLIP THAT WILL GIVE US POSITIVE PROOF!

U. S. Operation Of Flying Field Towers Urged

By the United Press

Atlanta, March 9.—Two aviation officials today recommended to the Civil Aeronautics Board that the Government take over airport control towers.

John H. Gray, manager of the Atlanta Airport, made the recommendation at a CAB hearing. Richard Roose, Civil Aeronautics Administration traffic control supervisor, said such a step would simplify flight control for pilots.

They were testifying at the final session of a four-day, CAB hearing into the crash near here of an Eastern Air Lines sleeper plane, which killed five passengers and three crew members.

The Federal Government could correct situations of inadequate equipment and personnel reportedly existing at many city owned airports, it was said.

A plane's flight is controlled by airways traffic control until it arrives at its destination. Then the airport traffic tower takes over, Gray said. If the airport tower, he said, were under Federal operation the whole flight control could be simplified for pilots.

Crashes, Switchovers Connected

It was pointed out that four of five recent airline crashes had occurred in the vicinity of airports close to the time the control of the plane was being switched from airways traffic radio to the control tower.

Roose said the Atlanta Airport tower needed five new radio receivers, a new sensitive type altimeter and a light gun, but the Atlanta City Council had failed to provide funds for them. This lack of equipment would be remedied under CAA control, he testified.

Gray told the examiners the Atlanta tower "sometimes doesn't have a clear picture of traffic at the airport."

"I have recommended to city council also that personnel be increased, but nothing has been done," he added.

Testimony brought out that about 300 irregularities had been charged to pilots taking off and landing at the airport by the tower operator during the past 14 months.

Violations by Pilots

Forty-three of the irregularities were charged to Eastern Airlines pilots, Ben Faulkner, manager of the tower, testified.

"Most of these irregularities have been of a minor nature and due to misunderstandings but a few have jeopardized the safety of the planes," Faulkner said.

"One instance of this," he said, "was an E. A. L. pilot who took off after the tower told him to await further clearance. I immediately advised him of his violation of orders by radio and he replied that I could file a violation against him as he was en route to New York. This pilot was grounded by E. A. L. for 30 days and paid a $50 fine in city court for his action."

Faulkner believed pilots would more readily obey tower orders if the tower were under C. A. A. operation.

The examiners appeared to have uncovered few clews as to why the big transport was cruising too low in making a routine turn preparatory to landing. Experts testified the motors were under power and that there had been no structural failure.

William Smithers Funeral Today

Funeral services for William Smithers, 57, chief clerk for the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad, who died on Friday, will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at his Alexandria residence, 1216 King Street. The services will be conducted by the Rev. E. H. Blakemore, jr., pastor of Trinity Methodist Church. Burial will be in Methodist Protestant Cemetery.

Mr. Smithers suffered a heart attack as he was leaving his office at Potomac Yard late Friday, and died in the ambulance of the Alexandria fire rescue squad en route to Alexandria Hospital.

Scouts to Mark 29th Anniversary

Alexandria Girl Scouts will mark the twenty-ninth anniversary of the founding of the scouting movement in America on Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, with a dinner at the Norton Memorial, adjacent to St. Paul's Church at Pitt and Duke Streets. Approximately 125 scouts, parents and city officials have accepted invitations.

Guest speaker will be Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn, vice president of the National Girl Scout organization, who will be entertained at an informal reception preceding the dinner.

Mrs. C. H. Strader and Mrs. H. A. Cadey are in charge of arrangements.

Two Held in W.Va. After Robbery

Woodstock, Va., March 9 (AP).—Shenandoah County authorities were notified today that Marshall Henry and T. C. Kersner, of Parkersburg, W. Va., were being held in Franklin, W. Va., after a police alarm for the arrest of the two men had been broadcast following the holdup of a local drug store last night.

West Virginia officials are holding the men on suspicion that they are implicated in a series of armed robberies, it was stated here.

The holdup here netted between $5 and $6.

SAFELY TO SHORE—Using a swaying breeches buoy, the Coast Guard removed 19 of the crew of 28 from the freighter Olaf Bergh, caught on a sand bar in a pounding surf a scant 100 feet off shore at Ocean City, Md. There was no mishap in bringing the men ashore

Parlous Plights Plague Police, Feline's Freak Feazes Firemen

By Gladwin Hill
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, March 9.—You can expand W. S. Gilbert's aphorism to read that neither a policeman's nor a fireman's lot is a happy one. The brawnier branches of the public service suffered some frightful indignities this week.

In Fort Wayne, Ind., an ambulance was called to get a cat's tail out of a washing machine . . . A fire alarm in Gary, Ind., that called out 5 trucks and 25 firemen turned out to be just a lady locked out of her home . . .

A Roanoke, Va., policeman was called from his traffic directing to release his wife from his handcuffs, which their kids had managed to clap on her . . . And after three Chicago fire companies nearly knocked themselves out extinguishing a blaze in some parked railroad cars, it transpired that the railroad was burning up the cars on purpose.

But all these harassments perhaps were compensated for by a triumph that took place in Los Angeles. A policeman sued his wife for smashing her car into his car—and won—and she admitted it was her own fault!

A Philadelphia man kidnaped a hotel elevator and ran it up and down 30 stories for a quarter of an hour . . . a Boston man named Donald Kelley listed himself in the telephone book as Donald Kelley Zzyzer so friends could find his number easily . . . and a Harvard freshman with writer's cramp turned in a 2,000-word theme on a phonograph record . . .

A Wichita, Kans., jury returned a verdict that a member of the jury was mentally incompetent . . . The inventors' congress announced a contraption to produce dimples . . . and a New York woman complained that her pocket was picked in a patrol wagon . . .

A Spokane, Wash., woman was discovered to have married six husbands without getting any divorces . . . The Madisonville, Tex., Sidewalk Cattlemen's Association adopted a rule that before a man could wear high-heel cowboy boots he had to own at least two head of cattle . . .

Bishop McKinstry Preaches to 500 At Cathedral

Nearly 500 persons heard the Right Rev. Arthur R. McKinstry, Bishop of Delaware, declare yesterday that "there is no way of transportation to a safe heaven."

He addressed an evensong service honoring the Canterbury Clubs of George Washington University and the University of Maryland held at the Washington Cathedral.

Taking for his topic "Man's Hunger for Salvation," Bishop McKinstry told the group: "The way of transportation is not Christ's way. His way is the way of transformation.

"Transformation of character through repentance and sacrifice is the only road that will answer the prayers of baffled, helpless humanity today."

Bishop James E. Freeman and Dr. C. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's Church, took part in the service of worship.

White House Policeman Dies

SERGT. ROLAND FORD, the crack shot of the Whjte House Police, who died yesterday in Mount Alto Hospital

Sergt. Ford, Of White House Police, Dies

Sergt. Roland G. Ford, the crack shot of the White House Police and "one of the best officers who ever served there," died of heart trouble in Mount Alto Hospital at 5 p. m. yesterday.

Capt. Herbert L. Marcey, of the White House Police, was with him when he died. It was Capt. Marcey who described Sergt. Ford as "one of the best," and recalled how several times the President had personally commended the sergeant.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow from the Chambers Funeral Parlors. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Last year, Capt. Marcey recalled, the President sent a congratulatory message to the sergeant and his pistol team, following a competition. Sergt. Ford held more than 200 medals and trophies. "And he was devoted to the President," the captain said.

Sergt. Ford was born November 10, 1896, in Independence County, Ark., the son of William P. Ford and Mrs. Tabitha E. (Ball) Ford. His mother formerly was of Loudoun County, Va., and was said to be distantly related to George Washington.

Sergt. Ford volunteered for service in the World War at Batesville, Ark., later joined the Marine Corps and upon discharge was appointed to the Metropolitan Police. This was on April 11, 1921. He was transferred to the White House Police on January 5, 1925, and promoted to the rank of sergeant on September 1, 1939. His death culminated a two-month illness.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Maude Love Ford; three children, Roland H. Ford, Margaret Ford and Nancy Lee Ford, of 1710 First Street Northeast; four brothers, Fonce Ford, of Arlington, member of the District Fire Department; Artie T. Ford, of Washington; Thurman Ford, of Sulphur Rock, Ark., and Ransom Ford, of St. Louis, and four sisters, Mrs. Clara Carpenter, of Williford, Ark.; Mrs. Delta Laman and Mrs. Lockie Woodyard, both of Cave City, Ark., and Mrs. Roxie Owens, of Sulphur Rock, Ark.

Md. Unit to Hear 'Bundles' Leader

Mrs. Wales Latham, New York, national president of Bundles for Britain, will address the executive board of the Montgomery County Branch tomorrow at 4 p. m. in the home of Mrs. E. Brooke Lee, Silver Spring, chairman of the county group.

Mrs. J. Russell McQueen, chairman of the Silver Spring, Md., committee, yesterday announced that her group will hold three benefits within the next month. She has appointed Mrs. Stewart Gayness, Mrs. Samuel Bledsoe and Mrs. Oliver Ragonnet in charge of a bridge party at Indian Spring Country Club.

Mrs. W. J. Bloomer and Mrs. William M. Rosson will direct a rummage sale of clothing that cannot be shipped to England. Mrs. Robert E. Funkhouser has been named chairman of a dance to be held in April. Tenative plans are under way for a theater party, Mrs. McQueen said.

Shenandoah Apple Festival To Be May 1, 2

Winchester, Va., March 9.—Members of the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival executive committee must have felt that spring was just around the corner when, in spite of a driving snow that blanketed this section, the committee set May 1-2 for the blossom fete.

Fixing the dates that far in advance was described by festival authorities as necessary to make final arrangements with "name" orchestras for the festival's dances.

Setting of the dates gave new impetus to festival preparations which have been under way here for a month.

In the grand feature parade division, highlight of the second day's activities, it has been planned to develop the theme of apple production, this community's biggest single industry.

Thirty-three schools and colleges have been invited to send princesses to the court of Queen Shenandoah XVIII and more than 25 schools have already accepted, with others still to be heard from.

Queen Shenandoah XVIII has not been named but announcement of her selection is expected in a few weeks.

Marylander Found Killed On Highway

By the Associated Press

Denton, Md., March 9.—The battered body of Wilbert Henry Anthony, 29, was found today on the Denton-Greensboro Road, near here, and Caroline County authorities and State police began an investigation, pending a possible autopsy.

State's Attorney Layman J. Redden refused to express an opinion on how Anthony, who lived on a farm near Denton with his parents, met death.

"I may have a statement later," he said, after conducting a day-long investigation with Sheriff William E. Andrew, Sergts. Gus Koste and Paul Randall, of the State police, and Dr. Dawson O. George, acting county medical examiner.

Physicians said Anthony's body was badly mangled, with his hip, back and leg broken, skull fractured and a deep head cut.

William Anthony said his son had gone out Saturday night with friends, and that a red handkerchief he carried was founded folded under his head.

The father also expressed the opinion the body "had been moved several feet" to where it was found about 7 a. m.

Dr. George and Dr. Jesse Fifer, of Ridgely, acting pathologist, examined the body, but made no report. Wilbert Anthony's twin brother, William, was struck and killed by a car on the same highway in 1934.

The dead man was given a physical examination for the draft last Thursday, and had been employed by a Denton fertilizer company.

Besides his parents, he is survived by six brothers, all of Denton, and four sisters. They are Robert, Preston, Paul, Lewis, Dawson and Stanley, and Mrs. Robert Jester and Mrs. Russell Gray, both of Federalsburg, Mrs. Charles Likens, of Lonaconing, and Virginia Anthony, Denton.

Severn Conceals Fate of 3 Boys

Annapolis, Md., March 9 (AP).—Two naval motor launches and a sub chaser were called in tonight after failure of all efforts during the day to find three boys who disappeared in the blizzard-swept Severn River late Friday.

It was expected the three Navy boats would resume the search tomorrow.

The boys who disappeared were Ned Chambers and Ray Cunningham, both 12, who pushed out in a leaky rowboat to try to recover a floating bench, and Jerry Almond, 18, who attempted to rescue them in another boat.

Don't Teach Wife Jiu Jitsu; Lessons May Bounce Back

Detroit, March 9 (AP).—Patrolman Stanley Westgate's wife mastered her husband's jiu jitsu lessons a little too well.

Today, Westgate, 36, a member of the Detroit police department, was in a hospital with a broken leg because of one of the "little woman's" demonstrations.

Westgate and his 114-pound wife, whom he taught the Oriental art six years ago, were in the midst of enlightening an audience of women on what to do if any ever met up with a purse snatcher or a "throat-choker."

Everything went well until the 190-pound patrolman grabbed his wife by the throat. Then—"she broke my grip, clamped on a three-quarter nelson and, with the firemen's lift, tossed me right off the platform."
